PARNELL'S NEW BILL

THE GOVERNMENT DETERMINED TO OPPOSE IT.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—Since the interview between Lord Hartington and Lord Salisbury all hope of a compromise between the Government and Mr. Parnell has been abandoned. Lord Randolph Churchill is disposed to bargain with Mr. Parnell on the basis of Government support of the single clause of Mr. Parnell's bill relating to the suspension of evictions. The majority of the Cabinet are opposed to any Irish legislation until next year. Lord Hartington insisted that there should be no tampering with the Parnell bill and promised Lord Salisbury the vote of the Unionists if the Government absolutely opposed the bill.

The Chamberlain section will not abandon the bill. Mr. Chamberlain, who has gone to the country, says he will take no part in the debate. He adheres to his determination to do nothing to embarrass the Government in dealing with Ireland.

Lord Randolph Churchill will offer Mr. Parnell facilities for the second reading of his bill on the 20th inst., on condition that the Parnellites offer no obstruction prior to the passing of the whole of the estimates. The Parnellites, aiming to retain control of the Government, insist upon the consideration of Mr. Parnell's bill before the estimates. The probable issue will be that Mr. Parnell will accept Lord Randolph's offer, knowing that the defeat of his bill is certain.

Mr Parnell has sent a draft of his measure to Mr. Gladstone. The first clause provides that purchasers may apply to the court to fix equitable rents; the second, that tenants whose rents were fixed a year ago may apply to the court for a revaluation, and the third, that the Court, pending decision on appeals, may suspend an ejectment on the payment of such proportion of the rent as the Court may decide to be proper. It is understood while parties that the debate will be short and that the House will adjourn on the 20th inst.

The Standard says Mr. Gladstone announced that he will not support Mr. Parnell's land bill.

EARTHQUAKE INCIDENTS.

A Dying Georgia Colored Woman Says the World Will Come to an End This Month.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 8.—In a negro hamlet in Liberty county last Monday a negress apparently died and her friends were sitting up with the corpse. While the wake was at its height the woman burst the glass in the coffin-lid and assumed a sitting posture. A stampede followed. She extricated herself from the coffin and said her friends that the end of the world was fixed for September 20, and that she would die at dawn. Her dream ceased as predicted, and on Tuesday night came the earthquake. The negroes of the entire neighborhood now look upon the dead woman as a prophet, and have spent the whole time since Tuesday night in religious observance in preparation for the expected day of judgment.

She Found Her Voice.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 8.—A strange incident of the earthquake is the recovery of the power of speech by Mamie Marius, daughter of a retired army officer. At the close of the war her father was put in charge of Monte Pulaski and Jackson. While at the former fort the daughter, then a bright, intelligent child, lost the attack of meningitis, which left her voiceless. During the excitement of the first earthquake shock she in her fright attempted to call her brothers. She was frightened when he heard her whisper his name. Since then she has gradually regained her voice, and now talks with perfect beauty. Physicians say the young lady's recovery was due to intense mental excitement.

A GOOD-BYE BANQUET.

Justin McCarthy Entertained in London Prior to His Departure for America.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—A farewell banquet was given to Justin McCarthy this evening prior to his departure for America. Mr. Parnell presided. In a speech Mr. Parnell said that Americans would welcome Mr. McCarthy as the foremost Irishman of the age, and as a most truthful exponent of the Irish question. Great Britain's first duty, he said, was to give effect to the principles upon which her own greatness was based, namely, rule of the people by the people and for the people; and also to the pleasant to guarantee fair play to the Protestant community in Ireland, though he doubted that there were many who feared that the Protestants would not have fair play. A majority of the Liberal party had supported the Irish Bill, and he hoped with weapons of legality and moderation to enable Ireland to take the position for which God had destined her. Mr. McCarthy, in reply, said he was not going to America on a political mission, but merely to pay a friendly visit.

THE WORKINGMEN OF ENGLAND.

Progressive Resolutions Passed by the Trades' Union Congress.

HULL, Eng., Sept. 8.—The British Trades' Union Congress to-day adopted resolutions declaring it to be the duty of the State to provide for the official election expenses of regular candidates for parliament, and that it is the duty of the State to pay salaries to members of the House of Commons. The congress also proposed that the workingmen of Great Britain and Ireland form a fund for such, pending government action on the subjects of the resolution, to enable candidates representing the industrial interests to enter contests for seats in the Commons and to support themselves while sitting in parliament. A labor electoral committee was formed.

A Fiendish Murder in Paris.

PARIS, Sept. 8.—A man named Blanc was recently released from prison where he had been confined for an attempt to murder his mistress. To-day Blanc forced his way to the woman's room and cut off her head, which he fastened with the long hair to one of the shutters in front of the house to the horror of passers-by. He then committed suicide with a revolver.

America Again Outsails England.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—The third and deciding race for the International Challenge Cup for canoes, offered by the New York Canoe Club, was sailed to-day over the course off Staten Island. The English and American representatives had each won one race, and a third was attempted on Monday, but failed because of a lack of wind. The course to-day was the same as those sailed previously, about four and a half miles, around three buoys, to be sailed over twice. The contestants were, Captain Edgcumbe, W. Baden-Powell, R.N.; Pearl, W. Steward, both English; and Lee, Jr., M. S. Vaux, New York Canoe Club. A strong southerly breeze was blowing, and all three contestants reached Baden-Powell and Vaux went around the course nip and tuck, the American gaining slightly in the reaches. Steward kept dropping behind constantly and was nowhere at the finish. Turning the last buoy opposite the Owl's Head Vaux had about ten lengths the best of it, and finished a winner by about the same distance.

THE HALDIMAND VICTORY.

The by-election for the Commons in Haldimand yesterday, resulted in the return of Mr. Colter, the Liberal candidate, by a majority of 194. Although the riding was carried in 1882 by the late member by a majority of 126, it was feared that the desperate efforts made by the Government party to "redeem" it, would succeed. The unfair advantage given by the Franchise Act; the Indian vote; the presence of all the available Tory leaders in the riding; the presence of hundreds of Tory heelers liberally supplied with money, and the frantic appeals to the worst passions of the people, were powerless to shake the loyalty of staunch old Haldimand to honest government and Liberal principles. The Tories made a dead set on the constituency, determined to carry it at whever cost, but everything went wrong. Sir John's personal presence was powerless; the presence of his ministers was of none effect; the bribery fund didn't bribe or fell short of its mark, in the pockets of middlemen; the enfranchised Indians evidently declined to use their first ballot to condone the outrages Sir John has visited upon their compatriots. The people condemned Sir John and his Government fifty per cent. more strongly than in 1882. All circumstances considered, the victory is one to be rejoiced over. What makes the result more bitter to the Government is that it is a foregaunt of the issue of the general elections. After this decided rebuff the Government will not venture to bring them on till they are compelled to do so.

THE Ottawa Free Press evidently knows what it is talking about—and will doubtless tell us when the time comes—when it says: "It is a question whether the Liberal press ought to be silent when a cabinet minister is incompetent to discharge his departmental duties for weeks at a time, when such incompetency is due to controllable causes." This is certainly a mild way of putting it, and if the cabinet minister referred to took his as mild, he wouldn't be reduced to incompetency for weeks at a time.

DALTON MCCARTHY, the Ontario leader of the Tory party, and the head of the Ontario Conservative Association, has declared war against the French Canadians. In a speech in Haldimand, he says: "We are called upon to consider this question—whether we will allow the Frenchmen to ride roughshod over the rest of the people of the Dominion? (Cheers.) That is the question, as I will prove to you, which you will have to settle by your votes in this contest." In other words Mr. McCarthy wants Ontario electors to declare that French Canadians must be suppressed, should they dare to condemn a notoriously corrupt and profligate Tory Government. When they dare exercise their franchise to protect their interests, bullets and bayonets are prescribed as the dose for them.

Keene.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

This community is deeply distressed over the very sudden death of W. W. Millar, Esq., who was in his usual health on Friday last, and went to Peterborough on Saturday, though not well. On Sunday the family doctor was called, and foreign medical skill was also procured, but all of no avail. He expired at half-past four on Wednesday morning, a victim of what, in all its symptoms, appeared to be cholera. He leaves a wife and seven children to know the full bitterness of the widow and fatherless. It is impossible for us to describe the kindly sympathy and deep sorrow of the whole country round his home, and in this locality generally. His active brain and business qualities, his almost wonderful capacity of looking after many interests, and yet in no way neglecting his home and domestic duties, made him one who will long be missed and deeply regretted. His family lose a tender husband and father, and the community loses a citizen whose place will not soon be supplied. He was the eldest son of the late James Millar, Esq., brother of Mr. John Miller, of Peterborough, and of James Millar, and Dr. Millar, of Keene, formerly.

Mr. Alex. Campbell Sr. of this village returned from the Old Country on Friday morning last, looking extremely well, and in good spirits. He was accompanied by his nephew Wm. Lang, Jr.—a young man of twenty or thereabouts—who may remain per manently.

Mr. James McCrea is expected here to spend the interval of time before going to the University as a medical student.

The junior Lacrosse team from this village went to Hastings on Tuesday to play a match game with the juniors of that town, and were easily beaten.

When you see a man with half a dozen umbrellas round the house don't call him a dude or accuse him of extravagance; remember that he is laying up something for a rainy day.—Lowell Citizen.

Arrangements have been completed for a picnic at Campbellstown on the 16th inst., in connection with the Sunday and day schools of this place. Among the features is a football match between Balsam Grove and our own clubs. The steamer Beaver has been engaged to run short trips at the pleasure of the passengers. No pains will be spared to entertain all who come for a day of social indulgence, merry society, and good cheer.

TRUSTEE ELECTED.

A meeting of the ratepayers of S.S. No. 8, Smith, was held in the school-house on Wednesday evening for the purpose of electing a trustee for the vacancy caused by Mr. D. McLean removing from the section. After a lively discussion Mr. M. Blewett was elected by acclamation for the remainder of the term, which ends on January 1st.

BOOMS.

The booms which have been put on by Mr. R. B. Rogers between here and Lakefield to divide the channel for the boats and logs will, we believe, give entire satisfaction as to their location and the use for which they are intended. Lumbermen say they will be able to run their logs from here to Lakefield in half the time it formerly took, and steamboat men will be saved much trouble and expense. Tourists and travellers may now rely on a quick passage between Lakefield and our beautiful back lakes. Mr. J. E. Kearney was foreman of the work of putting on the booms.

A Powerful Story.

A new illustrated story by T. Wemyss Reid, entitled "Five Million Pounds," will be continued next Friday in the EXAMINER. It is a powerful serial story. We have published none better, possibly none so good. It enchains the interest of the reader in the first lines and holds it close through every chapter and to the end. The leading characters are Mauleverer, with a fortune of five million pounds; Daisy, his niece, sweet and fair, good and brave; Cyril Fenton, her lover, who saves her from the gallows; and Dr. Branksome, a polished villain. The tale involves more than one mystery and a great tragedy, incidents to the old story, ever fresh and new, of a true and honest love. No serial has been printed in years that is likely to produce a greater sensation than this. Don't miss the opening chapters. The stories we are publishing are chosen with the greatest care, and include the masterpieces in current fiction. Be sure and get the DAILY EXAMINER of next Friday.

Dilke not in Canada.

London, Sept. 1.—No little surprise was occasioned here by the publication of a telegram from Montreal announcing the arrival in Canada of Sir Charles Dilke, the co-respondent in the famous Crawford divorce case. It was known that when he left here his destination was the South of France, where he proposed to spend considerable time in quiet retirement. Lady Dilke accompanied him. Sir Charles and Lady Dilke are still in France, and so far as known do not contemplate any immediate change of residence.

In the senior singles consolation race, Conley of the Boston Shawmuts beat O'Neil of the Boston Crescents in 10.41. In the senior four-oars, the Nautilus of Hamilton, Ont., won from the Hillsdales of Hillsdale, Mich., in 9.40½. In the consolation heat O'Neil of the Crescents defeated Ryan of the Toronto Baysides in 10.32½.

From the Buffalo Courier.

If but a fraction of what the public men and political press of Canada have had to say of their respective parties in the pending contest be true, public life in the Dominion must be infested with a sad set of blacklegs.

Gen. Buller's Mission.

LONDON, Sept. 8.—Gen. Buller reports County Kerry, Ireland, and the western portion of County Cork in a less serious state of lawlessness than he expected to find them in, although there is a widespread demoralization among the peasantry which will require an energetic and determined effort to correct. Gen. Buller adds that satisfactory progress is being made in the work of arresting the spread of demoralization, and that local sources of crime and disorder are being appreciably checked.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 29th, 1885.
GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two spring less trusses made in York State costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

The Cultivation of Licorice.

Consul Woodcock, of Catania, Sicily, says that there are two species of licorice plant in his consular district. The one sends a main root to the depth of from three to six feet, with but few lateral roots; the other does not sink so deep in the earth, but creeps beneath the surface at a depth of from six inches to two feet, the latter being most productive, and the most highly prized. It is stated that if the licorice plant were cultivated, instead of being allowed to grow wild, it would yield much larger results; but the Sicilians are of opinion that its culture will not pay, so they are satisfied by collecting it as produced by nature in its wild state. No use is made of the stem except for fuel. The licorice plant grows most luxuriantly in the valleys adjacent to streams of water; it is, however found among the foot hills of the mountains, but grows less luxuriantly there. It requires a moist soil, consisting of a clay loam; the climate must be warm, such as is adapted to the growth of oranges, lemons, and other semi-tropical fruits. It cannot endure frosts, or cold, high altitudes. The root continues to grow for four or five years, when it is considered in the best condition for gathering. The root will continue to grow for ten or twelve years longer, but it is not considered so rich in juice-yielding quality. The crop is gathered from the same ground once in four or five years, and on the average 100 pounds of the root produces sixteen pounds of licorice paste.

During the months of June, July, August, and September, and the first part of October, the root is not disturbed, for the reason that it is then in full vegetation, and for the further more important reason that the ground is dry and baked by the sun, and it is with much difficulty and great expense that it can then be dug. As soon as the autumn rains set in in sufficient quantity to saturate the ground, the root harvest commences. During the months above mentioned the manufacturies of licorice are idle, doing little or nothing in the way of manufacture. In Catania itself there are seven manufactories of licorice, which employ from twenty to forty hands each. When the roots are taken from the earth, they are bound in bundles and carried on the backs of mules from the fields to the factories, where they are laid by for a time to season. When the roots are sufficiently cured, men and women with hatchets cut them in pieces ranging from three to six inches in length. These are then plunged into a vat of water and thoroughly washed. They are then crushed in a mill of rude construction. It consists of two circular stones of lava, one in horizontal position, and the other, which is perpendicular, resting upon it. Through the center of the upper stone is an axle, to which is attached a mule, which revolves it slowly in a circle upon the lower stone. A workman with a wooden shovel is constantly employed in keeping the roots beneath the revolving stone. When the roots are sufficiently crushed, they are placed with water in kettles and boiled for twenty-four hours. They are then removed from the kettles and placed beneath a screw press, and all the juice, which is thoroughly pressed out, runs into a cistern beneath. This juice is pumped from the cistern and passed through a sieve into kettles and the boiling resumed. The sediment from the strainer is again pressed; the contents of the boiling kettles are a second time filtered. When boiled to the proper consistency, it is removed to a broad shallow kettle over a slow fire, where workmen, with spades, continue to stir it, until it becomes dense enough for paste; it is then removed and placed in wooden moulds of the size they wish the cakes, or worked by the workmen into little rolls or sticks. When cold and hard, the cakes are wrapped in paper and boxes for export. The little rolls or sticks of licorice are placed upon shelves to dry, and when they become perfectly dry and hard, they are packed in laurel leaves and boxes. In preparing the root for market, women, with knives, scrape off the bark, and then cut it into pieces of about half an inch in length, or as desired by the purchaser. These are then dried in the sun, and placed in bags for export.

Chicago hostess (to young lady visiting from Boston)—Now, Penelope, I suppose the first thing you will want to see is our magnificent art gallery? Penelope—Well, really, Aunt Julia, I suppose it is very fine, but do you know it occurred to me that I would like to visit one of your establishments where so many poor little innocent pigs are slaughtered every day.—N. Y. Sun.

Smith—I thought you told me that Brown had got along in the world so well that he had a carriage and pair? Jones—Well, I told you the truth. S.—You did, eh? Why, he is working as a laborer in the navy-yard. J.—Well, that is all right. A man that gets into the navy-yard is getting along in the world, and the carriage and pair I referred to were a baby-carriage and twins.—Boston Courier.

Missionary—Yes, my dear sir, the human frame is a wonderful piece of mechanism. Just see the power in the limbs, and then the capabilities of the brain. The brain, after all, is the best part of the man. Reformed cannibal—I never used to think much of it.—Tid-Bits.

WIT AND HUMOR.

It is the Washington Critic that thinks that an honest Alderman is the greatest work of God.

The notorious Chatham street in New York has been rechristened, the Aldermen having called it Park row at the request of one of their number who keeps a liquor saloon in the street.

It was a little Medford girl who, sent to bed earlier than she wanted to be the other night, was entirely heart-broken. "When you do this to me," she said, "I wish I'd never been made!" This is pessimism beginning early, to be sure. —Boston Record.

"Mush-and-milk parties" are very popular in religious circles in St. Louis. All present fasten bibs around their necks, and then proceed to eat as much mush-and-milk as they can. These parties are thought to be awfully funny by the good people of St. Louis.

Since James Parton made a plea in one of the monthly magazines for a newspaper without advertisements, he is in daily receipt of forty-seven copies of the Congressional Record. He is in a fair way of getting too much of what he wants.—Norristown Herald.

Aunt Pleasant, reading a composition which has been submitted to her by her 8-year-old niece, said: "Why, Eva, brick isn't spelled b-r-i-c-k-e." "O, auntie! I know that well enough, but I was in such a hurry to get the old thing done that I couldn't stop to leave that e off."—Harper's Bazar.

M. Pasteur received the other day a visit from a countryman who showed him his hand, which he said had been bitten by a mad beast. The doctor examined the wound. "Why," said he, "I do not find any marks of a dog's teeth here!" "O, it was not a dog which bit me. It was my wife, who got into a rage, and they told me that this was much more dangerous than the bite of a dog."—Paris Figaro.

The glaciers of the North Pacific coast are small but magnificent. The Muir is three miles long, with a perpendicular face of 400 feet, stretching like a frozen waterfall or gigantic dam entirely across the head of the glacier bay. Its breast is as blue as turquoise. At a distance it looks like a fillet rent from the azure sky and laid across the brow of the cliff. When the full blaze of the southwestern sun lights up its opalescence it gleams like the gates of the celestial city.

Oil from pine woods is now manufactured on a considerable scale at the south. The material is subjected to intense heat in coal retorts, and one cord of it is said to yield fifteen gallons of turpentine, eighty gallons of pine wood oil, fifty bushels of charcoal, 150 gallons of good vinegar, and a quantity of inflammable gas and asphaltum.

"Affliction sore long time he bore, Physicians were in vain."

But had he used Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," the greatest blood-purifier known, he might still be living. Forall scrofulous diseases this preparation is a sovereign and never failing remedy. All humors from a pimple to an ulcer yield to it. It will cure consumption which is a scrofulous disease of the lungs) if taken in time. All druggists have it. 6d56w36

A Youthful Bride's Disappointment.

A former merchant of Ingersoll became engaged to a 15-year old daughter of Richard Petrie, of that town, and the wedding day was appointed. The appointed hour arrived, so did the bridesmaids, minister, friends, etc., but the young man did not, and has not been heard from since.

Joy in Every Drop.

This may be truly said of Polson's Nerviline, the pain remedy of the age. It brings comfort to the weary sufferer when failure has attended the use of every known remedy. Nerviline is an absolute cure for all kinds of pain, internal, external, or local. Purchase a ten cent sample bottle and try this great remedy, Nerviline, nerve pain cure. Don't forget the name at any drug store. 6d56w36

John G. Saxe Dying.

John G. Saxe, the poet, is slowly dying at Albany. His nervous system has never recovered from the shock received in a Western railroad disaster in 1875, when he was rescued from a wrecked sleeper just in time to escape being burned to death.

Lacrosse Excursion.

A large number of excursionists went down the river on the Golden Eye, with the lacrosse boys this morning. Unfortunately, their amusement was dampened by the rain.

A Canoe Capsized by a Canine.

While a jolly canoist was enjoying a sail down the river last night he had a very unique and unpleasant upset. He was nearing the Little Lake at a fine rate, when his "dawg" became entangled in the ropes, a squall struck the sail, and over went the craft, canoist, dog and all. The sailor grasped his coat, in the pocket of which was a large sum of money, wiped his spectacles, and swam ashore, with the boat in tow.

Mr. Kearns' Lecture.

The lecture of Mr. W. J. Kearns, who passed three months in jail for breach of the Scott Act, on the subject of "The Scott Act and Honest Government," received the usual fate of lectures in Peterborough—there was a very small audience, and besides, the thread of his argument was broken by a fire alarm. He denounced the Dominion Government for passing such an act, and closed his address by stating that he intended introducing a measure into Parliament to supersede the Scott Act, to provide for the punishment of drunkenness and for the sale of pure liquors.

Settled in Town.

Mr. T. E. Bradburn, son of Mr. T. Bradburn, of town, and an old Peterborough boy, after the past ten years a prosperous merchant of Lindsay, has given up business in that burg, and on Tuesday, with his wife and family, moved to town, where he will reside permanently. He has made his home in the house lately occupied by Mrs. Sh w, on Stewart street. On Wednesday evening Mr. Bradburn was tendered a complimentary supper by the famous Lindsay curlers, of which club he was a leading ship. Mr. Bradburn's many friends in town will be pleased to hear of his return to the home of his youth.

Another Watch Stolen.

Late on Tuesday night John Reardon sat sleeping on the door step of Hall's Biscuit Works on Hunter Street. When he awoke from his nap he found that a silver watch and chain had been taken from his pocket. During Wednesday he heard that Michael Licet had the missing jewelry. He notified Chief Cooper of his loss and suspicion. The Chief arrested Licet and found the missing property on his person. Licet explained that he found the watch near the sidewalk in front of Hall's Biscuit Works and put it in his pocket. He did not know who the owner was and wore it. Licet was locked up for the night and appeared in court this morning. He was remanded till to-morrow.

Triple "A" Tactics.

It is expected that the Bowmanville cricketers will play against an Association team here on Saturday next.

A tennis meet will be held on the Association grounds this evening.

A number of the dramatically as well as athletically inclined young men of the P. A. A. A. propose getting up a dramatic entertainment. It is not yet known what the production will be. It is whispered that "Two days with the Sawbones," "The Boomerange Abroad," and "Love All; or Tennis Courting Under Difficulties" are being considered.

The junior cricketers are endeavoring to arrange a match with the Campbellford club for Saturday.

Slight Scorch at the Stove Works.

Wednesday evening about eight o'clock Mr. Jas. Macnamara, who lives on the opposite side of the street from the Stove Works, detects fire in the roof of the moulding shop in the neighborhood of the cupola. Mr. H. W. Watson was informed and the two set to work to put out the fire. They rushed the iron roofing with a crowbar and extinguished it with water carried by Mrs. Macnamara. But for their strenuous exertions, the fire would have been a more serious one. Mr. Watson sent his son to ring the ninth ward bell, and some time after the centre-plate alarm was sounded, the brigade turned out and took the steamer half way to the C. P. R. station when they were told the alarm was a false one and returned. The damage done thanks to the commendable exertions of Mr. engineer Macnamara and Mr. Watson was slight.

Prof. Tyndall is seriously ill from overwork.

Sad Drowning Accident.

Frederick Madill Jumps From a Boom Into the River and Stakes to Rise No More Alive—His Body Found in 15 Feet of Water an Hour Afterwards.

On Wednesday evening a sad drowning accident occurred near Goose Island, just above Mr. Hazlitt's mill, whereby Frederick Madill, a lad of about 20 years of age, employed by Hazlitt's mill, lost his life.

About 7.30 o'clock young Madill left the boarding house, telling a number of the men that he was going for a swim. He went to the shore opposite Goose Island, where he met a number of boys with whom he had been bathing on the previous night. He was the first to strip and going out along a boom to where the water was about four or five feet deep, he plunged into the river, feet first, and immediately

SANK OUT OF SIGHT.

The boys on the shore, the majority of whom were preparing to follow Madill's lead, did not think anything was wrong until he had been under water half a minute or more, when his companions, some of whom thought he could swim, and fearing that he had taken a cramp, called for assistance. A number of the mill men and several others who were in hearing distance, came to the rescue. Several plunged into the river, but the body was not recovered until an hour afterwards, when Mr. James Cranley found it in twelve feet of water, several yards from where he jumped in. A medical man was summoned and pronounced life extinct.

The body was taken to the mill boarding house, where it was prepared for burial.

A telegraph message was sent to Madill's brother in Lakefield who came down on the evening train, arriving in town about the time the body was recovered.

Young Madill, who came from Lakefield, had only worked in the mill since Friday last. It is not known whether he could swim or not, but several boys who were in bathing with him on the previous evening, say he could not swim a stroke. He was fearless in the water, and tried hard to learn how to stroke. It was thought he took a cramp when he jumped into the water, but it is likely he could not swim at all.

Riverdale Summer Resort.

A New Summer Sojourn for Peterborough Picnickers.

Almost everybody in town is familiar with the beautiful picnic resort called "Crawford's Grove." The public partiality for these fine grounds has led Mr. Crawford, the proprietor, to have them methodically laid out as a summer park, picnic grounds, and summer residence resort. A town engineer, Mr. Ramsey, has completed plans, which convert forty acres of river-fringed woodland and lea into a charming pleasure resort.

In addition to the river front, at the northern end of the park is a spring stream. This is to be deepened by throwing a dam across its mouth, and converted into a trout pond, which is already stocked with these representatives of finny luxury. In connection with this pond is to be placed an hydraulic ram with a head sufficient to raise the water nearly 50 feet to a reservoir, from which the whole park can be abundantly watered.

On the northern side of this pond there is space reserved for a large summer hotel, with about three acres for lawn, flowers, and shrubbery. Next, south of the fish pond is laid out an oval for a lawn tennis ground. Next, north of this is the cricket ground, about six acres in extent, and next north of that is the lacrosse field, of about the same size. Further south, and adjoining the lacrosse ground, is a plot of eight acres, dotted with clumps of trees, to be devoted to the building of summer cottages, for which it is admirably adapted. At the southernmost limit of the park are six acres of camping ground, beautifully wooded with thrifty undergrowth. This is reserved as a camping ground, and will accommodate a large number of dwellers in tents. To add to its attractiveness to sportsmen, a fish pond fed with spring water, will enable fishermen to keep their catches cool till they are ready to return home or to camp.

A system of drives, about a mile and a half in length, extends around the outside limits of the park and between the several divisions mentioned. These drives are to be bordered with shade trees. Altogether Riverdale Park is a place full of fine possibilities, the whole river front is available for boating and fishing purposes. There is an abundant supply of pure spring water for drinking, culinary and ornamental purposes. The camping ground gives ample space for those who delight in spending a few days under canvas.

The excellent opportunity for building summer cottages is a most important feature. Business men in town can domicile their families at the park, attend to their business by day and spend the evenings with their families, thus enjoying the delights of country life without neglecting business.

As a resort for picnics, its proximity to the town (about two miles) makes it most desirable, and in every way there is a prospect that, with proper management and a faithful carrying out of the plans prepared, Riverdale Park will become a popular and well-patronized summer resort.

Measuring by Our Yardstick.

No better proof can be given of the successful sales and large crowds of buyers which Carlon has attracted to the Bon Marche during the past month, than the strenuous efforts which have been made by other houses in town, to try and imitate him with "Cheap Sales" and "clearing out" advertisements. "Imitation," they say, "is the sincerest flattery," and the Bon Marche has much reason to feel flattered at the vain attempts to imitate its popular sales. The Bon Marche still leads in drawing crowds of buyers, and the secret of its success is, that every buyer is so satisfied with what they buy that they tell their neighbors and their neighbors come and purchase at once. Nothing can surpass the value that is still being offered in all classes of goods at the Bon Marche. And shoppers should remember this fact if they want the very best bargains in town.

Lacrosse Match.

The Riversides will play their return match with the Norwood club on Friday, 17th, on the Riverside Park Rink. Another win for the Riversides is predicted.

Orange Blossoms.

Interesting Reminiscences on the Altar of Hymen.

Wednesday was an orange blossom day in town, the interesting hymeneal sacrifices, rich with the perfume of the sacred bloom, being offered in different parts of the town, as related in the tale.

THE FIRST IN ORDER.

The residence of Mr. Joseph Huston, Stewart street, was the scene of one of these pleasant events, the occasion being the wedding of Miss Ida Huston, eldest daughter of Mr. Joseph Huston, to Mr. Thomas Beapon, of Winnipeg, formerly a resident of town. Miss Hattie Johnston and Miss Ada Higgon, sister of the bride, were the bridesmaids, while Mr. Robert Walton, of Rochester, and Mr. Martin Mowry, of Ashburnham, supported the groom. Rev. Mr. Davis officiated, tying the knot which time and eternity can't untie. Both the bride and groom are well known and highly thought of in and around town. The very numerous and elegant presents, mostly of silverware, made on the occasion, gave evidence of the high esteem in which they are held. Most conspicuous amongst these presents was a beautiful silver tea service from the trustees, choir, and a number of members of the Methodist church, in which church choir Miss Huston has been one of the principal sopranos for years; also a beautiful silver cake basket, and silver combination sugar bowl and spoon holder with spoons, from the groomsmen; a large handsome silver pitcher from Mrs. Brock of Kingston, and a silver covered cake basket from Mrs. Fair and family, of town, and a number of beautiful floral presents from friends in Rochester and town, were among the gifts. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the newly wedded couple, together with fifty guests, mostly relatives of the contracting parties, sat down to the wedding breakfast. The happy couple left on the 6.40 C.P.R. evening express for Toronto, accompanied by showers of shoes and rice, and the best wishes of their many friends.

THE SECOND.

Hardly inferior was also Wednesday with the ordeur of orange blossoms and sacrifice. At the residence of Mr. A. J. Jamieson, a Hymeneal altar was also erected and sacrifice offered. Miss Ida Greenwood, youngest daughter of Mr. Thomas Greenwood, of Port Hope, was joined in wedlocks to Mr. Thomas Diamond, of Cobourg. Rev. W. C. Bradshaw officiating. The bride was aided by Miss Cromer of Cobourg and the groom by Mr. Will Chambers of Cobourg. The bridal presents were handsome and numerous, indicative of the high esteem in which the popular bride was held. After partaking of the wedding breakfast the happy couple left on the G. T. R. evening express on their wedding trip.

The EXAMINER adds its congratulations to those of the many friends of the newly wedded couple.

The "British Empire" Overhauled.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—I notice an advertisement in your paper by a small life insurance company, i. e., the British Empire, headed "British Empire Ahead," giving five standard life policies and their results in the following companies: Mutual Life, New York, Standard, Equitable, and British Empire, respectively, showing, of course, the British Empire ahead.

As the Mutual Life was shown with the most unfavorable results, and being the only active competitor of the four mentioned companies in town, I presume this was done to cast reflection upon the old Mutual Life, as well as to show the great and wonderful results of policy No. 50,775 of the British Empire.

Now, sir, I can only speak for and defend the Mutual Life against this most daring, unscrupulous and high-handed deception, which I believe to be the most misleading and unfair comparison ever presented to the public by any life insurance company.

The object of the British Empire, of course, was to show that they pay a larger dividend to their policy-holders than the other companies mentioned; but it is a fact too well known in Canada, and even in our own town, that British life companies cannot (and especially the B. E.) compete with Canadian and American companies.

Why did they not give the age of each policy, age of the insured, and amount of annual premium etc., so that the public could decide upon the merit of each respective company? But this was purposely omitted in order to make it appear according to the heading "British Empire ahead."

Why was not the cash dividend of the Standard stated? Was it because they pay a larger dividend than the B. E?

No company can make a true comparison by taking the profits of any single year, but by taking a number of years together, as in most companies the profits increase from year to year but the British Empire pay no more in the second year than they do the first namely 21 per cent of premium on Life and 14 per cent on Endowment policies.

The following will throw a little light on the comparison made:—

Mutual Life Policy No. 108453, amount $1,000, age at issue 23 years, annual premium 1885 $16.91, Cash dividends $5.41; Bonus additions $13.00.

British Empire Policy No. 51,775, amount $1,000, age in issue 45 years, annual premium in 1886 $35.44, Cash dividends $7.50. Bonus additions $17.25. [The reader should understand that in all the life companies the older the insured is and the more Premiums paid the larger the dividend should be.]

It will thus be seen that the cash dividends paid by the British Empire was 21 per cent., while that of the Mutual Life was 32 per cent of the premiums paid; that the insured in the British Empire paid a premium of $18.53 more, or more than double that paid by the insured in the Mutual Life. Hence it will be seen that the British Empire told only half the tale, and this unscrupulously and falsely represented.

Was this a fair comparison, honourable to themselves and justice to the other companies? Most assuredly not.

We challenge the British Empire to show in these columns a fair example of any kind of policy in force from one to forty years, at any age. We will also make a fair comparison with them, then the public can decide which of the two is the better company.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I remain

Yours, etc.,
F. S. GRIST,
General Agent, Mutual Life, Peterborough.
Peterborough, Sept. 9th, 1886.

THE HALDIMAND VICTORY.

Majority for Colter 117.

The Frenchmen to Celebrate.

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.—At a meeting of the National Party chiefs to-day Mr. Prefontaine, M.P. for Chambly, was authorized to invite Dr. Colter, the newly elected member for Haldimand, to a banquet in Montreal, to be offered by French Canadians of the Province of Quebec in celebration of his glorious victory and as a demonstration against those who turned the national movement into a war of races.

AT PLAY ON THE RAIL.

A Nineteen Months' Old Child Mangled into Fragments.

BELLEVILLE, Sept. 9.—The 19 months'-old child of Mrs. McMullen of Campton was run over by an engine to-day in the Grand Trunk yard. She was in charge of her grandmother and was sitting on the rails when the locomotive struck her. Yard Foreman J. T. Robinson, who was on the engine, ran forward and had his hand extended to snatch the child from its perilous position, when the foot-board struck it. He turned his back, as he knew what must follow and did not want to witness the spectacle. One pilot wheel passed across the body of the child from the left shoulder to below the right arm. It was cut clean in two. The one wheel crossed it twice, as when the forward momentum of the engine was spent it backed up. The horrible sight turned strong men sick. The frantic grandmother embraced the mangled trunk, and a tram hand picked up and handed her the head and arm. She sat in the door rocking to and fro, evidently not aware of the true condition of the mangled corpse in her arms. At length she discovered the horrible truth, when her cries were heartrending.

DEGREES IN DIVINITY.

A Proposition that Three Colleges be Recognized as Having Power to Confer.

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.—At a meeting of the Provincial Synod to-day, Judge Armstrong of Montreal, gave notice of motion declaring that inasmuch as the newly elected clerical and lay secretaries were not delegates to the Synod their election was illegal. At twelve o'clock, the American delegation, composed of Bishop Harris of Michigan, Rev. Eugene Hoffman, New York, Rev. Mr. Converse, Boston, and Mr. R. M. Nelson, of Alabama, were introduced and warmly received in the lower house. The Metropolitan House of Bishops were also present. The Metropolitan Bishop of Fredericton and Rev. Mr. Langtry, Prolocutor of Synod, both extended a hearty welcome to the delegates. The Bishop of Michigan warmly replied.

At the afternoon session a notorial protest was read from the Montreal Diocesan Theological College, notifying the House of Bishops of the Synod that they would pass the proposed canon on degrees in divinity, of which notice had been given by the Bishop of Quebec, at the risk of being made liable for costs and damages incurred by said college by reason thereof. The canon in question proposed that inasmuch as there were already three universities in the ecclesiastical province of Canada, viz., King's College, Windsor, N.S.; Bishop's College, Lennoxville, and Trinity College, Toronto, for the conferring of degrees in divinity; it be ordered that no degrees be recognized by the Synod unless conferred by these universities, and that the Metropolitan petition the local legislatures not to empower any other college to confer such degrees. After some discussion the whole matter was left open till the next Synod.

The message of greeting adopted by the Methodist Conference at Toronto was read amid applause.

A resolution was introduced declaring that the synod would welcome legislation securing the members of the Church of England throughout the Dominion the principle of having their own school rates and receiving due assistance from the public funds, when other schools are so assisted, under regulations that would secure a degree of efficiency in secular subjects at least equal to that of other public schools, and that a committee be appointed to ascertain the feeling of the governments of the different provinces on the subject and report at the next synod. The discussion on the motion lasted till the synod rose.

GUARANTEE COMPANIES.

A Question of Importance Affecting their Liabilities for Absconders.

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.—A judgment of considerable importance to those seeking the services of guarantee companies was given to-day by Judge Taschereau in the case of Molson's Bank against the Guarantee Company of North America. During 1864 J. N. Wood, employed at the Brockville agency of the bank, became a defaulter, and his friends agreed to settle matters. Meantime he fled to the United States. The bank authorities did not give immediate notice to the Guarantee Company and they refused to make good the amount. The court held that the negotiations entered into by the bank had for their object a compromise condemned by law, and that the bank authorities in not giving immediate notice to the Guarantee Company had violated one of the essential conditions of the contract, as without the protection of such immediate notice these companies might as well close their doors. For all these reasons the action must be dismissed.

THE MURDER OF FARMER DUNLAP.

His Wife Suspected of Having Done the Deed.

OTTAWA, Sept. 9.—The mystery connected with the murder of Farmer Dunlap at Mink Lake, who was battered to death at his own door, and his body then dragged about seventy-five yards through long grass and thrown in the lake, still continues unsolved. It is said that Mrs. Dunlap, the wife of the murdered man, will be arrested on suspicion of knowing something about the murder of her husband as soon as she recovers from the attack of insanity which came upon her after the tragedy. The detectives who have been working the case have concluded that Dunlap may not have been murdered by a man, for although his head was badly battered his skull was not fractured in the slightest. He had not been very long married.

Heavy Liquor Fines in the North-west.

CALGARY, Sept. 9.—J. H. Cummings and H. S. McLeod, hotelkeepers, were fined $400 and costs each, and sentenced to six months imprisonment at hard labor, for selling liquor. Two others were sentenced to $300 and costs and a fifth for gambling to $50 and costs.

THE PRINCE AT PESTH

HUNGARIAN DEMONSTRATION IN ALEXANDER'S HONOR.

TURN SEVERIN, Sept. 9.—Prince Alexander, Stambuloff, Karaveloff and nearly all the Bulgarian ministers arrived here this morning in a yacht. Roumanian troops received the Prince at the landing and lined the route along which he passed to the railway station. Alexander took leave of his ministers and officers here. The farewell was very affecting. A Bulgarian aide de camp will accompany the Prince from here. He will leave this afternoon and proceed direct to Darmstadt.

The Prince at Pesth.

PESTH, Sept. 9.—The train bearing Prince Alexander made a brief stoppage here. An immense crowd had gathered at the railway station awaiting the Prince's arrival. Many members of the Hungarian nobility were present. The students of the university, carrying banners, marched to the station in a body. The Prince was accorded an enthusiastic reception.

Announced to the English Peers.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The Earl of Iddesleigh, Foreign Minister, stated in the House of Lords this afternoon that the Government had advices to the effect that Prince Alexander having notified himself that it would be impossible for him to remain his position as ruler of Bulgaria, had consented to a regency. "His manner of leaving Bulgaria," added Lord Iddesleigh, "was dignified and worthy of his reputation." In regard to the future of Bulgaria, the Earl said the Government could say nothing except that all new engagements must be made in accordance with the treaty of Berlin.

The Occupation of Bulgaria.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Sir J. Ferguson, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, stated in the House of Commons this evening that the Government had no reason to believe that the occupation of Bulgaria by any power would be inconsistent with treaty engagements. He declined to be more explicit in his statement.

The Porte Protests.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 9.—In its note to the Powers protesting against any foreign occupation of Bulgaria, the Porte refers to the representations of M. Stambuloff and M. Radoslavoff, made to the Ottoman Commissioner at Sofia with the object of obtaining, before Prince Alexander left, assurances from the Suzerain Court and Powers that there would be no foreign occupation of Bulgaria, nor any interference with the rights of Bulgarian independence, whose safe guarding was guaranteed by treaties. The Porte says it consents to Alexander's departure from Bulgaria, and has informed the Bulgarian Government that there will be no intervention so long as its legality is maintained.

At Lom Palanka.

LOM PALANKA, Sept. 9.—Yesterday when Prince Alexander arrived here on his way out of Bulgaria the streets were covered with triumphal arches. Everything was done to make the Prince feel that the populace wished to look upon his departure as transient. The Vice-President of the Assembly in his farewell address to the Prince, said Bulgarians would never forget that they owed him everything they had secured as a united nation and that they would continue to consider him as ruler, although he departed, and they hoped for his speedy return. The Prince said he was happy when the Bulgarians were content. He would be every ready to assist Bulgaria when she might be in need. "I hope to see you all soon again," he said in conclusion. School children strewed Prince Alexander's path through the city with flowers.

From a Russian Standpoint.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 9.—The St. Petersburg papers generally take the position that the present regency and ministry of Bulgaria contain elements of fresh complications. The Novoe Vremya says Prince Alexander appointed the regency without having first obtained the National Assembly's assent, which it contends was a breach of the Firnova constitution. Col. Mouvveloff, one of the regents appointed by the Prince, who commanded the loyal troops under the counter provisional Government after the recent coup d'etat, Novoe Vremya says, is not qualified for membership in the regency because he is not a member of the Bulgarian National Assembly. The Novoe Vremya fears the comedy of Prince Alexander's reelection to the Bulgarian throne will be played by the Sobranje. All the other St. Petersburg newspapers consider the Prince's departure from Bulgaria final. The Journal de St. Petersburg says: "Alexander's departure removes the chief difficulty in the settlement of Bulgarian affairs. Russia does not dream of lessening the independence she conquered for Bulgaria.

CONFERENCE OF IRISH BISHOPS.

They Unanimously Adopt the Parnellite Platform.

DUBLIN, Sept. 9.—The conference of Catholic bishops at Maynooth have adopted resolutions declaring that the Irish people appreciated Mr. Gladstone's efforts on behalf of Ireland, and that they still adhered to their demand for Home Rule and indignantly deny Tory assertions that if the Irish people were allowed to govern themselves in domestic affairs the Catholic majority would abuse the power conferred on the Irish Parliament and harass the Protestants of the country. The resolutions further declare that the troubles and disorder in both Ireland and Great Britain will not cease until Ireland's right to administer her own laws is recognized. Archbishops Walsh of Dublin, Croke of Cashel and MacEvilley of Tuam, and twenty-three bishops were present.

EVEN THE SOLDIERS REBEL.

England's Army Protests Against Being Employed in Cruel Evictions.

DUBLIN, Sept. 9.—Troops engaged in the Woodford evictions on their return to the barracks at Birr protested against the work of forcibly putting helpless, infirm and starving people out of shelter into the roadway, and declared they would in future refuse to perform such obnoxious duty. No effort on the part of their superior officers could quiet the determined indignation of the soldiers, twenty of whom were placed under arrest on a charge of mutiny.

A STRIKE IN THE STOVE TRADE.

Three Thousand Men Out in the City of Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 9.—In consequence of the failure of the stove manufacturers of this city and other places in the eastern part of the state to grant their employes an advance of 10 per cent. in wages, a general strike will occur in that trade to-morrow, involving about 3000 men, of whom from 1600 to 2000 have been employed in this city.

The Irish Land Commission.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—In the House of Lords the Earl of Leitrim moved that all leaseholders in Ireland have access to the land commission for the adjustment of rents. The Earl of Cadogan, Lord Privy Seal, replied for the Government that it was impossible at the present crisis to accept the resolution of the Earl of Leitrim, which was thereupon withdrawn without further debate.

LAND REFORM IN ENGLAND.

The Trades Union Congress Pronounces Upon It.

HULL, Sept. 9.—The Trades Union Congress to-day adopted a resolution declaring that a reform of the British land laws must include compulsory cultivation of waste land. A committee was appointed to prepare a bill for submission to parliament, embodying the points embraced in the resolution. The Congress also declared itself unable to approve of any schemes of emigration for relief of the poor and unemployed until land reform with the same object in view had first been tested and found ineffective.

Destructive Fire at Mitchell.

MITCHELL, Ont., Sept. 9.—Two frame stores owned by Mr Walter Thomson and occupied by James Bartlett, boots and shoes, and Jas. H. Winters, confectioner, also a frame store owned and occupied by Wm. Thorne, boots and shoes, were destroyed by fire early this morning. Thomson loses about $900, insured for $300 in the Mercantile of Waterloo; Bartlett on stock about $1200, insured for $400 in the Citizens of Montreal. Winters' loss is not known, insured for $300 in the Economical of Berlin. W. Thorne's loss on shop $300, no insurance.

A Tax on Canadians.

HAMILTON, Sept. 9.—Edward Meyer, the St. Louis horse buyer who pleaded guilty at the Police Court Wednesday morning of bringing $2000 stolen money into Canada, when asked if he had anything to say before sentence was passed on him this morning, said not a word. He was not represented by counsel, nor was anyone present for the prosecution, Mr. Maxwell, from whom the money was stolen, having returned to St. Louis. Meyer was sentenced to serve six months in Central Prison.

He had about three weeks ago sold some property and lived at Gould's Hotel. His neck proved to be broken and how he came to his death is still a mystery.

Hunted from Alaska.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—Dr. S. R. Haven has returned from a visit to Alaska. He says that at Juneau, Alaska, on Douglas Island, 37 Chinamen who were working for Senator Jones' Treadwell Gold Mine Co. were ordered away by a mob and sent out to sea in two small yachts. Their destination was Wrangel's Land, a twenty-five days' journey, and the only food they had on board was raw rice enough for two days. They have very likely perished.

THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The recent exhibition of the Horticultural Society was not, by any means, what it should have been; but the fault is not to be imputed to the directors. They have done their part nobly, and have shown the most commendable enterprise and energy, under most discouraging circumstances. Entirely public spirited in their motives, they have, as far as mere exhibition purposes go, weakened their capabilities in the interest of the public. As Mr. Roper, the president, remarked on Tuesday evening, the exhibition itself is not to be regarded as the measure of the society's success. The improvements made upon Court House Park have largely drained their resources, otherwise a more extended prize list would have formed an additional incentive to exhibitors. While the park improvements conduce so extensively to the public enjoyment, they have crippled the finances of the society, and prevented the annual exhibition from being the success it should have been. The society's work in developing the esthetic taste and love of the beautiful in the public, should receive more practical and general appreciation and support. The entries at the recent exhibition were confined to a some half a dozen principal exhibitors, and the result was that, while there was no fault to be found with the exhibits, there was a most disappointing meagreness as to quantity. This should not be. A town that supports two of the largest floral establishments in the province, and supports them well as far as mere patronage goes, should have made a far better showing than that of Tuesday. There is no lack of material for a magnificent exhibition—the lack is due to the indifferent unwillingness of our citizens to co-operate with the Society in its work. It is to be hoped that the public will seriously consider this matter, and decide, if from no other reason, out of pure gratitude to the Society for what it has done to promote the enjoyment of the public, to do all in its power to lend it a helping hand. It is worthy of the most cordial assistance. Let that be cheerfully given; let each one lend his aid, and next year's exhibition of the Society will be one of the many institutions of the town, of which we can be justly proud.

THE Race and Revenge party's attempt to "rope" in the Haldimand electors was a "dead" failure.

THE Montreal Witness says: "As can be judged by the Haldimand elections, the Riel cry is a total failure in Ontario.

IT is now almost certain that the nominations for the Quebec Legislature will be held on Oct. 5 and the polling on Oct. 12.

BALLOTS likely to fail, the Franchise Act not up to expectation, the Indians disgustingly independent as electors, and the general outlook gloomy, Sir John intends to fall back upon the repeal of the ballot system. It is asserted by a prominent Government supporter that a bill will be introduced next session, abolishing the ballot and re-introducing open voting. With the open vote Sir John hopes to be able to employ Government patronage, intimidation, and political terrorism to greater advantage than they can be used under the ballot. The Chieftain evidently realises that he will have to fight the coming general elections from the last ditch.

HALDIMAND has proven a hard field for the operations of the bribery brigade. In addition to the arrest of Edward Walsh, warrants have been issued against George Smith, Charles May and John Lindsay, for bribery in the interest of the Tory candidate. The actual money received by the parties is now in the possession of the Reform Committee. The results of the election show that not only is it impossible to depend on money as a Tory argument, but that the use of money has a bad effect on the parties that employ it.

THE result of the election in Haldimand had a very depressing effect on the members of the Government party at headquarters, Ottawa. They were confident of victory, and had prepared for a celebration. All day leading Conservatives were offering odds that their man would have over 100 majority, and telegrams received there from Tory workers in the county showed that every means were being resorted to to capture the county. The Tories are now greatly crestfallen, and charge Minister Thompson with being the Jonah of their party. It is also claimed by the Conservatives that most of the money appropriated from their corruption fund to carry the county, went into the pockets of middle-men.

[illegible] LADY HAMILTON.

press Sir William to hasten the Neapolitan troops to Toulon as much as possible, in order to guard the works surrounding that place. Lord Hood having great apprehensions that the French would force the passes. Before we introduce Captain Nelson to Lady Hamilton, and give him over to the perils of that seductive presence, let us take a glance at his personal appearance. The late King has thus described the hero as he had seen him in 1793, and ten years of labor and sickness had not improved the picture—

"I was a midshipman," said his majesty, "when I heard the Barfleur, lying in the Narrows, off Staten Island, and had the watch on deck, when Captain Nelson, of the Albermarle, came in his barge alongside, and appeared to be the merest boy of a captain I ever beheld; his dress was worthy of attention; he had on a full-laced uniform; his hair unpowdered hair was tied in a stiff Hessian tail of an extraordinary length; the old-fashioned flaps of his waistcoat added to the general quaintness of his figure, and produced an appearance which particularly attracted my notice, for I had never seen anything like it before, nor could I imagine who he was and what he came about. My doubts were, however, removed when Lord Hood introduced me to him. There was something irresistibly pleasing in his address and conversation, and an enthusiasm when speaking on professional subjects that showed he was no common bejag."

In due time Nelson reached Naples, and delivered his despatches to Sir William Hamilton. The deepest tragedies have often the quietest possible beginnings. The soldier on guard at Elsinore is the humble prologue to the dire catastrophe of the family of the Prince of Denmark.

"The King and the court," says one of Nelson's biographers, "were lavish in their praises of the English—'the saviours of Italy,' do they were called. The King paid Nelson the most marked attentions, and entrusted to him 'the handsomest letter that can be penned, in his own hand,' to Lord Hood, and offered 6000 troops to assist in the preservation of Toulon."

An account, written under Lady Hamilton's eye, of Sir William's first interview with Nelson, furnishes the following statement:

"Sir William, on returning home, after his first interview with Nelson, told Lady Hamilton that he was about to introduce to her a little man who could not boast of being very handsome, but who would become the greatest man that England ever produced. 'I know it from the very few words of conversation I have already had with him. I pronounce that he will one day astonish the world.'"

Nelson was introduced accordingly. His first impression of the beauty is briefly stated in a letter to his wife.

"Lady Hamilton," he writes, "has been wonderfully kind and good to Josiah (Mrs. Nelson's son by a former marriage). She is a young woman of amiable manners, and who does honor to the station to which she is raised."

In another day or two Nelson was on his way to rejoin the fleet, little dreaming of the toils into which he had already entered, and in the simplicity of his grand and noble nature never suspecting the possibility of falling into crime that should leave an ineffaceable blot upon a character which it was the ambition and glory of his life to render worthy of his country.

We have beheld Lady Hamilton under many aspects. From the date of her introduction to Nelson she presents herself in new and striking character. In Naples, in the midst of politics, surrounded by her countrymen who were fighting on the seas for the glory of their native land and for the peace of the world. Lady Hamilton was no longer ambitious to be renowned for accomplishments which she shared with the opera-dancer, and for qualities which, however dazzling they might be in fashionable saloons, could add nothing to the power of a queen's adviser and the chosen friends of mighty chiefs. The woman was never below the occasion. It was evidently a matter of indifference to her whether she was placed in circumstances to dance "the shawl dance" or to contribute to the successful issue of a great battle. In either case, her part was performed to perfection. Her talents were prodigious; her vanity and self-confidence quite as unbounded.

The character assumed by the Ambassador's wife at the period to which we refer, was one that could not fail to call forth the admiration of Nelson, and to win his regard. His magnificent egotism was flattered by her devotion to his country's flag, and by the impassioned earnestness with which she undertook any service conducive to its influence. As we have seen, it was only necessary for Lady Hamilton to attire herself in a "common piece of stuff," in order to furnish an appropriate representation of a Jewess or a Roman matron, a Penelope or an Aspasia. Her garment now is that of Britannia ruling the seas. Miss Stewart, in effigy upon our pennypieces, with a branch in one hand and a trident in the other, does not more emphatically picture the genius of our sea-girt island, than did Lady Hamilton represent the tutelary angel of all British sailors commissioned to bring down the pride of France, and to uphold the honor of England. There was no misunderstanding as to the relation. The sailors write to the lady upon matters of business, just as Romney wrote of her, when he informed his friend that the "greatest part of the summer" he would be engaged "in painting pictures from the divine lady," to whom he could give no other epithet, "for I think her superior to all womankind." The letters of bluff admirals and weather-beaten captains addressed to the divinity reveal an appreciation of her merits about which there can be no mistake. "I cannot," writes Captain Ball, "let slip this occasion to write a few lines to the best friend and patroness of the navy, and to assure you and Sir William Hamilton that I shall ever retain the most lively sense of your attention. I have brought upon myself a great deal of envy by showing the official order I received from you." Sir Thomas Troubridge, "a pattern of professional excellence, of undaunted valor, and of patriotic worth," on one occasion tells Lady Hamilton that "he begins to think she will spoil them all, and then we shall not be able to stay out for eight or nine months graining after all this attention." The great St. Vincent himself "sends ten thousand most grateful thanks to her ladyship for restoring the health of our valuable friend;" is sure "that Lady St. Vincent will be transported with your attention to her," and "has immediately obeyed her ladyship's commands respecting Tom Bowen, who is now Captain of D'Aguilles," and, "should her ladyship have any other protegee," Earl St. Vincent implores that he may not be spared. Mr. Diarseli has it that the secret of all success consists in being master of your subject. If ever woman was mistress of the art of bringing all men to her feet, Lady Hamilton is she. The valiant old tars who swept the seas that England might sail Empress of them all were helpless children in her hands.

Five years elapsed between the first and second meeting of Nelson and Lady Hamilton; but the former had passed a whole life in the interim. We saw him quitting Naples in 1793, after having delivered his despatches to Sir William Hamilton, plain Captain Nelson of the Agamemnon. He returned to the Neapolitan shores in 1798, with a title to the peerage, a famous commander, a proud conqueror, and followed in his course by loud and grateful acclamations. At Calvi, in 1794, he had conducted the siege, and lost an eye. In 1797, crying to his men whom he led to as desperate an assault as ever tempted bravely to the jaws of death, "Westminster Abbey or glorious victory!" he captured, as it were, with his own hand, the San Josef and San Nicholas at the immortal battle of St. Vincent. Two months afterwards he parted with his right arm at Teneriffe, and within a twelvemonth again he received a wound in the head almost at the moment of achieving the splendid and decisive victory of the Nile. At this crisis of his career, we saw, overflowing with honors, worshipped by his fellow-countrymen, laden with presents conferred upon him by every potentate interested in the peace of Europe, from the Russian Emperor to the Grand Signor, Nelson for the second time set foot in Naples, and saw his future mistress. His reception was a triumph. King and queen gave way to

CHAPTER IV.
THE GOLDEN HAWK.

My bedroom commanded a fine view of [illegible] and I looked out of my win-[illegible] morning, to see [illegible] incident [illegible] Mrs. Denville, the first thing that attracted my attention was a magnificent schooner yacht lying at anchor some two miles from the shore. It was the largest and most beautiful vessel of the kind I had ever seen, and I examined it with interest through a powerful field glass which I had in my room. There is no sight more attractive to the lover of the sea than a fine vessel, whose lines bear witness to her power of riding over the waves. What a Derby favorite is to the lover of horseflesh a yacht is to the sailor.

This, however, was no common yacht, and I wondered to myself to whom it belonged and whence it had come to delight the eyes of the people of Scarborough. Every so often, the attention of people on shore had already been drawn to the stately vessel in the bay, and small cobbles laden with curious sightseers were being rowed out to her.
Presently I saw one of the yacht's boats, a large gig, coming rapidly from the vessel to the shore, and through my glass I was able to perceive that in addition to her crew she carried three passengers—all men.

Such an event as the arrival of a yacht in the bay always furnishes food for gossip during the season at Scarborough, and many were the inquiries put forth at the breakfast table that morning with regard to the ownership of this magnificent schooner. It was not, however, till Harding made his appearance that any light was thrown upon the subject.

"Have your friend's boat?" he said to me, as he dropped into his usual chair by my side. "It does [illegible]dit to his taste them
I should have expected."

"And is that Mr. Maulever's yacht?" I asked, in question.

"Yes, so I am told. It is the Golden Hawk, which was built for the Duke of Calregorm just before he died. There isn't a finer boat afloat."

"And may I know how you learned all this?"
I said, feeling rather nettled at the fact that he should know so much more than I did of the affairs of my friends.

"Really enough, my good fellow! Did you not see the party from the yacht come up to the hotel—one tall and two short! A sailor came up with them, and I made it my business to ask him the name of the vessel and its owner."

"And the three gentlemen—where are they?"

"So far as I know," answered Harding,
"they are with Maulever."

Then, then, were the friends of whom Daisy had spoken to me. A sudden feeling of jealousy filled my heart. When the hour at which the millionaire and his niece usually made their appearance in the hall of the hotel—where they [illegible] found me in attendance—had arrived there were no signs of them. I waited with a lover's impatience, and during either to leave the hall or to go to Maulewerer's sitting room to make any inquiry about them. How slowly the minutes passed, and what a change seemed to have come over the whole scene since the previous day, when, at least, I had rejoiced in a monopoly of the friendship of the girl I loved!

Only a lover who has himself suffered from the pains of jealousy can enter into the mood which possessed me as I waited in that familiar hall, conscious of the fact that others knew why I was waiting, and perhaps rejoiced in my manifest discomfiture. At last—fully an hour after the usual time for their appearance—I heard a movement in the gallery above me that filled me with hope. Immediately afterward Mr. Mauleverer appeared descending the staircase between two gentlemen. One of these was a grim little man, very neatly dressed, with handsome, clean-cut features, and eyes that looked sharply round through the gold rimmed pince-nez which he wore. The other was a person of much sturdier build and rougher cast of countenance. Short in stature, he also [illegible]ge and stubby in shape, while the features were coarse and harsh.
He might have been a seafaring man, I thought, and I concluded that perhaps he was the captain of the Golden Hawk.

Maulewerer descended the staircase between two gentlemen.

Maulewerer was chatting with his friends with a brightness which I had not [illegible] [illegible] before. [illegible] my brief acquaintance with him, to be certain that [illegible]
[illegible] had there assumed [illegible] of [illegible] for the [illegible] of [illegible]
[illegible] and [illegible]. I [illegible] that Miss [illegible] in his new [illegible] the millionaire would have passed me unnoticed if I had not myself addressed him. For an instant he regarded me with his cold eyes fixed as though he had forgotten all [illegible] for a moment to [illegible] then greeted me with his usual kindly courtesy.

"I hope you have had a pleasant morning on the [illegible]," he said. He had no conception of how my morning had been spent. "Let me introduce my friend, Mr. Fenwyke." He indicated the gentleman with the pince-nez, who bowed distantly on hearing my name. The [illegible]-looking man whom I already felt prejudiced, bung back a foot or two, and Maulewerer made no reference to him. I could see, however, that the man was staring hard at me with anything but an amiable expression on his face.

"And Miss Stancliffe," I ventured to say—
"I hope she is well this morning."

"Oh, quite well, thank you; but she is occupied, owing to the arrival of our friends."
And then, with a pleasant bow, he went on, attended by his two companions.

I was vaguely conscious of the fact that when I had mentioned Daisy's name it was met only the rough-looking man with the hard and resolute face who had favored me with a searching stare. From behind the glittering pince-nez of Fenwyke a pair of keen eyes had at that moment been fixed upon me, and I marked the ridiculous inability to preserve an unmoved countenance. From which I was conscious that I suffered whenever Daisy was mentioned. Hence for ward
I felt I should, at least, be closely watched by all my fellow-guests with her.

Before I was [illegible] Sharp, beyond the power of words to describe it, was the pain which gnawed at my heart as I thought of her even at this moment engaged in confidential talk with this unknown friend. Was he old or young? Who was he? What was he? I shrank my head savagely upon the pavement of the hall as I asked myself these questions.

And even as I did so she appeared. I had only time to observe that her companion was unusually tall, and that she seemed to have caused the lambs of all the ages in —one of the most prominent features of our business—we again venture to present our Lady Friends with our views for the coming Fall and Winter.

DRESS GOODS being perhaps the most attractive item in the economy of every properly constituted Dry Goods establishment, we have this season devoted more than ordinary attention to that department. During the season, the demand for self colored goods will be very great; among the most popular will be

SERGE CLOTHS, HABIT CLOTHS,
OTTOMAN CLOTHS, NIGGER HEAD Do.,
TWEED EFFECTS,
PLAIDS and COMBINATIONS, in Checks and Stripes.

An excellent variety of TRIMMINGS AND BUTTONS TO MATCH.

MISS WINTER, our Milliner, has just returned from Toronto with the newest goods in Millinery, and will be glad to see all her old friends and as many new ones as possible.

West Ward School.

The following pupils have been promoted from Miss Aldrige's; to Miss Keele's room at the West Ward School:—Edith Fanning, Mary Irvine, Florence Derry, Sarah Pilling, Maud Labare, Annie Mary Brown, Mary Dillon, Harriet Whitney, Hilda Hodgeoon, Peter King, Louis Turnbull, John Jordan and Henry Froude.

Excursion From Belleville.

The Management Committee of the Belleville brass band is endeavoring to arrange for an excursion to Peterborough, on Monday, Sept. 27th, the date for the P. A. A. A. fall sports. It is probable satisfactory arrangements will be arrived at, and that hundreds of Bellevillians and their fine band will visit the town and see the sports on the 27th.

Triple "A" Topics.

Several of those who propose taking part in the fall sports contests are training for the coming events.

The tennis meet announced for last night was postponed, owing to the dampness of the courts.

The junior cricketers, not being able to get on a match, have taken to football.

From Far Away.

Mr. W. A. Sanderson has on view in his shop a number of interesting photographic views taken in and around Santa Fe, the oldest city in America. The views were sent to Mr. Sanderson by Mr. W. F. Dobbin, of Santa Fe, many years ago a resident of Peterborough. Among the pictures is one of Mr. Dobbin's palatial residence in the ancient and sublime city of the south, and of the oldest church in America.

New Grocery Store.

Mr. Harry Martin, has bought out the Grocery business of Mr. Wm. Craddock, Charlotte Street, and in future will carry on business in that stand. To the already well selected stock he has added a large and choice assortment of groceries, provisions, canned goods, teas, etc., which he offers to the public at lowest prices. By a careful attention to the wants of his customers, and no doubt Mr. Martin will be accorded a fair share of public patronage.

Complimentary.

The Hastings Star says: "Peterborough's lightning bill poster and advertising agent, Mr. E. C. Hill, was here on Thursday last painting the town red with mammoth illuminated posters announcing the Grand Central Exhibition in that town on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th of October. The bills were printed at the Review office, and would be a credit to any large city office, both in shading and typography. The prize lists are from the EXAMINER office, and for neatness of design are superior to the Toronto or Provincial prize lists."—Ahem!

An Involuntary Bath.

The Golden-Eye, when bringing the lacrosse excursion home last night, ran on a rock at "Yankee Bonnet," several miles down the river. The fireman of the steamer and Mr. McFadden launched a boat to pull the steamer off, and were being washed down the river by the current, when the fireman jumped, catching the railing of the steamer. He saved himself from a wetting, but in doing so upset the skiff, dipping McFadden into the drink. McFadden succeeded in grasping a guard pole near the paddle box, and by means of a rope was hauled on deck. He received careful attention on board the boat, and soon recovered from the effects of the bath.

Successful Church Social.

A garden party and social under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of St. Paul's Church was held at the residence of Mr. Geo. Stewart, river road, Otonabee, on Thursday evening. Notwithstanding the vagaries of the weather during the day and the threatening aspect in the evening, a large party assembled at the house, the majority of whom drove from town, without regard for mud or water. Covered vehicles were the order of the evening, going and coming from the social. The large and beautifully laid out lawn in front of Mr. Stewarts residence was gaily decorated with chinese lanterns, refreshment tables, flower girls and all the other accessories usually found at a well regulated garden party. A couple of hours were spent in social festivities, conversation, singing, etc., when the socialists separated, after having spent a happy and perhaps profitable evening. The drive home was presumably a pleasant and jolly one. Financially the social was a success.

Tit for Tat.

On Wednesday evening the Tories in town had their innings. Badding young members of the pinfeather politicians' Club mercilessly button-holed the Liberals, and exultingly gloated over the return of the Tory candidate in Haldimand election. The telegrams had got the matter mixed, and the correct report did not reach town till noon. Then the tables were turned with a vengeance, and the jubilant Tories of the night before were subjected to the same merciless roasting they had endeavoured to inflict. The reaction was pregnant; the sad fall from hope to despair, the utter waste of so much boodle, the failure of the revising barrister, the collapse of the Indian vote, the fruitless [illegible] of the reporters, the doleful augury of the lies of the general elections, all tended to crush the most optimistic young pinfeather. There were never so many Tories on the back streets of the town before.

The Riverside Excursion.

The excursion of the Riverside Lacrosse Club which took place yesterday to Idyl Wild, was a grand success notwithstanding the wet weather which threatened to spoil all the fun, but which it did not do. About two hundred and fifty persons enjoyed the sail down the river, they, while the rain was dancing on the hurricane deck above and all around them, dancing on the first deck utterly regardless of the shower. By the time the boat reached its destination the rain had ceased, but the moss was damp, and a general move was made for the dancing hall, where the many amusement was kept up all day. After dinner other amusements were resorted to and a very pleasant afternoon was spent. On the return trip dancing was again freely indulged in, while the sound of song was almost continuous, in going through the "Yankee Bonnett" the boat struck a substantial snag, which raised a little excitement, but it soon passed over. The excursionists arrived home about eight o'clock well tired but satisfied. The excursion was as large a success financially as it was otherwise.

The "British Empire" Overhauled.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—I notice an advertisement in your paper by a small life insurance company, i. e., the British Empire, headed "British Empire Ahead," giving five straight life policies and their results in the following companies: Mutual Life, New York, Standard, Equitable, and British Empire, respectively, showing, of course, the British Empire ahead.

As the Mutual Life was shown with the most unfavorable results, and being the only active competitor of the four mentioned companies in town, I presume this was done to cast reflection upon the old Mutual Life, as well as to show the great and wonderful results of policy No. 50,775 of the British Empire.

Now, sir, I can only speak for and defend the Mutual Life against this most daring, unscrupulous and high-handed deception, which I believe to be the most misleading and unfair comparison ever presented to the public by any life insurance company.

The object of the British Empire, of course, was to show that they pay a larger dividend to their policy-holders than the other companies mentioned; but it is a fact too well known in Canada, and even in our own town, that British life companies cannot (and especially the B. E.) compete with Canadian and American companies.

Why did they not give the age of each policy, age of the insured, and amount of annual premium etc., so that the public could decide upon the merit of each respective company? But this was purposely omitted in order to make it appear according to the heading "British Empire ahead."

Why was not the cash dividend of the Standard stated? Was it because they pay a larger dividend than the B. E?

No company can make a true comparison by taking the profits of any single year, but by taking a number of years together, as in most companies the profits increase from year to year but the British Empire pay no more in subsequent year than they do the first namely 21 per cent of premium on Life and 14 per cent on Endowment policies.

The following will throw a little light on the comparison made:—

Mutual Life Policy No. 106453, amount $1.000, age at issue 23 years, annual premium 1885 $16.91, Cash dividends $5.41½ Bonus additions $13.00.

British Empire Policy No. 50,775, amount $1.000, age at issue 45 years, annual premium in 1885 $35.44, Cash dividends $7.50, Bonus additions $17.25. [The reader should understand that in all the life companies the older the insured is and the more Premiums paid the larger the dividend should be.]

It will thus be seen that the cash dividends paid by the British Empire was 21 per cent., while that of the Mutual Life was 32 per cent of the premiums paid; that the insured in the British Empire paid a premium of $16 53 more, or more than double that paid by the insured in the Mutual Life. Hence it will be seen that the British Empire told only half the tale, and this unscrupulously and falsely represented.

Was this a fair comparison, honourable to themselves and justice to the other companies? Most assuredly not.

We challenge the British Empire to show in these columns a fair example of any kind of policy in force from one to forty years, at any age. We will also make a fair comparison with them, then the public can decide which of the two is the better company.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I remain

Yours, etc.,
F. S. GRIST,
General Agent, Mutual Life, Peterborough.

University Confederation Carried;

That in the Methodist General Conference Adopts Dr. Dewart's Amendment Affirming the Principle—Mr. Geo. A. Cox's Contribution to the Debate—The Resolutions Other.

The debate on the Confederation of the Colleges in the Methodist Conference concluded last night at midnight, with the adoption of the confederation scheme by a majority of 36. This decision is taken to mean the removal of the college to Toronto.

Following is Mr. Geo. A. Cox's speech on the subject:—

Mr. George Cox, of Peterborough, the Barner of Victoria University, followed. He had no doubt whatever, he said, as to the question of the site, as to the good faith of the Government, as to the good faith of Toronto University, and as to the permanency of the professoriate, and would not deal with any of these points. He was an advocate of Federation, not because he believed they would fall at Cobourg, for he believed they could still continue to do good work there; but he believed they could step on to a higher and broader platform by coming to Toronto, and thereby increase their means of doing good. He believed it would entail an expenditure of at least $450,000, if they came to Toronto, and the subscription that he intended to give would be based on the [illegible] that amount should be raised. Unless the Church could raise that sum, they had better not come to Toronto. He could understand that under which Victoria had so long laboured, had taken the courage out of Dr. Nelles and Dr. Burwash, when they had to contemplate a possible lack of funds in carrying out a policy of which they otherwise, as it appeared to him, approved. Dr. Burwash estimated that it would cost $300,000 to remain in Cobourg in proper position, and $600,000 to go to Hamilton, while it would cost $450,000 to come to Toronto. The question was, therefore, as to the possibility of their raising this sum of $450,000. He had much pleasure in having the authority to say from Mr. Wm. Gooderham that he would give $30,000. (Applause).

"Your time is up Brother Cox," said the chairman, "but I don't want to stop you while you go on in that way."

An extension of time was granted Mr. Cox, and continuing he elicited another burst of applause by adding that he also would give $30,000 towards the $450,000 said to be required for the establishment of the college in Toronto. If he could be assured that sufficient money could be raised to maintain the existence of Victoria at Cobourg as an independent university, his offer would hold good, but it would not hold good if the institution remained at Cobourg in its present condition, though he would still be willing, as he always had been, to do fairly by it. (Applause.)

Police Court.

The Charge against George German Dismissed, and a New Summons Directed to be Issued.

The attention of the Police Court this morning was occupied in considering the charge against George German for breach of the Scott Act.

Mr. W. H. Moore, counsel for the defendant, submitted that the information as amended was a new charge, entitling the defendant to be newly summoned. He held that Mr. Cochrane gave evidence only on the new charge. He considered that he was reserving his rights when he cross-examined Mr. Cochrane, with regard to the liquor found behind German's bar, as he cross-examined him under protest.

Mr. R. E. Wood, who appeared for the prosecution, held that Mr. Moore waived his right when he cross-examined Mr. Cochrane.

The Magistrate was of the same opinion, but not wishing to strain a point, dismissed the charge as laid on the original information, and directed a summons to be served on the new information.

THE WATCH CASE.

Michael Licot, charged by John Reardon with stealing a watch and chain from him, was arraigned before the court. He pleaded not guilty, and elected to be tried by the Magistrate.

The Magistrate remanded him till to-morrow for trial.

DISCUSSING MISSIONARY WORK.

Third Day's Proceedings of the Provincial Synod.

MONTREAL, Sept. 10.—At the meeting of the Provincial Synod to-day the discussion on the educational question was continued, when a committee was appointed to draw up a resolution embodying the views of the House. A committee was also appointed to reply to the greetings of the Methodist Conference.

The remainder of the day was taken up with discussing missionary work. The Synod resolved itself into a meeting of the domestic and foreign missionary society, with the Metropolitan in the chair. The report for the last three years showed the receipts for domestic missions to have been $36,507 and for foreign missions $16,453. The report was adopted, after which the election of a Board of Management was proceeded with, resulting as follows: The Bishops (ex-officio), Nova Scotia—Rev. F. Partridge, J. W. Wyld, Rev. J. R. Murray and W. S. Silver, Halifax. Quebec—Rev. M. M. Fothergill, Quebec; Judge Hemming, Drummondville; Rev. A. A. Vonhoffland and Mr. W. H. Carter, Quebec. Toronto—Rev. Canon Dumoulin, Hon. G. W. Allan, Rev. J. D. Cayley, A. H. Campbell, Toronto. Fredericton—Rev. Canon Brigstock, St. John; R. T. Church, Rothsay; Rev. Mr. Forsyth, St. John; H. Lee, Fredericton. Montreal—Very Rev. The latter gentleman suggested the formation of a missionary brotherhood who should be celibants in order to devote their whole energies to the work.

COURT SCENE AT OWEN SOUND.

A Barrister Ejected By the Magistrate and Chief of Police.

OWEN SOUND, Sept. 10.—As a trial was in progress in the Police Court, Samuel Platt, barrister, appearing for the defence, a dispute arose between the Police Magistrate and Mr. Platt, as to the manner in which a witness should be examined. After some words the Magistrate ordered Mr. Platt to leave the court, which he refused to do. He then ordered the Chief of Police to put him out, when the Chief told the Magistrate to put him out himself, which he proceeded to do, calling upon the Chief to assist him. Mr. Platt was forcibly ejected, and has entered an action against Mr. Spencer and the Chief, laying damages at $20,000. The Chief of Police has also entered an action against Mr. Spencer, the Police Magistrate, for grossly insulting language arising out of the case.

COL. GILDER'S JOURNEY.

The Intrepid Adventurer Starts for York Factory from Selkirk.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 10.—Col. Gilder started last evening for York Factory having been detained waiting for the Hudson Bay steamer up in which he sails to-day from Selkirk to Norway House. While here he purchased a fur outfit and a couple of wooden sleighs eighteen feet long and four wide. They are made entirely of wood and after the Siberian pattern. They are bound together with withes and will stand an enormous amount of rough usage. The colonel received every attention here from government and Hudson Bay officers.

Decision Against a Canadian Propeller.

BUFFALO, Sept. 10.—In the case of the Canadian propeller California, which transported passengers from Cleveland, O., to Windsor, Ont. where the voyage was temporarily broken but resumed on the same vessel and the passengers were carried to Chicago, Acting Attorney General Jenks holds that the vessel having made substantially a continuous voyage from Cleveland to Chicago is therefore subject to the penalty of $2 for each passengers transported under the law forbidding, under such penalty, the transportation of passengers in foreign vessels between American ports. Thus is settled an important point which was recently referred by the Secretary of the Treasury to the Attorney-General.

Interest increasing in Five Million Pounds

A POPULAR PRINCE.

ALEXANDER'S ENTHUSIASTICALLY GREETED AT VIENNA.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 10.—The Journal de St. Petersburg says Alexander's proclamation of departure contains mention of alleged Russian assurances given to him. For reasons useless to discuss Russia could not make an engagement with Prince Alexander. In view, however, of the party struggle in Bulgaria and the agitation of the public mind which the proclamation has caused, Russian agents in Bulgaria have been instructed to inform the Bulgarian people that Russia is disposed to exert her influence to establish party concord and restore quiet. Russia will not withhold her support from any legally constituted provisional government, guided by non-partisan interests and conducted for the general welfare. Russia is willing to apply herself to the task of removing dissension, from the painful consequences of which Bulgaria has already suffered too much. Russia hopes that the Bulgarian nation and her representatives will be able to appreciate this counsel and act accordingly.

Loyalty of the Bulgarian Army.

VIENNA, Sept. 10.—The Neue Freie Presse publishes a despatch from Sofia stating that the officers of the Bulgarian army stationed there met yesterday and adopted resolutions pledging themselves in fervent loyalty to Prince Alexander and expressing themselves as confident that he would return to Bulgaria. The major and two captains of the Pirdiff regiment supported by the soldiers of the regiment had joined in a plot to prevent Prince Alexander from leaving Bulgaria. The leaders in the conspiracy were placed under arrest, but were released after his departure.

The Fremdenblatt says: "Those newspapers which speak of incorporating Russia and Bulgaria reflect only Russia pan-Slavist aspirations. The insinuation that Austria would participate in any of the intrigues connected with the Bulgarian question, especially with that having for its object the re opening of question of annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina are wholly baseless.

The Prince's Popularity.

VIENNA, Sept. 10.—Crowds of people gave Prince Alexander an ovation here on his arrival and departure.

Prince Alexander's triumphal progress is almost without a parallel. At every village in Bulgaria through which he passed peasants were awaiting his coming, and he was everywhere greeted with enthusiasm. Similar scenes occurred on the Roumanian shore and in Austria.

After the Prince had departed from Reith a hostile demonstration was made before the Russian consulate and the police had to be summoned to disperse the crowd. At Presburg and other large places, large crowds were assembled to do honor to the Prince.

England's Attitude.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 10.—Viedmosti says Russia has still to deal with English intrigues and Battenbergism in Bulgaria.

The Novoe Vremya says: "Of all the signers of the Berlin treaty, England alone appears inclined to oppose Russia's Bulgarian policy. Russia must know whether England's intention is serious in order to prepare herself to take measures accordingly, as Russia will not be brought to a standstill by England's veto."

Russian Intrigues.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—A Berlin correspondent of the Times says the opinion gains ground that the Czar's action is due more to a personal than a political motive; and that he only wanted to avenge himself on Alexander.

There are no signs that Austria intends to oppose the further extension of Russian influence in Bulgaria. This decision is said to be due to the Hungarian agitation in favor of resisting Russia.

Prince Alexander, in a interview yesterday, said he would have to remain quiet for three months. He would simply keep his lips closed and await the course of events. Germany, Austria and Russia, he said, had forbidden him to execute the plotters against him, thus depriving him of the very essence of power, and abdication was the only honorable mode of escape from such a position.

The military authorities have ordered the release of all who were arrested for taking part in the revolution.

The opposition in the Sobranje intend to protest against the regency on the ground that it was illegally appointed.

Russia has offered to guarantee a Bulgarian loan of 10,000,000 roubles.

At Home With His Father.

DARMSTADT, Sept. 10.—Prince Alexander has arrived here. He was received by the secretary of the English legation and the burgomaster, and at once proceeded to Jugenheim, his father's residence.

Austria Remonstrates.

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—The Tageblatt says the Austrian Government has sent a diplomatic note to St. Petersburg remonstrating against the sending of any Russian official to Bulgaria.

It is reported that Prince Henry of Battenberg, who is on his way to Darmsdat, brings with him a letter from Queen Victoria, inviting Prince Alexander to visit Balmoral.

A MYSTERIOUS CORPSE.

Body-snatchers Believed to Have Been at Work in Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Sept. 10.—Early this morning some men in a boat on the bay saw three men and a woman in a boat rowing around in a suspicious manner. One of them said the woman looked as though she might be dead. The strange men seemed to be rowing from the cemetery at Rock Bay, and disappeared up the Desjardines canal toward the Dundas marsh. At noon Mrs. Pauline, an aged woman, went down to the marsh near the canal to fish, and says she there saw the body of a young woman floating in the water. She was so unnerved that she immediately returned home and did not recover for some time, when she notified the city police. A search party has been at work all afternoon and evening looking for the body, but without success. Search will be resumed to-morrow.

THE LATEST SEIZURE.

Particulars of the Capture of the Schooner Pearl Nelson at Arichat, C.B.

HALIFAX, Sept. 10.—An Arichat despatch to-night gives details of the seizure of the American schooner Pearl Nelson. She arrived from Grand Banks on Tuesday night, and Captain Kemp permitted eleven of his crew, belonging near Arichat, to land about midnight and visit their families. A customs officer learned that fact and visited the vessel early in the morning, but Captain Kemp had then gone ashore to report. The skipper admitted that the crew had landed during the night with his knowledge and the vessel was thereupon detained but subsequently released on depositing $200, half the usual fine.

AN IMPORTANT RAILWAY DEAL.

The Leasing Disabled.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The steamer Leasing from Hamburg for New York has been towed into Queenstown. She lost her propeller. The accident to the Leasing occurred yesterday morning in latitude 51 north, longitude 11 west. A strong gale was blowing, and there was a tremendous head storm. The sails were set and the vessel ran before the gale into Queenstown. The steamer Republic, which leaves Queenstown to-day, will take the Leasing's mails. The passengers will remain on the Leasing and proceed to New York with her after a new propeller has arrived from Liverpool for Glasgow.

HOW IT STRIKES THEM UP THERE.

According to the Conservative organs, Sir John's journey through the North-West has been an improvement on a royal progress—has been a triumphal procession. The crafty chieftain was at his blandest, and in the distribution of taffy was a dangerous competitor for a wholesale confectionery establishment. But the people of the North-West saw through his "make up," and estimated him at his true worth. This is what a Winnipeg correspondent has to say on the subject:—The agony is over! Old Tecumseh has come and gone. It is a great pity his visit was not made earlier in the season; possibly it might have brought rain and accompanying blessings with it. As it is nothing, (so far) in the way of gratuitous mercies has followed in the wake of the "Great Chief." But who knows what may happen after such a time of laudatory exercises? Bible story tells us of a certain king who was destroyed by worms after a self-glorifying season. Sir John's speech from beginning to end was what I have done for the country. Just think of what it would have been, only for me. Look at the railroad I have given you, the magnificent prospect before you, all "my policy." Of course it pleased him to think that all this great good had been brought about by him. At the same time very few believed anything he said. As Premier of Canada, he was received right royally; as a crafty, designing politician, he was thoroughly understood. Manitoba has not been checked; with all the heavy burdens she still makes progress.

Well sigh all that could happen a young country has happened, and we survive. Ever since the present Government came into power it is a notorious fact that all the scalawags and political dead-beats of the Tory party have been packed off with a "God bless you" to the Northwest. Such men, with such records, shaping the destiny of a country like this! What can be expected? To-day in this city how many homes are desolate! Go any day to St. John's Cemetery, and look at that row of graves, that weeping mother and sister, and then take a pencil and write across the scene: This is through Tory misrule. Go to the valley of the Saskatchewan and find what has occurred there—how many previously loyal men have been tortured into rebellion, have been shot down as traitors and hounded to the death, and all this too, through Tory rule. Surely the day is not distant when this sort of thing will be remedied?

As to sugar. At this time of the year—the preserving season—sugar is an important item to the housewife, and she is deeply interested in making all the saving possible. Any information on the subject will be of interest to her. A gentleman of Hamilton just returned from the old country, brought with him a sample of sugar, purchased in Dublin for 4 cents per pound—the current retail rate. It is a clear, white sugar, in large crystals, very sweet and pleasant. Now, in the course of the year, the Government reports tell us, we Canadians use one hundred and seventy-five million pounds of refined sugar. This costs the consumers (estimating ¼ cent per pound for wholesale and retail profit and cost of handling) the enormous sum of $11,375,000, or $4,375,000 more than it would cost at the old country figures, that is, every man, woman and child in the Dominion contributes one dollar towards the maintenance of the National Policy, without any corresponding advantage. It is claimed that to off-set this cost, the refineries give employment. The sugar refineries of Canada give employment to about 350 laborers, at from $1 to $1.25 per day. The enormous profits over and above the wages earned, as well as the taxes themselves, come out of the pockets of the taxpayers, and the big balance over the wages go into the pockets of the refiners and the Government coffers, to be paid out, in due course, in the shape of "extras" to contractors, who contribute to the corruption fund to "redeem" such ridings as Haldimand.

THE electors of Haldimand don't like the taste of Sir John's N. P. sugar enough to take kindly to the other kind of "sugar" tendered by the bribery brigade, and therefore the boodle was wasted.

A Delicate Attention.

A young doctor, having just bought a practice in the suburbs, was waited on by a gentleman unexceptionally clad. "Doctor," said the visitor, "would it be agreeable to you to renew the agreement your predecessor made with me? I gave so much for every customer he sent me." "Ah, yes are the chemist." "No, I am the undertaker."

MARSHALL PIGGOTT'S MURDER.

The Trial of Havelock Smith Very Nearly Finished.

ST. THOMAS, Sept. 9.—The trial of Havelock Smith for the murder of Marshall Piggott in November, 1884, has occupied the attention of the assizes for the last seven days, is now drawing to a close and considerable interest is taken therein. The evidence was all in last night when the court adjourned. This morning the court room was crowded to excess as soon as it opened. Colin MacDougall, Q.C., addressed the jury for three hours on behalf of the prisoner. Mr. Idington, Q.C., on behalf of the crown, laid the facts of the case before the jury in an able address of five hours' duration. The court then adjourned.

Camp Life at Niagara.

NIAGARA, Sept. 9.—The camp is now nicely settled down. The 12th Battalion have been at the targets all day, and the 34th go to-morrow and so on, each battalion taking a day. The men are slowly improving in their drill; they practised, extending order this afternoon. Col. Otter, D.A.G., inspected the arms and accoutrements of the 34th this afternoon and found great fault with them. He is very severe in regard to this, blaming the captains of companies who are held responsible. The artillery are getting along much better than the infantry. The Hamilton F. B. have been fortunate enough to secure the services of Sergt. Curley, late of B Battery, who is acting sergt.-major for them. The weather has turned delightful, a pleasant change from the heat of the last two days.

Wholesale Slaughter of Lambs.

FERGUS, Sept. 9.—Joseph Thompson of Upper Nichol was driving 160 lambs which he had collected in Luther, and when near Fiercey's Crossing he heard a train whistle: Alma, and concluded the evening mail had passed. The lambs were as innocent of approaching danger as their owner, and walked on the crossing. Just at this moment the evening train came thundering along, ran into the middle of the flock, and killed fifty-two lambs. Mr. Thomson's loss is $220.

A Seizure That is Hard.

HALIFAX, N.S., Sept. 9.—The Provincetown, Mass., schooner Pearl Nelson was seized at Arichat yesterday for violating the Customs Law by communicating with the shore before entering at customs. The vessel was afterward released on deposit of $400. It is said the captain put in to report the drowning of one of his sailors, whose family lived at Arichat.

Sending Aid to Charleston.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—At a meeting of Aldermen to-day Mr. Lusk read a cablegram from the Mayor of Charleston in which the latter said that the earthquake had left 5000 persons in Charleston in urgent need of assistance. From the Mansion House, Alderman Lusk in behalf of the Lord Mayor issued an appeal to the benevolent public for aid for the Charleston sufferers.

Misappropriation of National League Funds.

DUBLIN, Sept. 9.—Mr. Louden, chairman of the Westport board of guardians, formerly a prominent member of the National League, accuses the League of investing American donations instead of using the money to help evicted tenants. He says the League has shamefully rejected appeals for Galway and Mayo tenants, saying they were only fit for emigration.

Ashore on Sandy Hook Beach.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The excursion steamer Empire State, with about 800 passengers on board, went ashore during a dense fog at 7.30 o'clock to-night on Sandy Hook beach, about half-way between life saving stations Nos. 1 and 2. The crews of the stations, with the steamer's boats, landed all the passengers in safety. Assistance was sent for to get the steamer off.

True Bill Against the "Clerk."

MONTREAL, Sept. 10.—Complaints having been made in the newspapers that a gambling machine was in operation in the establishment of Mr. Corderly, broker, known as the "Commercial Grain and Stock Exchange of Chicago," an information was laid before the Police Magistrate. The Grand Jury found a true bill against Cordingly on the charge of keeping a gambling house and he was arraigned in the Court of Queen's Bench yesterday. The trial will take place next week.

A Young Widow's Desperate Suicide.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Mrs. Frank Comfex, a widow 25 years old, made a desperate and perhaps successful attempt this afternoon to end the lives of her two children and herself by corrosive sublimate. When found the woman was conscious but resisted any attempt to save her life and soon died. The little ones are still alive.

A Lady Balloonist's Terrible Experience.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Sept. 10.—Miss Lulu Bates, of Cincinnati, made an ascension in a gas balloon from the fair grounds to-day and came near losing her life. When five miles north and half a mile above the earth she attempted to descend. The grappling hook caught, but the anchorage was broken by a strong wind which carried her among some trees, where the balloon was torn. The hooks gave way again and she shot up 300 feet, when the balloon suddenly burst and the bodies descended like lightning. She had the presence of mind to brace herself firmly against the top of the basket, and thus saved her life. She was badly jarred, however.

NELSON-LADY HAMILTON.

mate, and the puppet powers that be very apt to receive those whom their rulers deem worthy of enthusiastic welcome.

Lady Hamilton in the meanwhile had not been idle. In her peculiar sphere she had labored, so to speak, hand-in-hand with the hero and contributed not a little to the success of his movements, and the consequent splendor of his renown. From the moment she undertook the cause of the British navy, she gave her whole soul to the work. Her nature did not permit her to leave one stone unturned in order to reach her end, and what her will suggested she had art enough to compass. She had been but a short time at Naples before it was asserted that she had contrived to "debourbonize the whole Royal family, and to make them all English." This was but clearing the field for subsequent operations. A single instance of her unremitting zeal and daring patriotism speaks for a thousand. One morning Lady Hamilton received intelligence that a courier had brought to the King of Naples a private letter from the King of Spain. What were its contents? Lady Hamilton could not guess, but she was resolved to ascertain. By the aid of the Queen the document was stolen from the King, transcribed by the ambassador's wife, and then quietly deposited again in the King's cabinet or waistcoat pocket. The letter had been worth the stealing. It announced the King's determination "to withdraw from the coalition into which he had entered," and to join the French against England. The vigilant woman lost not a moment. Sir William Hamilton lay dangerously ill; but taking counsel of herself, she at once despatched a copy of the declaration to Lord Grenville, the Minister in England, and from her own private purse, paid £400 in order to insure the delivery of the letter into his lordship's hands.

In June, 1798, Nelson, as all acquainted with the history of those times will vividly remember, was in search of the French fleet. How he discovered it at Alexandria towards the end of July, and what havoc in the course of twelve hours he played with it on the 1st of August, no Englishman is ever likely to forget. But there are incidents connected with this wonderful pursuit, and this noble victory, with which our readers are perhaps not so familiar. They belong rather to the history of Lady Hamilton than to that of Nelson, yet how potently do they affect the character and fate of both.

Sir William and Lady Hamilton were aroused from their slumbers one morning in the aforesaid June by the arrival of Captain Troubridge, with letters from Sir Horatio Nelson requesting that the ambassador would procure him permission to enter with his fleet into Naples, or any of the Sicilian ports, water, &c., as otherwise he must run for Gibraltar, being in urgent want, and that consequently he would be obliged to give over all further pursuit of the French fleet, which he had missed at Egypt, on account of their having put into Malta. It was much easier for Sir Horatio to make the request than for the ambassador to comply with it. At that very time Naples was at peace with France, a French ambassador was resident in the Neapolitan capital, and Ferdinand had stipulated with France, that no more than two English ships of war should enter into any of the Neapolitan or Sicilian ports. What was to be done? Sir William Hamilton did the best he could. He jumped out of bed, hastened to Sir John Acton, Ferdinand's prime minister, who convened a council immediately, at which the King himself was present. The council sat down to consider Sir Horatio's demand at half-past six o'clock, and took one hour and a half exactly to come to a determination, for they did not rise until eight. Captain Troubridge accompanied Sir William to his residence after the council had broken up, but Lady Hamilton had already gathered from the countenances of the King and Sir John Acton the dismal confession that Naples would not break with France—that the fleet of Nelson could receive no help. We are reaching a point in the narrative at which the craft of the penman fails him, and the superiority of the painter becomes strikingly manifest. Imagine the vexation of the disappointed ambassador, picture to yourself the bitter regret and downcast looks of the faithful Troubridge, and then behold, close to them both, a form lovely as an angel's, a face beaming with the animation of triumph, and the ecstacy of an irrepressible delight—observe her hand trembling with the consciousness of the precious treasure it grasps, and then see her waving high up exultingly in the air the order which the council had refused, and the King himself could not obtain. Dr. Budd's nursery maid had positively in her possession the permission for which Nelson had petitioned in vain, and without which it was impossible satisfactorily to carry on the war. Oh, how the sorceress must have chuckled when she saw King, ministers and counsellors, all issuing from their solemn consultations with their lugubrious visages indicating helplessness, inability and unutterable disgust!

We have had occasion to observe that the King of Naples was a fool, and his Queen very much the reverse. This was unfortunate enough for his Majesty; but, what was worse still, his loving people were cognisant of the fact. The King certainly commanded in his dominions; but his wife was obeyed. Who knew this better than Lady Hamilton? That very clever lady suffered Sir William to wake up Sir John Acton, to get the king out of his bed, to cause the council to be summoned, and when all was done, and the wise men were fully engaged in discussion, she herself quietly slipped into the Queen's bedchamber and got up a little council of her own. The reader bears in mind the consummate ability of this actress. He has been told that Siddons could not be more tragic, O'Neil not more pathetic; and he has seen how exquisitely she performed in the presence of her guardian protector, when that gentleman found fault with her imprudence, and she in suitable costume begged leave to be dismissed from his roof. Domestic drama in the apartment of majesty gave place to classic tragedy. Not a moment was to be lost, and Lady Hamilton came at once to the catastrophe. In the most passionate manner she threw herself upon her knees, and told the Queen that the fate of the Two Sicilies now depended upon her resolution; the council were sitting; let them decide upon negative or half measures, and the family of Ferdinand was doomed. The great French force must be followed; it could not be pursued unless the English fleet found refreshment in the Sicilian ports; and if allowed to go free, the peril, not to England, but to Naples, could not be overrated. The terrified Queen became alive to the danger of the situation, but she had faith in the King then sitting in council, and was sure he would provide for the emergency. He might, replied the petitioner, or he might not; and, if not, who could reflect with patience upon the fate that threatened Naples and the royal family? Her Majesty, with a stroke of the pen, could be her own deliverer. Why hesitate? Her sign-manual was respected throughout the king's dominions; a line, and her country, her husband, and his crown were rescued from destruction. No doubt the word was suited to the action, and the action to the word; pen, ink and paper were in the room; Lady Hamilton dictated, and the Queen with her own right hand directed "all governors of the two Sicilies to receive with hospitality the British fleet, to water, victual, and aid them." Lady Hamilton inclosed that order to Nelson, and bade him commit the Queen no further than the glory and service of England required. Nelson answered that if he gained a battle it should be called her's and the Queen's, for to them alone would his country be indebted for the victory. He did gain a battle, and it was that of the memorable Nile; had his fleet not been furnished with the necessaries of life at Syracuse, the battle would not have been fought. It was for the country to remember that fact. Against the faults of Lady Hamilton moralists cannot too strongly inveigh; society for its own protection cannot too emphatically protest; but, had Lady Hamilton been the most degraded of her kind, England was bound not to forget this great and unparalleled service. How she did forget we shall presently blush to read.

FIVE MILLION POUNDS.

By T. WEMYSS REID.

"We are going aboard the yacht for luncheon," replied the doctor. "Miss Standish has never been aboard the boat yet, and she is naturally anxious to see it. By the way, Daisy, why should we not ask Mr. Fenson to favor us with his company? I daresay he has nothing better to do this morning, and if he is interested in yachting he will certainly be pleased with the Golden Hawk."

There is no need to say with what joyous eagerness I responded to the invitation. What puzzled me, however, was the way in which it was received by Daisy. She knit her brows for a moment as though trying to solve some knotty problem in her own mind. And then her face grew clear again, and without a word she went forward by the side of Branksome.

We found that the gig of the yacht was waiting for us at the landing stage. Mr. Maulever and his two companions had gone on board in one of the ordinary fishing boats, leaving the small gig, with its cushioned seats and neatly dressed crew, for Daisy's accommodation.

There was a pleasant novelty for both of us in the situation as we sat there on either side of Branksome, who steered the boat. The oars of the four men who were rowing rose and fell with the precision of clock-work, and the light little craft was quickly urged over the placid waters of the bay towards the spot where the stately vessel lay in the full blaze of the sunshine. The cloud had passed from Daisy's face now. She was smiling as brightly as she had been wont to do during those happy days when we sat together beside the saloon; but I could not avoid a dim consciousness of the fact that most of her smiles were given to Branksome rather than to me.

Never had I seen a more beautiful spectacle of its kind than that which I witnessed when I stepped upon the white deck of the yacht. The vessel was of great size—probably of not less than six hundred tons displacement. She had auxiliary steam power, but the long sweep of her spars, the fine rake of her three masts, showed that it was to her sail power that she chiefly trusted. Everything on board was in that exquisite state of cleanliness which is never seen save on board of a man-of-war or a first-class yacht. The decks were as white as a well-scrubbed kitchen table; the brass of the bolt pins, the binnacle, the two carronades forward shone in the sunshine like burnished gold. So did the gilding on the molding of the deck houses. Some luxurious lounging chairs and soft rugs were scattered about in the stern of the vessel; while a smart quartermaster, in proper yacht uniform, kept watch in the ship's waist. Everything was in keeping with the wealth of its owner.

Daisy gave a cry of genuine delight when she surveyed the deck and gazed up at the towering masts and rigging, which rose to a giddy height above her. She seemed to put off the weight of years in this atmosphere, and ran, or rather danced along the deck like a child, till she came to the door of the after house. Then she stopped, raised her hands in wonder, and called me to her side.

The interior of this beautiful little room was indeed "a sight to see." The walls were panneled in old leather of a peculiar shade of orange, with rich designs in dead gold embossed upon it. Here and there was a tiny niche in which an exquisite bronze statuette was placed, and now and again the flat surface of the panels was broken by an old Venetian mirror or a silver lamp of antique design. Curtains of some material of delicate texture hung in graceful folds by the side of the windows, the glass of which had a subdued tint that harmonized with the color of the walls. The furniture of the room was in keeping with the decorations. There were cabinets, richly carved, and couches covered with oriental embroideries. Chairs, tables, rugs and stove—all gave evidence of a cultivated taste and a boundless wealth.

"Did you ever see anything so lovely!" cried Daisy, with all a young girl's delight in the beauty before her. "Who will use this room?"

Branksome laughed heartily.

"My dear," he said, "every room on board is yours—this included. But your boudoir is down below, and, as a matter of fact, I believe the intention of the Duke of Cairngorm was to make this his smoking room."

"Oh, how shameful!" cried the girl. "Surely a less beautiful room than this might do for people who want to smoke."

He looked at me with a broad smile upon his pleasant countenance at this ebullition of feminine feeling. I thought now that I had wronged him altogether in pronouncing against his mouth. All his features were in harmony, and I inwardly decided that he was one of the most fascinating men I had ever met with.

At that moment Mr. Maulever came on deck. He looked slightly surprised at seeing me there, but greeted me with cordial courtesy. It was evidently of Daisy, however, that he was chiefly thinking.

"Do you like the Golden Hawk, my darling?" he said, in tones which showed that even he felt some of the pleasurable excitement incident to the first introduction to a new toy. "I think the doctor deserves our thanks for having secured so beautiful a boat for us. What should we have done without him?"

"Quite as well as you have done with him, I reckon, Maulever," replied the doctor. "Don't give me any credit for buying this ship. I heard it was for sale quite by accident, and of course when I saw it I felt it would be the very thing for you. But it was our friend Ben, there, who really settled the matter. I don't know anything about shipping, while he knows everything."

He pointed as he spoke to the man whose appearance I had liked so little when I saw him descending the stairs of the hotel by the side of the millionaire. Even now, when in recognition of Branksome's words he tried to look pleasant, I thought his face a peculiarly evil one.

"Oh, Flinter is well up in shipping, as we have all occasion to know," said Maulever. "But come, Daisy, you have not yet seen your palace below, and luncheon will soon be ready."

We all descended the broad winding stairs of the cabin companionway, and once again Daisy's irrepressible cries of delight broke forth. It would have been difficult indeed for any one to restrain his admiration for that sumptuous interior. There were staterooms furnished in delicate shades of color, decorated with works of art of priceless value, and fitted with every comfort and every luxury that the traveler could desire; there was a dining saloon in which the stamped leather decorations of the smoking room on deck were reproduced, but in a different color. It was difficult to remember that we were on board a ship. This noble apartment looked as though it had been transferred bodily from some Venetian palace. There was a saloon, spacious, airy, elegant, in which the embroidered silk panels of the walls vied with the covering of the couches, and sumptuous carpets, in the soft pile of which the foot sank an inch deep; and there was a boudoir in which the beauty and magnificence of this fairy palace seemed to have culminated. When we reached it I thought Daisy's face turned pale, as though she were afraid to be frightened by the splendor of which she was now the mistress. In my own heart there was a heavy weight of pain. The more clearly the riches of Maulever were made apparent to me, the greater seemed to be the guilt by which I was cut off from him and all belonging to him.

We had not yet seen everything, however, that was to be seen on board this wonderful ship. When we left the boudoir, a short gangway, the walls of which were covered with green plush and glittered with the reflected light of mirrors, led us to a door which Mr. Maulever discovered was locked.

"What have we here?" he said, turning to Dr. Branksome.

"Oh! there you have the other side of the picture," was the reply. "You know, perhaps, that the old duke had been in the navy in his youth, and that up to the end of his days he was a terribly severe disciplinarian. It seems that he always insisted upon having a punishment cell made in his yachts, and I wrote to tell that he had even been known to confine his own sons when they happened to offend him."

"And is this the cell?" asked Maulever, pointing to the locked door.

"It lies beyond it," said the doctor. He produced a small key and opened the door. It showed us a continuation of the gangway; but now the walls of the narrow passage were utterly without ornament. I placed my hand upon them, and found that they were lined with sheet-iron. At the end of the passage was another door, which Branksome opened. We saw dimly, for we were not provided with any lantern, a small, square apartment, furnished in the plainest fashion—a striking contrast to the beauty and luxury of everything else. The place was cold and dark; I could feel Daisy, who was standing near me, shiver as she looked into the gloomy cell.

"I think I must have that dismal hole improved out of existence," said the millionaire, in his placid tones. We were all glad to turn our backs upon this specimen of ducal folly, and to make our way to the dining saloon, where a luncheon in keeping with the splendors of the apartment was spread upon the table.

It must, I think, have been the feeling of oppression that was produced in my mind by the display of Maulever's overpowering wealth that prevented my enjoying that meal, even although it was the first I had ever taken in the company of the girl I loved. There was an additional reason, I think, which contributed, to a certain extent, to my embarrassment. I was seated opposite to Daisy at the round table which occupied the middle of the floor of the cabin. Again and again I tried to catch her eye, and to win some word from her lips. More than once she looked up, and I thought I had succeeded. But if for a moment her eye seemed to rest on my face, it wandered almost instantaneously to that of my next neighbor, the doctor, and then it sank once more upon her plate.

Branksome himself kept me involved in a bright talk, in which not only the yacht and its glories, but the gayeties of Scarborough and the beauties of the Yorkshire scenery played a prominent part. By and by, however, he became confidential.

"You are looking at our friend over there, I see," he said, indicating the man whom I had heard called Flinter by Mr. Maulever. The truth is, I was looking at him because I had become conscious of the fact that he was staring at me with the disagreeable intensity of purpose which I had noticed when I was speaking to the millionaire in the hotel in the morning. "Rather a rough diamond, is he not? But a diamond, nevertheless. He owns everything to our good host, and would go through fire and water to serve him."

I thought to myself that the man hardly looked equal to the character thus given him by the doctor, but I had learned to distrust first impressions, and I said nothing.

"Have you never heard of Mr. Fosdyke before?" whispered Branksome in my ear. "I am surprised. He is one of the very cleverest attorneys in London. You would soon hear all about him if you were to inquire at Bow street or the Old Bailey."

Fosdyke must have heard his name when Branksome whispered it to me. At all events I caught the glitter of his pince-nez as his eyes were turned upon me, and once more I felt that I was being subjected to a scrutiny of unpleasant severity.

How I longed, as the well-drilled stewards passed round dish after dish and replenished our glasses with the champagne or claret which was provided in such profusion, for the peace of the days that were gone, when my darling was not set in this frame of almost regal splendor, but when I was allowed to sit beside her with no jealous eye to keep watch between us, and no voice to contend with mine for the possession of her ear! Once or twice I caught a look in her face that seemed to tell me that some thought not unlike this was passing through her own mind; but if ever her spirit seemed to be flagging, and the color begin to fade from her face, some sally from Branksome, the brilliancy of whose conversation was in keeping with the agreeable suavity of his manner, roused her attention and made her smile again.

I strove as we walked up from the shore in the late afternoon, after landing from the yacht, to secure a chance of speaking to her apart from the rest. But no such opportunity offered itself. She was monopolised by Fosdyke, and I had to content myself with the less seductive pleasures of Branksome's conversation.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1886.
GENTLEMEN.—Being over 70 years of age, and over 20 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in York State, costing me $40. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KIRK.

Clegg Awarded the Contract.

At a meeting of the trustees of the George street Methodist church, held on Thursday evening, the contract for making the improvements in the church building was awarded to Mr. A. Clegg, whose tender was the lowest. The contract includes the carpeting work, new pews, and upholstering. Should Mr. Clegg make as good a job of this work as he did of the seating of St. Andrew's, which no doubt he will, it will be most satisfactory to the trustees and congregation.

Industrial Exhibition.

The exhibition to be held on Tuesday, Sept. 21st, inst., under the management of the Ladies' Aid Society of the George street Methodist Church, promises to be a very successful affair. The large shop one door north of Smart's music store has been secured, and is being fitted up for the occasion. The exhibits will consist of all classes of handiwork, exclusively by the young people of the church, for which honorary prizes will be awarded to competitors. Tea will be served on the premises from 5 o'clock to 7 p.m. This will, no doubt, be one of the most interesting entertainments of the season, and no one should fail to attend. Proceeds in aid of the organ fund.

A meeting of the officers of the 57th Battalion was held yesterday evening. It was decided to appoint a board of officers to examine the non-commissioned officers of the company. In future all non-commissioned offices will be subject to examination before appointment. It was also decided to form a recruit class, which will receive special instructions in squad drill, so that when the raw recruits enter the company ranks they will not interfere with the regular drill. The first battalion drill will be held on Monday evening, 4th October, when it is probable the battalion will parade publicly.

Police Court.

Samuel Skilling, a small boy 13 years of age, was arraigned before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning, charged by his uncle, Mr. Hendricks, with being vicious and incorrigible.

When the charge was read over to the youth, he explained to the magistrate that he was over 13 years of age, having been born in '73, on December 25th.

The magistrate pointed out to the complainant that the statute under which the information was laid only referred to boys between 10 and 13 years of age. After giving the boy a lecture interspersed with advice, he dismissed the charge.

A Local Firm at the Industrial.

The Mail has the following in reference to the exhibit of Messrs. McAndrew & Noble at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition:

"Messrs. McAndrew & Noble, of Peterborough, make a fine display of plumbers' goods and apparatus for steam-heating and hot water heating, suitable for churches and other public buildings, factories and private houses. Among the articles specially worthy of note is their improved hot-water boiler. [illegible] The finish is excellent and the material used of the best quality. The firm state that they guarantee their work with each boiler and publish a list of testimonials as evidence of the universal satisfaction given. The firm also have many specialties in connection with general plumbing work which are well worth inspection."

DEATHS ON THE RAIL.

TWO RAILWAY MEN KILLED WITHIN AN HOUR.

Brakesman McCarthy thrashed by a C. P. R. Freight Train—Driver Fredericks, of the Grand Junction, Passenger—A most Lamentable Imparted—The Fatality Dips at the Hospital—The Latter Succumbs at Midnight.

Almost [illegible] Friday afternoon an accident occurred on the line of the C. P. R. about two miles and a half from town, by which Dennis McCarthy, brakeman on a ballast train, had his lower limbs crushed beneath the car wheels, while he was otherwise bruised and shaken, from which injuries he died three hours afterwards.

Shortly after three o'clock a ballast train in charge of Conductor D. Nolan, left the station here to go to Anderson's gravel pit, about six miles east, for gravel. After loading up, the train started to return, going at a fair speed, when about two miles and a half from town, the engineer, noticing a flag hoisted by the section men, who were repairing the track at this point, whistled "down brakes." McCarthy, who was on the fourth car from the engine, immediately began to apply the brakes, using a stick to turn the brake-wheel. This stick broke when he was pressing forward on it, and the unfortunate man was THROWN HEADLONG FROM THE CAR.

His both legs were caught by the wheels, which passed over the left leg between the knee and the ankle, almost cutting it off, also crushing the flesh of the right from the knee down, the foot of the limb being broken, crushed and mangled. His companions, who saw him fall, soon stopped the train and ran it back to where the accident occurred. McCarthy sat up, his face bruised and bleeding from falling on the gravel ballast, and hardly stopped to realize what had happened. Conductor Nolan bound up the crushed limbs with handkerchiefs, and the injured man was placed in the van and brought to town as quickly as possible. Dr. King and Dr. Halliday were telephoned for, and answered the summons quickly. McCarthy's injuries were temporarily attended to at the station, from which he was taken to the Nicholls Hospital, where Dr. King, Dr. Bell and Dr. Halliday attended the sufferer.

McCarthy was put under the influence of chloroform, when the left leg was amputated at the knee. The amputation was about completed, when it was found that he was dead, having succumbed to the severity of his injuries and the shock of the operation.

The deceased, who has been working on this section of the road since April, was aged about 45 years, and came from London, Ont. He was a widower, and leaves one child to mourn his loss. His friends have been communicated with.

Mr. D. Belleghem, undertaker, prepared the body for burial, and it will be sent to London.

Driver Fredericks' Fatal Leap.

On Friday evening the Grand Junction was the scene of a fatal accident, to Engineer Geo. Fredericks. He was driver of the gravel train, and had been working near Birdsall station, principally in connection with the new bridge over the Ouse river. At about 5.30 o'clock, on account of the rain, the men quit work, and they boarded the train, which began to back down to Hastings, where the gravel train crosses Conductor Morris' express. About a mile east of Birdsalls, Fredericks, who was running about six or seven miles an hour, perceived a tree across the track. He immediately whistled down brakes, shut off steam, and reversed his engine. Recently it has been observed that Fredericks

HAD GROWN EXCEEDINGLY NERVOUS ABOUT ACCIDENTS.

He must have been so on this occasion, for he jumped from side of the car and his fireman from the other. The latter reached the ground perfectly unharmed, but it was found that poor Fredericks was severely injured. It seems that he must have slipped as he jumped, and was, perhaps, struck by the connecting rod or other parts, for he was found with a severe wound at the back of the head and his right foot severed by the wheels of the first truck of the tender. The injured man was at once removed to Hastings, and taken to Brennan's hotel where he boarded, and Drs. O'Gorman and Clarke summoned. The injured man who on account of his severe injuries was unconscious, and was put under chloroform and the amputation was performed; but he did not rally, and at eleven o'clock he breathed his last, never recovering consciousness. The deceased who was about 35 years of age, leaves a wife and one child, has been a long time in the employ of the Midland. He was exceedingly popular on the line having been most efficient attentive and obliging. It will be remembered that recently on the Marmora Link he had the misfortune to run over a cow, which threw off his train, killing his brakesman, and fatally scalding his fireman. Since that time he has been, very nervous on the subject accidents. This doubtless accounts for the fatal jump, of Friday night; whereas if he had remained in his cab all would have been well. It was only the top and smaller branches of the tree that were on the track and they offered no serious obstruction to the passing of the train.

There is a sad coincidence in these two accidents, both occurred about the same time, there was considerable similarity in the nature of the injuries, and the fatal issue resulted in much the same manner.

Hazel Brae Social and Sale.

The lawn social and sale of fancy articles held at the Hazel Brae Home Friday evening, was not, owing to the weather, a decided success. The Home and the beautiful grounds surrounding it, were tastefully decorated with Chinese lanterns, etc. Refreshment tables were numerous, while in the house large tables were loaded with a fine display of fancy and useful articles, mostly the production of the lady friends of the Home. There were present about one hundred and fifty persons, the majority of whom were ladies. Considering the circumstances, the tables of both kinds were well patronized. The lady managers, who were very energetic in their endeavors to make the social a success, were Mrs. Wallis, Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. A. Smith, Mrs. Tassie, Mrs. Hastie, Mrs. Davidson, Miss Dickson, Mrs. McDougal, Mrs. Macklin, Miss Gilmour, Mrs Walton, Mrs. McGee, Miss M. Taylor, Miss E. McKenzie, Miss Smith, Miss A. Holt and Miss P. Holt. Mr. and Mrs. Duff were untiring in their efforts to entertain and were highly successful. Mr. Long generously supplied the ice cream for the occasion free of charge. A galvanic battery, provided electric amusement for all those who wished. The social broke up about 10 o'clock. A sale of the articles left over will be held in the store adjoining Cottom's shop on Water street, the use of which was granted gratis by Mayor Stevenson.

Complimentary Dinner to T. E. Bradburn, Esq.

On Wednesday evening a large party of gentlemen representing the professional and commercial interests of Lindsay, met at the Queen's hotel, and had a very pleasant [illegible] o'clock. The occasion was a complimentary one, an expression of esteem and respect to Mr. T. E. Bradburn, who is leaving Lindsay after a residence of fifteen years. Mr. D. J. McIntyre, M.P.P., occupied the chair, having on his right the guest of the evening and Mr. W. Dundas, M.P. Mr. R. A. McHardy filled the vice chair. On the chairman's left were Mr. Brooks, of Memphis, Tennessee. An excellent and appetizing spread was provided by mine host Benson, to which full justice was done during a half hour of active wielding of knife and fork. Then the chairman took up the lists of toasts and the usual loyal sentiments and national and local toasts were disposed of, brief speeches being made by Mr. J. R. Dundas, Mr. John A. Barron, Mr. J. H. Rainsford, and others. In proposing the health of the guest of the evening the chairman took the opportunity of speak in very flattering terms of Mr. Bradburn. Then followed the presentation of the following address:—

To Mr. T. E. Bradburn,—

DEAR SIR,—Your fellow-citizens desire to express to you their sorrow that you have decided to remove from their midst and with your family to take up your residence elsewhere.

It is needless to mention to you a fact of which you must be fully conscious—that your departure will be deeply regretted by the community in general, and we beg to assure you that in leaving you carry with you the respect and confidence of your fellow-citizens without any exception.

In proof of this assertion—if proof were required—we have only to refer to the public positions which your fellow citizens have from time to time allotted for your acceptance, without being sought to by yourself, and in which you have acquitted yourself with ability, honor and integrity. [illegible] member of the town council and as a member of the board of education you have rendered officient and valuable service.

The interest shown by you at all times in manly sports—whether as guardian of our public hall or as actual competitor in the "manly game"—have brought out with [illegible] qualities of head and heart which have secured you the respect and esteem of those with whom you have associated.

We shall not attempt to conceal from you our strong conviction that much of the cheerfulness of your social life is but the unconscious reflection in you of a home made happy by your amiable wife. Through you we wish to assure her of our regret that she and family are removing from among us.

Notwithstanding our regrets we are pleased to know that your future home will not be far distant, and that from time to time we shall have opportunities of renewing, in some measure, those pleasing associations to be partially interrupted by your change of residence.

On behalf of the citizens of Lindsay we heartily wish you continued health and prosperity, blessings which it is our earnest wish you, wife and family will share.—Signed,

J. R. DUNDAS,
D. J. McINTYRE
A. McMURTRY,
A. McDONELL,
J. D. FLAVELLE, and many others.

Mr. Bradburn acknowledged the compliment in a brief speech, and assured his hearers that he would always remember with pleasure his fifteen years' residence in Lindsay and the friends left behind. Mr. Devlin, Dr. Herriman, Dr. Burrows, Mr. H. B. Dean, Mr. Thos. Stewart, and J. H. Hopkins made short speeches in reply to "The Learned Professions." Messrs. R. J. Mustey, A. Cathro, J. D. Flavelle, and A. McDonell responded to "The Commercial Interests." "The Agricultural Interests" were responded to by Mr. O. D. Barr, who in concluding proposed "The President of the United States and Our Neighbors Across the Lines," which elicited some brief remarks from Mr. Hamilton Brooks, of Memphis, Tenn. For "The Press" Mr. F. H. Dobbin made a suitable reply, while "The Ladies" found an army of able and eloquent spokesmen in Messrs. A. Higinbotham, R. J. Matchett and J. McMillan. After "Auld Lang Syne" had been sung in choruses the gathering broke up. From remarks made by Mr. Bradburn it is not improbable that he will in the future return to Lindsay and again become an active and useful citizen.—Lindsay Post.

A Vet's Success.

Dr. Stevenson, V.S., of town, has recently been meeting with a good run of success in his profession. A day or two ago a horse was brought to him troubled with an ugly discharge from the nostrils, losing flesh, and other symptoms of severe disease. Dr. Stevenson examined the animal, and removed some ulcerated teeth in the back of the mouth, and the beast is recovering rapidly. A farmer in Otonabee had a valuable bull break his leg. Steps were taken to destroy the animal, when a neighbour advised the owner to send for Dr. Stevenson. This was done, the leg was set, and the life of a valuable bull saved. On Monday a horse was brought suffering from indigestion, caused eating green oats. Proper remedies applied brought the beast around all right.

A St. Mary's Marriage.

The St. Mary's Argus contains the following particulars of the marriage of Mr. Bain, of the firm of Messrs. Breese & Bain, town: "A very interesting ceremony was performed at the residence of Mr. R. Hillyard, of the Bank of Montreal, of this town, on Wednesday evening, the occasion being the marriage of his eldest daughter, Sophia M., to Mr. W. G. Bain, merchant, Peterborough, son of Mr. R. H. Bain, of Fullarton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Rose, M.A., uncle of the bridegroom, in the presence of a number of intimate friends. The presents were rich and numerous. The young couple are well known in St. Mary's, Mr. Bain being a graduate of the Collegiate Institute, and a gentleman in the highest sense of the term, and Miss Hillyard, a young lady possessed of many of those qualities which go to form a character worthy of emulation, and which entitle their possessor to an honorable rank when genuine worth is the standard. We desire to join with many others in extending our congratulations to the newly married pair."

Prizes to be Paid.

The "British Empire" Overhauled.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—I notice an advertisement in your paper by a small life insurance company, c., call the British Empire, headed "Record Premier Annual," giving five straight life policies and their results in the following companies: Mutual Life, New York, Standard, Equitable, and British Empire, respectively, showing, of course, the British Empire ahead.

As the Mutual Life was shown with the most unfavorable results, and being the only active competitor of the four mentioned companies in town, I presume this was done to cast reflection upon the old Mutual Life, as well as to show the great and wonderful results of policy No. 50,775 of the British Empire.

Now, sir, I can only speak for and defend the Mutual Life against this most daring, unscrupulous and high-handed deception, which I believe to be the most misleading and unfair comparison ever presented to the public by any life insurance company.

The object of the British Empire, of course, was to show that they pay a larger dividend to their policy-holders than the other companies mentioned; but it is a fact too well known in Canada, and even in our own town, that British life companies cannot (and especially the B. E.) compete with Canadian and American companies.

Why did they not give the age of each policy, age of the insured, and amount of annual premium etc., so that the public could decide upon the merit of each respective company? But this was purposely omitted in order to make it appear according to the heading "British Empire ahead."

Why was not the cash dividend of the Standard stated? Was it because they pay a larger dividend than the B. E?

No company can make a true comparison by taking the profits of any single year, but by taking a number of years together, as in most companies the profits increase from year to year but the British Empire pay no more in subsequent year than they do the first namely 21 per cent of premium on Life and 14 per cent on Endowment policies.

The following will throw a little light on the comparison made:—

Mutual Life Policy No. 108438, amount $1,000, age at issue 23 years, annual premium 1883 $16.91, Cash dividends $5.41; Bonus additions $12.00.

British Empire Policy No. 50,775, amount $1,000, age at issue 45 years, annual premium in 1885 $35.44, Cash dividends $7.50, Bonus additions $47.25. [The reader should understand that in all the life companies the older the insured is and the more Premiums paid the larger the dividend should be.]

It will thus be seen that the cash dividends paid by the British Empire was 21 per cent, while that of the Mutual Life was 32 per cent of the premiums paid; that the insured in the British Empire paid a premium of $35.44 more, or more than double that paid by the insured in the Mutual Life. Hence it will be seen that the British Empire told only half the tale, and this unscrupulously and falsely represented.

Was this a fair comparison, honourable to themselves and justice to the other companies? Most assuredly not.

We challenge the British Empire to show in these columns a fair example of any kind of policy in force from one to forty years, at any age. We will also make a fair comparison with them, then the public can decide which of the two is the better company.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I remain

Yours, etc.,
F. S. GRIST,
General Agent, Mutual Life, Peterborough.

IT LOOKS LIKE WAR

THE BULGARIAN SITUATION BECOMING DECIDEDLY THREATENING.

SOFIA, Sept. 11.—The Regency has issued a decree convoking the National Assembly for the 12th inst.

The following despatch has been sent to Prince Alexander, signed by 269 deputies:

We deeply grieve over your absence from your beloved country. We earnestly desire to see among us, our hero Prince, the defender of our national liberty and independence.

The officers of all the garrisons have telegraph similar messages to the Prince.

Metropolitan Clement and M. Sunkoff are detained under guard in their houses, but are permitted to see friends.

A Poor Outlook For His Restoration.

BERLIN, Sept. 12.—The North German Gazette says there is no prospect of the reinstatement of Prince Alexander. Even if the Sobranje re-elects him the signers of the Berlin Treaty will hardly consent to his return. It is not unlikely, the Gazette adds, that Russia and England will come to an agreement very soon regarding the throne of Bulgaria.

The Fete Day of the Alexanders.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Prince Alexander's fete day was the occasion of great rejoicings at Philippolis. The festivities were continued throughout the night. Bodies of troops headed by bands paraded through the town, and the streets resounded with the cheers of the populace. Prayers for Alexander were offered in the churches.

The TeDeum was sung at the Russian consulate in honor of the Czar. Only 15 persons were present. Troops were stationed around the consulate to prevent disorder.

At Sofia six Roumelian regiments were presented with new colors. The colors bore at the top, the Bulgarian lion, on the borders the motto, "God with us" and on the corners Prince Alexander's monogram. After the presentation of the colors the troops were reviewed. They made a splendid appearance.

Austria Prepared to Fight.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The Morning Post's Berlin correspondent says Austria has formally notified Germany that she will oppose any attempt by Russia to encroach upon the liberties of the Balkans. A special messenger has started for Strasburg with important dispatches for Emperor William.

The Austrian newspapers while deploring the possible necessity for war agree that it must be cheerfully resorted to if it will prevent greater calamities in the future.

Possible Complications Indicated.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Great excitement has been caused at Chatham by the unexpected receipt of urgent orders from the Admiralty to expedite the completion of men-of-war. Relays of workmen are to be employed day and night if necessary. This activity is regarded as indicating possible complications.

Hungary Won't Consent.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Herr Von Tisza recently informed Count Kalnoky, the Austrian Prime Minister, that he was unable, as Hungarian Premier, to consent to a Russian occupation of Bulgaria.

The Cologne Gazette says twenty Russian officers are going to Bulgaria to occupy the highest military posts.

THE REMITTANCES DIDN'T ARRIVE.

Consequently Ex-Ald. Jaehne's Confidential Clerk Returns to New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Ex-Alderman Jaehne's confidential clerk, Alter, is a prisoner at police headquarters. He returned from Canada about ten days ago and was arrested Thursday night by detectives. Alter has since told Inspector Byrnes all he knows about Jaehne's business methods, not only as a "fence," but as a politician. Alter admits that he perjured himself in Jaehne's trial. The District Attorney considers him a valuable witness. Alter resided in St. Catharines, Ont., until his money gave out, when failing to secure remittances from Jaehne's friends he returned here.

Laid His Heart Wide Open.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Sept. 11.—A horrible murder was committed last evening at 6 o'clock near Scullyville, Choctaw Nation, by Lewis Burrows, a half-breed. Burrows had a quarrel with Wm. Morgan, a white man, about seventy cents, which he claims was owing him from Morgan's nephew. Angry words followed and Burrows becoming enraged raised a sharp ax he had at hand and struck Morgan on the left shoulder with such a force that the blade cut into his body and split his heart wide open. Morgan died instantly and Burrows was arrested by a deputy marshal, who was near. He was brought here this afternoon and lodged in United States jail, where, with twenty-one other murderers, he awaits trial.

A Detroit Vessel Seized.

DETROIT, Sept. 11.—The steam yacht Robert Wolfertz, which was sunk in the Sandwich Canal some time ago, recently floated down to Fighting Island and for several days laid in the marsh. On Monday Wm. Caldwell, an Amherstburg customs officer, was sent up and seized her and had the little craft raised and then towed her to Amherstburg, where she is now lying. The yacht is watched day and night by the customs officers for fear she will move away. She is said to be owned by Wolfertz & Wood, of this city, and that her engine and furniture were stolen before she fell into the officer's hands. It is not known for what she was seized.

The Chinese Really Must Go.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Collectors of Customs have been notified that several Chinese laborers who landed at Atlantic ports some time ago in transit for China have not yet quitted this country. To insure the government against a violation of the privileges conferred by a pass overland to San Francisco the collectors have been directed to adopt a system of numbering each pass so that the Chinese can be more readily traced and prevented from remaining in this country.

War on Lake Shore Property.

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—Several attempts to destroy the property of the Lake Shore railway were made last night. The watch tower at the track intersection was blown up and a frightful disaster narrowly escaped, in which many passengers' lives might have been lost. Fifteen loaded freight cars were derailed by a misplaced switch, and a Switchman was arrested in another attempt to throw a switch open and derail a freight train.

Maine's Biennial Election.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 12.—The biennial Maine election occurs to-morrow. There are to be chosen a Governor, Congressmen, thirty-one State Senators and 151 Representatives, with county officials in all the sixteen counties. There are three complete tickets in the field, namely: Republican, Democratic and Prohibition, and the labor party has put up several tickets for Congressman.

RAN INTO SOME ROCKS.

Disastrous Wreck on the C. P. R.—Three Men Killed.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 11.—An east bound freight train on the Canadian Pacific Railway last night ran into a mass of rock, which recent heavy rains had washed upon the track, about 12 miles east of Rat Portage. A disastrous wreck was the result. The engineer, brakeman and fireman were buried in the ruins. Brakeman Darby was the first one rescued, but he was in a dying condition. The fireman, a new man whose name is unknown, cried piteously for help from the ruins, but could not be rescued for some time. He died soon after being taken out. It was not until assistance arrived from Beaver Station that Engineer Hoffman could be reached. His body was terribly mutilated and life was extinct. Hoffman was one of the oldest employes on the road.

Another Fisheries Commission.

HALIFAX, N.S., Sept.—Newfoundland advices says it is reported at St. Johns that President Cleveland had intimated his intention to recommend to Congress the appointment of a commission to consider the whole fishery question. The name of a prominent St. Johns merchant is already spoken of as most likely to represent the colony of Newfoundland on such commission. The latest reports regarding the Labrador fishery state that it is a total failure. Herring are very scarce and fishing craft had not averaged 100 quintals each.

Rowed and His Rivals.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The sculling practice on the Thames is the topic of chief interest in sporting circles. Teemer does not believe that Gaudaur has any chance of winning against Beach. He said Saturday: "I think I am equal to Gaudaur, at anyrate, and the refore consider that so far as I am concerned the challenge is for the virtual championship of America."

Gaudaur, when asked how he regarded the coming contest, replied: "I think Beach's victories thus far have been due to his superior stamina, enabling him to stand three days' successive races, which staled his opponents. I will meet him pretty fresh, and believe I have a fair chance, though his immense physical power enables him to stay a long course remarkably."

When asked how matters stood as to a race between himself and Hanlan Beach said today: "I have heard no more from Hanlan and to not expect to. Hanlan is a good man, but he will not venture to meet me on the Parramatta again. I have no doubt about my beating any present American competitors and then no power on earth can make me stay here rowing more matches. But I will row all comers on the Parramatta."

Beating the Records at Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—At the exhibition of the Brooklyn Athletic Association to day the first event was the three-mile run, which was won by the champion, James Grant. The best record has been 15.16½. His first half of the distance was behind schedule time, but he made a spurt and beat the record; time 14.58 4-5ths. In the running broad jump, Malcolm W. Ford, the world's champion, tried to beat his own best record but failed. The jump made by him was 1 foot short of the required distance of 23 feet, 9 inches. In the standing jump, Thos. F. Kearney, the professional jumper, broke the record in three standing jumps of 33 feet, 8 inches. He made 33 feet, 9½ inches. In the standing high jump with weights his record is 5 feet, 4 inches. He made a jump beating the record by 1½ inches. In the running high jump the record was 5 feet, 10 inches. He again beat the record, scoring a jump of 5 feet, 11½ inches.

Cummings Turns the Table on George.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—Cummings beat George in a 4-mile run at Preston to-day. George led until they entered on the fourth mile, when Cummings spurted and went to the front. Cummings finished the distance alone, George retiring on the sixteenth lap. The time for the four miles was 20.12 2-5. The first two miles were made in 10.13 2-5. Twelve thousand people witnessed the race.

A strike of employes in the clothing trade at New York to the number of 15,000 is expected to take place shortly.

Edward Wilson, a medical student of Toledo, O., has been arrested for robbing a grave of the body of a 20-year-old girl.

The total number of cases that have occurred in Italy since the cholera outbreak is 45,000, of which 14,000 resulted fatally.

The French Commercial Cable Company announces that under the reduced tariff its business increased last year 122 per cent.

Prince William of Prussia, arrived at Brest Litovsk, Russia, on Saturday, and was received by the Czar, Czarina and grand dukes.

The Institution at Pernambuco called "The Public Credit," has been robbed of 800,000 contos reis. Skeleton keys were used.

The churches were occupied at Charleston, S.C., yesterday, the people having got over their scare from the recent earthquake shocks.

A portion of the grand stand at the Wild West show at Jersey City, N.J., Saturday, gave way, precipitating 300 people to the ground fourteen feet below. About twenty were badly bruised.

Nothing is known in official circles in London regarding Prince Alexander's visit to England. The Prince remains at Jugenheim for the present, his health being shattered.

At Spokane Falls, W.T., a young man named Paine tried to rescue his father, a murderer, from officers of the law. He fired at the officers and killed his father. He then killed one of the latter's captors and escaped.

John Williams, the murderer of a father and son, who has just been released from penitentiary after serving ten years, has sued his counsel, Judge Homer, of Omaha, for $40,000 for misconducting his case.

A half-mile foot-race between Bryan of Philadelphia, and Priddy of Pittsburg, Pa., for $1000 a side and the State championship, at Exposition Park, Philadelphia, Saturday afternoon, was won easily by the former in 1.57½. Priddy is the oarsman of that name.

A Boston despatch says: "Hanlan, the oarsman, stated Saturday that he regretted Beach's refusal to meet him in a $10,000 race. Hanlan was never in better health, and leaves New York next week for England, where he will endeavor to bring about a contest with Beach before the latter can leave for Australia."

Manager Hickson informed a Hamilton deputation that waited on him that the proposed new car shops of the Grand Trunk Railway would not be erected at Hamilton, but at some point more centrally located as regards the Grand Trunk system.

Four fishermen belonging to the American schooner Meteor, named Jas. Reilly, Jas. Carrigan, Jas. Barron and Michael Canfield, landed at St. Pierre, Miquelon. They were picked up sixty miles off Cape Race by a French fishing vessel after being adrift in a dory three days. When found they were extremely weak, but have since recovered.

The London Standard referring to the Parnell Land Bill says: "If the tenants are in distress policy and humanity alike demand that they shall not be compelled to pay the forfeit of their failure." Still more significantly it adds: "The Government must bid against the league for the gratitude of the Irish people. The Ministry must not be defeated by false pride from giving effect to whatever element of justice exists in Mr. Parnell's proposal."

A Yacht Race to Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 12.—The yachts Whistlewing, Escape and Rivet started from Toronto yesterday on a race to Burlington Pier. A gale sprang up. The Whistlewing ran back to Toronto, the Escape made for Port Credit, and it is thought the Rivet did also, but nothing is definitely known here of

To-night the Whistlewing arrived at the pier from Toronto, and will claim the FUTURE OF THE C. P. R.

CYRUS W. FIELD PREDICTS GREAT THINGS FOR THE RAILWAY.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—A Sun reporter had a chat with Mr. Cyrus W. Field, who has just returned from a trip over the Canadian Pacific lines. Mr. Field overflowed with descriptive anecdotes of the journey. The party traveled so as to see all that was worth seeing along the line. If they happened along an interesting portion of the road when night came on they side-tracked their cars until morning. It is very evident that Mr. Field did not appreciate how vast this North American continent was until he rolled over the northern part of the wide plateau lying this side the Rocky Mountains and over and through the three mountain ranges that break the surface of Western British Columbia. Mr. Field has been to the Pacific coast before, but never before had the opportunity to realize how far north the valuable part of this continent extends. He says that the cattle that will be grazed, the crops that will be raised, and the industries that will be developed in the region that he traveled through will be something enormous. All the resources are there, he said, and the railroad has made them available. The highest point touched in crossing the Rocky Mountains is about 5000 feet above the sea, or about 3000 feet lower than the Union Pacific's highest point.

At Port Moody, the present western terminus of the road, Mr. Field says he found a New York ship unloading a cargo of tea from Japan. Part of it was billed to New York via Brockville and the New York Central Railroad, and part to Chicago via the Manitoba road from Winnipeg. Another steamer from San Francisco was unloading general freight also for points as far east as Chicago and New York. Part of the cargo was canned salmon that had been packed on the Columbia River and shipped from Portland, Oregon, to San Francisco.

Mr. Field said that he thought the Canadian Pacific would get much transcontinental traffic, but he added that he was going to make it his business to find out what the New York Central, of which he was a director, gets for its service in bringing such traffic to this city, as he does not mean it shall participate in any cut rates on the business.

On his return trip Mr. Field left the Canadian Pacific at Winnipeg for the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba road and came home via Chicago with Gen. Sherman as a companion.

A number of rumors as to the object of Mr. Field's journey have become current, most of them involving him in some new investment or enterprise. Relative to these, he said: "I went simply for pleasure and recreation. I haven't a dollar's interest in the Canadian Pacific and did not make the trip with the view of having any interest. I found it a good road and believe it has a great future. I presume it will eventually establish a steamship line to China and perhaps lay a cable, but I guess neither just yet."

CAMP LIFE AT NIAGARA.

A Bathing Parade—Review on Thursday—Over Sixteen Companies.

NIAGARA, Sept. 11.—The usual routine of camp life was varied this morning by a "bathing parade." The different corps were marched down to the lake and the men thoroughly enjoyed a cold dip. Mrs. Otter, Miss Robinson and Capt. Geddes arrived in camp this morning and will remain for a few days. General Middleton and Capt. Wise, A.D.C., came over on the Chicora this afternoon. The General will proceed to St. Catharines on Tuesday to unveil the monument erected to Private Watson, late of the 90th Battalion, and will commence his inspection of the camp Wednesday. The review will probably take place Thursday. There is a marked improvement in the men, both in their drill and appearance, and it is expected they will give a good account of themselves when inspected.

The actions of some of the over-zealous canteens cause a good deal of fun, although they are sometimes a little annoying to say the least. The mess-sergeant of Company who is well known by the city volunteers for his "Bacterian" proportions and his jolly good nature, was rather startled the other night, after "lights out" had gone, to find himself suddenly ordered to "halt," the muzzle of a rifle being at the same time brought energetically against the spot where the buckle of his waist-belt usually is. Of course he halted and endeavored to point out to this modern "Roman sentinel" the many calamities and punishments that would happen if he were not allowed to pass. It was of no use and the debate waxed hotter and hotter, and at last awakened by the noise, the majestic form of the brigade sergeant-major loomed up through the darkness enquiring in stentorian tones "what the bloomin' row was about." But the sentry was not to be terrified, and the B. S.M. was ordered to "halt." At last the main guard came doubling down and quietness again prevailed.

Such trifling matters as refusing to allow a bandmaster to pass in order to join his band, and keeping the commandant a prisoner in his own quarters have happened, but it is hard to feel angry and the affair generally ends in a laugh over these attempts of the amateur Tommy Atkins to perform his duty.

The weather has been splendid and if it was not for the dust there would be nothing to complain of.

The Marquis of Ely's Agent.

DUBLIN, Sept. 10.—When Mr. Taylor, agent of the Marquis of Ely, boarded the Waterford company's steamer at Waterford to-day to return to Dunsannon, there was a repetition of the scene enacted at Duncannon on Tuesday. All the passengers immediately left the steamer, taking with them their cattle, goods, etc.

GENERAL McCARTHY'S OFFICIAL REPORT.

Mr. Dalton McCarthy, the admitted Brain of the Conservative party, by his intemperate speech in Haldimand, in which he declared war against the French-Canadians, darned the sobriquet of "General," which the Globe has forever fastened upon him. Consistently with thi titular distinction, that journal issues a playful parody or an official military despatch, which contains so many pungent pricks, and is sprinkled so abundantly with grains of telling truth, that no apology is necessary in reproducing it for the benefit of our readers. Here it is:—

"HEADQUARTERS, CAYUGA, Sept. 9, 1886. —A grand battle was fought on the field of Haldimand yesterday. About 8 a.m. the Liberal forces began a rapid advance all along the line, and immediate preparations were made by the battalions under my command to resist the impending attack. Runners were promptly sent out in all directions, headed down with the sinews of war, but they were hotly pursued by the Liberal troops, a number of them captured, and the others forced to return to camp. By a hot and well directed fire our regiments, who have been entrenched for the past two weeks behind the Regina scaffold, on the Government timber limits, in the North-western portion of the field, were driven from their positions with heavy loss. The detachment under Col. McCallum, who were believed to hold an impregnable position behind a tug boat, were also beaten back after a brief engagement, the boat being with difficulty prevented from falling into the hands of the enemy. As it was the vessel suffered severely, and no doubt the Government will be asked at an early date to consider a claim for damages. In vain our officers raised the cry of "Race and Revenge," and carried the bloody shirt to the front; the Liberals as vigorously responded with the watchword, "Union and Progress," and carried position after position against us. Mounted on the Protestant Horse I performed prodigies of valor, brought my Great Brain to bear upon every part of the field, and kept always a vigilant eye on the commissariat. But all was in vain. A mutiny arose among the Indian troops over a rumor that in case of victory they would be obliged to "eat pork or die and be damned," as is the rule in the Northwest, and a number went over to the enemy, thus weakening us at a vital point. Equally disastrous was the attempt of the Orange contingent under Col. White to draw recruits from the ranks of the enemy by exhibiting Riel as a new Catholic saint and shouting, "No confidence in the breed." The Protestant Horse received a bullet in the right hip, and had it not been that my attempt to seize certain Rivers and Streams in the enemy's country was pronounced ultra vires, I should probably have been dangerously wounded. About five p.m. the conflict was brought to a close by the complete rout of our forces at every point, and it was with difficulty that I was enabled to carry the bloody shirt from the field and consign it to the Mail laundry, there to be washed and repaired. All is lost but $3,000 a year and a few months more of opportunity.

(Signed) McCARTHY,
Generalissimo."

SIR JOHN has recently been trebly undeceived. He fancied that the hanging of Riel would serve to wipe out the record of ten years of political corruption, extravagance, and shameful misgovernment. It was only a fancy which Haldimand dispelled. He fancied the extension to the Indians of franchise rights, which they did not seek, would efface the memory of years of starvation, ill-treatment, and criminal neglect. Haldimand again shattered the delusion. He vainly imagined he could conciliate his outraged French Canadian quondam supporters by the bribers' gold, and that the crisp crackle of bank notes would wipe out the memory of the insulting abuse heaped upon the French Canadians by his organ, the Mail, and its imitators. Chambly showed him his mistake.

THE Tory journals—that is those who have energy enough left to refer to the Haldimand election, try to make a soft spot for themselves to fall upon by making the assertion that the conclusion was a foregone one—that the riding was always Reform, and that nobody expected it to go otherwise. Yet, before the polling day they boasted that the Franchise Act and the Revising Barrister had added 125 to the Tory strength, and 125 Indian voters who would be sure to poll for the Government candidate. That makes an estimated gain of 250 votes, which certainly should have overcome a little majority of 126.

The Mail congratulates Canada on its freedom from earthquakes. But then, you know, we have a Tory Government—and that quakes since Haldimand records its verdict of condemnation. Tory loyalty won't permit a miserable little republican state like South Carolina to un-do the party even in the matter of quaking.

The first word of the "handwriting on the wall" is Chambly, the second Haldimand—the general elections will finish the sentence.

PHENOMENA OF THE WATERS.

"White Water" off Cape Sable—The Earthquake's Effect on Lake Superior.

HALIFAX, N.S., Sept. 11.—The Cape Sable fishermen have suddenly dwindled to almost nothing. A short time ago boat and inshore craft were getting good catches daily. One day last week "white water," as it is colloquially termed, made its appearance, moving to wand the west. This is a phenomenon rarely if ever before witnessed here. The fish retreat before this milky current, or else will not bite while it is passing. The day before "white water" was noticed, boats found fish quite plentiful everywhere. The next day few of them caught over twenty, and the scarcity still prevails, though the sea has resumed its usual clearness. One man describes the sight as a most singular and unaccountable circumstance. The "white water," which showed a long distance on the surface, and seemed full of minute fibres of curd-like consistency, was on its western edge as perpendicular as the walls of a house, and apparently reached to the depth of thirty fathoms. It was moving slowly.

Singular Occurrence on Lake Superior.

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—Capt. Marsden, of the propeller Donaldson, relates a strange experience he had on the trip to Chicago. One night last week, while coming up Lake Superior with the tke schooners Brighte and Nellie Mason in tow, a furious gale from the northwest was encountered. The wind attained a velocity of fully forty miles an hour and continued with unabated fury for several hours. It was accompanied by a violent ocean sea, the waves running very high even for Lake Superior. Suddenly and without any apparent cause the wind died away into a dead calm, and in less than five minutes the white-capped waves flattened out into a perfectly smooth sea. The crews of the vessels were greatly mystified at the phenomenon, and all agreed that they had never seen anything like it on the lake before. Turning to his mate the captain remarked that there must have been some unusual disturbances on land. Reaching the Sault the captain went ashore and secured a newspaper. It was then he learned that at about the same time he had witnessed this singular action of wind and wave Charleston had been badly shaken by an earthquake.

He Took an Evicted Tenant's Farm.

DUBLIN, Sept. 12.—James Greene was shot dead near Ennis last night. He had taken a farm from which the tenant had been evicted. Gen. Buller is inquiring into the case. No arrests have been made.

The Ignominious Fate of a Masher.

HAMILTON, Sept. 11.—Ralph B. Clifton was sentenced to six months in the Central Prison to-day for stealing a pair of shoes. Letters were found on him in which he depicts himself as a "masher" with twenty wives, and says that he has only to propose to be accepted. His wife is in Brighton, Ont., and a very tender and sensible letter from her was also among his correspondence. Some of the letters were addressed to women in Toronto and contained the vilest language.

"Imitation is the Sincerest Flattery."

If the above quotation is true, then Dr. R. V. Pierce ought to feel highly flattered, on account of the many imitators of his popular remedy, the "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," for they have scores of imitators, but never an equal, for the cure of sick and bilious headache, constipation, impure blood, kidney pains, internal fever and all bowel complaints. With a bottle of the sugared granules in the house, you can dispense with the family doctor and his often nauseous medicines. 6d61w37

A Yankee Thief Sentenced.

Edward Meyer, who helped himself to $2,500 of the money of his employers, Maxwell Bros., of St. Louis, and went to Hamilton, was on Thursday sentenced to 6 months in the Central Prison for bringing stolen money to Canada.

NELSON, LADY HAMILTON.

Their Secret.

Nelson reached Naples on the 20th of September. He was taken into the British minister's house, and there personally attended by her whose sympathies had been so awakened, and by whose attentions he was, after a time, restored to health. It is difficult to repress a smile as we read Nelson's account of his sensations, in a letter addressed from Naples, shortly after this period, to his wife. The marvellous simplicity of the hero and the Homeric exuberance of the heroine, are too instructive to be overlooked.

"I must endeavor," says Nelson, "to convey to you something of what passed; but if it were so affecting to those who were only united to me by bonds of friendship, what must it be to my dearest wife—my friend—my everything which is most dear to me in this world? Sir William and Lady Hamilton came out to sea, attended by numerous boats with emblems, &c. They, my most respectable friends, had nearly been laid up and seriously ill, first from anxiety and then from joy. It was imprudently told Lady Hamilton in a moment and the effect was like a shot; she fell, apparently dead, and is not yet perfectly recovered from severe bruises. Alongside came my honored friends; the scene in the boat was terribly affecting; up flew her ladyship, and exclaiming 'O God! is it possible?' she fell into my arms more dead than alive. Tears, however, soon set matters to rights; when alongside came the King . . . . . I hope, some day, to have the pleasure of introducing you to Lady Hamilton. She is one of the very best women in this world; she is an honor to her sex. Her kindness, with Sir William's, to me, is more than I can expect. I am in their house, and I may now tell you, it required all the kindness of my friends to set me up. Lady Hamilton intends writing to you. May God Almighty bless you, and give us in due time a happy meeting."

Lady Hamilton did write to Lady Nelson accordingly.

As may be supposed, the French ambassador at Naples was not slow to remonstrate against the Neapolitan breach of faith. Lady Hamilton took advantage of the remonstrances to break off that connexion altogether. So plausibly did she argue with the Queen upon the advantages to be gained from an open rupture with France, that the said ambassador and his suite were requested to go home at twenty-four hours' notice. The step was not without its evil consequences. A Neapolitan army was raised to defend the Two Sicilies from French aggression, but the general in command did not understand his business, and the soldiers were either traitors, or cowards, or both. In the month of December, 1798, the French were marching on the capital, and the King and Queen were obliged to decamp. But for Lady Hamilton there is no doubt that the stupid Ferdinand would have fallen a victim to popular fury, and Maria Caroline might have shared the fate of her sister, Marie Antonette. The conduct of Lady Hamilton at this emergency is beyond all praise. The royal family, their property, their immediate friends were to be conveyed from the place to British ships waiting to receive them, and not a score of the King's subjects could be asked to help in the undertaking. The labor was performed by Lady Hamilton alone; her genius designed the plan of escape; her activity rendered the plan successful. "Lady Hamilton," says Southey, "like a heroine of romance, explored, with no little danger, a subterraneous passage leading from the palace to the seaside; through this passage the royal treasures, the choicest pieces of painting and sculpture and other property, to the amount of two millions and a half, were conveyed to the shore, and stowed safely on the English ships." During the whole proceeding the movements of Lady Hamilton, as well as those of her husband, were closely watched, but ineffectually. Lady Hamilton seemed, in the words of Nelson, "to be an angel dropped from heaven," for the preservation of the royal family, and performed an angel's part in conducting them from the ruin that awaited them amongst their own people to the protection and security of British ships. The loss to Sir William Hamilton and his wife by the service was great. In order to lull suspicion and prevent discovery, the ambassador was obliged to abandon his house, and to leave behind him, belonging to himself, property amounting to £30,000, and movables to the value of £9,000, the property of his wife. Nelson received the King and Queen, Sir William and Lady Hamilton, on board the Vanguard, and conducted them all in safety to Palermo.

It is not necessary to discuss the nature of the sentiments which incited the mistress of Sir William Hamilton's nephew to disgrace still further Sir William Hamilton's wife. The reader may be safely left to his own conclusions upon the subject. As to Nelson himself, as little doubt can be entertained that he was the slave of an overpowering infatuation. Without worldly knowledge, simple as a child, with a spirit as gentle as it was unsuspecting, he dozed upon this woman with a passionate ardor that concealed from his own upright mind the culpable character of his love, and rendered him regardless of all its consequences, if not insensible to them. His marriage had not been very fortunate. We do not find that Lady Nelson sympathized very heartily with her husband's career, or, indeed, took much pains to secure his domestic comfort, whether afloat or ashore.

"My dear Fanny," begins a letter from Spithead, in 1798, "at half-past five I arrived here, and, what you will be surprised to hear, with great difficulty found one pair of raw silk stockings. I suppose in some place or other I shall find my linen, for there is scarcely any in this trunk."

The letter is valuable as an indication of the wife's regard. Again Nelson had been absent three years from England. During that time he had won for himself imperishable fame, and made his wife a peeress. He landed at Yarmouth amidst the enthusiasm of his fellow countrymen, but no Lady Nelson was there to wish him joy upon his glorious and safe return. Such was the wife. Upon the other side all was temptation and witchery, incessant kindness, unlimited devotion. For his country Nelson was at any moment prepared to lay down his life. Lady Hamilton, if it would redound to his honor was ready to share the same fate. The exertions of the ambassador's wife on behalf of her King were the subject of universal applause; but Nelson would have been blind had he not perceived that not for the ambassador, and not for the King, but to place the laurels on his own brow, all the energy was called forth and every triumph won. "Pray," writes Earl Vincent to Lady Hamilton, "do not let your fascinating Neapolitan dames approach too near our hero. There was no necessity for the advice, but it sufficiently betrayed the susceptible temperament of the man upon whom his own wife had not even cared to make an impression.

We content ourselves with this statement. No impartial reader of the whole case will fail to conclude that Lady Hamilton employed the rare gifts that nature and education had conferred upon her to bring one of the greatest of his time to her feet, and to complete the history of her conquests by linking her name and life with those of a man who will never be forgotten whilst the history of his country endures. As difficult will it be for the same reader to recognise any but the most enthusiastic, the most unselfish, the most devoted affection, in the hero thus sorely tempted and overcome. Nelson guilty never believed himself an offender. His language in his private journals and in his letters all testifies to the equanimity with which he regarded his liaison with Sir William Hamilton's wife. Of all the anomalies that reveal themselves in humanity, none is more singular than that of an individual in the act of committing crime calling upon Heaven to look down approvingly upon the exhibition of virtue. We repeat we content ourselves with announcing Lord Nelson's fall. We shall not insult the reader by requesting him to peruse the history of the connexion. Let it be sufficient to say that Lord Nelson, after separating from his wife, lived openly with Lady Hamilton, as her protector, her husband not being dead. Nelson perished at Trafalgar in 1805. Sir William Hamilton died in 1803. On the 30th of January, 1801, Lady Hamilton gave birth to a daughter in London. Her name was Horatio: her father was Lord Nelson.

CHAPTER V.

I MEET AN OLD ACQUAINTANCE.

Branksome's conversation was not without its interest for one vastly thought I should have yearned to hear of the "wife of Daisy." But daisy was not mentioned, until completion of the state of my feelings regarding the beautiful girl who had been so long a resident in his house. Whether he regarded me with approval as a possible suitor for her I could not tell. My instinct, indeed, told me that he could hardly look upon a comparatively poor man like myself as being a fitting husband for the heiress of the millionaire. But he allowed no sign of such a feeling to make itself manifest; and he talked about Daisy to me now, evidently because he felt that no other theme would interest me so deeply. What he had to say was indeed matter of interest to me. He told me that Miss Stancliffe was the daughter of Manleverer's sister, who had married when very young. This I had known before. What I had not known was that there had been trouble in Manleverer's family in consequence of the marriage.

"Manleverer is a very proud man, though he does not wear his pride on his sleeve. Daisy's father was—well, he has been dead now for more than sixteen years, so why should I rake up grandfather's blots? Poor girl! She lost her mother within a few months of the death of her father. I had attended the mother in her last illness. I had my wife took pity of the child and adopted her, having no children of our own."

"Then why did Manleverer himself not adopt her at that time?" I asked.

He cried put hastily for a moment before answering. "Manleverer did not know of her existence at that time," he said. "Daisy's mother made me promise on her death bed that I would never reveal the secret of the child's parentage to her brother."

"But you broke your promise in the end?"

"I did. Was I not right to do so? It is not an easy thing for a man of honor to prove unfaithful to such a trust as that. But I had to think of my duty to the living as well as to the dead. Think of my situation, my good young friend, and then say whether you condemn me. There was Manleverer, a lonely man, whose life was without any joys, though his wealth was almost fabulous. An I here was Daisy—growing up to be what you see her now, but in a poor man's house, with no prospect of ever being anything more than a poor man's wife"—I winced as he uttered those words—"is an Australian town. Did I not do well to think of the living before the dead?"

"Yes; if you ask me that question, I can only answer with an emphatic affirmative."

"Manleverer has found a new joy in life, in the society of his niece. He is completely wrapped up in her—as you may perceive."

"And are you still engaged in practice as a medical man?" I asked.

"No; I have dropped medicine. I lost my wife some years ago. It was nearly as great a loss to Daisy as to me. Since then I have been Manleverer's agent. He is the most generous of men."

"No. I have dropped medicine."

"And the other gentleman—have they any business connection with him?"

I felt that I was trespassing upon Branksome's good nature in subjecting him to these interrogatories. But he had shown himself so kindly and frank, and the subject was one of such intense interest to me, that I could not resist the temptation to insure further regarding the exact relationship of Daisy's uncle with the man who had so suddenly appeared upon the scene.

"Fosdyke, as I told you, is the great London solicitor. He is our—that is Manleverer's—legal adviser. As for Flinter—well, I said he was a rough diamond, did I not? He has been for years employed upon Mr. Manleverer's larger sheep runs, though I believe that originally he followed the sea."

But we had reached the hall of the hotel by this time, and it was evident that I was about to be parted from the little company in which I was so deeply interested.

Daisy held out her hand when she said good-by to me; but I could not detect any returning pressure when I grasped it warmly. She looked very beautiful as I went and. She went to her room, leaving me wholly unsatisfied.

And for the next two or three days I continued in the same mood. I saw Daisy daily, but never alone. Her most frequent companion was the doctor, who was always the same—bright, genial, full of witty and good natured talk, but rather overpowering in the sense of authority with which he seemed to speak, and the completeness with which he appeared to have subjugated Daisy's will to his own. Then one day I heard from the lips of Branksome that the whole party were leaving Scarborough on the following morning. Their destination was the old Yorkshire home which had been purchased by Mr. Manleverer as a home for himself and Daisy.

When I heard this piece of news, I looked eagerly at the girl to see how she regarded it. There was pain enough in my own face, I know, for in such a matter I could not dissemble. With the fierce joy of a lover, I saw that she, too, was troubled. But she said not a word. It was only in her beautiful eyes that I read that which, to some extent, comforted me.

But the next morning—the last morning of all—the morning which was to see an end forever of those happy days that I spent with my love at Scarborough, I had the opportunity for which I had longed so eagerly, of seeing her apart from those friends of hers, who seemed to have interposed themselves between us with such fatal effect.

Branksome and Flinter had gone to the pubs, which still lay idly in the bay, and Fosdyke was transacting some business of his own in the town. Mr. Manleverer and Daisy came out of the hotel, as the latter said, to take a last look at the beautiful scene before starting for the railway station. Then the whole party went by most unfrequented paths to the top of the cliff, that by the Grand hotel. There there are steps her of beaches overhanging the sands and the valley, and here we seated ourselves. Daisy sat in the old days, and her own her sands and myself. She was pale and nervous, but her cheeks were as round and as bright as ever. She was the youngest of the party, and the different manner for a little time, and then, unable any longer to keep back the thought that was uppermost in my mind, I referred to their departure.

"I don't know," I said, "when we three shall next meet. Are you ever likely to return to Scarborough?"

Daisy blushed and said nothing. I saw that she was nervously playing with the tassel of her parasol.

"We must not wait till we return to Scarborough before ending Mr. Fenton again," said Manleverer to his niece. "He must come to Great Lorton Hall. You have never been it, I think? Well, you will find it worth the trouble of a visit."

I had hardly words to express my gratitude. Everything seemed clear before me, now that I was not to be cut off absolutely from further communication with Daisy. As for her, there was a look of unfeigned delight in her face also when she heard her uncle's proposal. But too quickly it faded away, and I observed again the anxious expression I had so often seen during the last few days. She knit her brows and seemed lost in thought.

I heard a footstep near us, and looked up. Branksome was standing before us, with a good humored smile on his face, as his eye trampled from Daisy to myself. That was the end of my dream of joy at Scarborough.

It was a long and a sad walk that followed their departure; but I am not going to inflict upon my readers an account of the love sick moods in which I wandered about the places where we had been wont to meet, recalling, so far as I could, every separate occasion upon which we had been together, and every word that she had spoken. I only know that I was more deeply in love with her than ever, and that nothing but the opportunities of her uncle's wealth kept me from telling my secret forthwith.

But one happy morning all my misery was brought to an end by the receipt of a letter—the first letter I had ever received in her handwriting—inviting me to Great Lorton Hall. Here it is:

GREAT LORTON HALL, Sept. 21.

DEAR MR. FENTON: My uncle asks me to say that he has not forgotten your promise to pay us a visit here. He wishes to know if it will be convenient to you to come on Thursday next, and to stay a few days. I hope that you have no engagement to prevent your doing so. You will, I am sure, like to see this place. Both the house and the grounds are most romantic. There is a haunted chamber, but no ghosts have been seen as yet. Perhaps they are waiting till you arrive, in order to do honor to your visit. Indeed we shall all, both ghosts and living, be glad to welcome you. It is rather dull here. My uncle and Dr. Branksome are occupied all the morning over their business affairs, so that I see little of them. Mr. Fosdyke has returned to town. I assure you, I feel the contrast between this place and Scarborough. There are no bright mornings here, spent in listening to the music of the band and watching the sea in the bay.

Kindly let us know by what train you are to arrive, and you shall be met at the station. Both my uncle and Dr. Branksome desire to be remembered to you. Believe me, dear Mr. Fenton, yours very sincerely,

DAISY STANCLIFFE.

There was not much in this letter, perhaps—not much on which to build a whole castle of delightful hopes. But, such as it was, it served for me. I read it and re-read it a hundred times on that happy day, and perused my life again and again to the spot on which with her own hand she had signed her name.

The journey by rail from Scarborough to Great Lorton Hall—or, rather to Little Lorton, the nearest railway station on the Northeastern line—is a long and tedious one; for though the distance between the two places, as the crow flies, is a little more than thirty miles, there is no direct route. I learned, when I left Scarborough, that I must change carriages at Malton, and there in rust myself to the tender mercies of a local line, the trains on which, judging by the time table I had studied beforehand, were limited to non-thing like the speed attained by the old stage coaches before the locomotive had swept them out of existence.

As far as Malton my journey was swift and pleasant. I had a compartment to myself, and I spent my time in ruminating upon the past with all its memories of sweetness, and anticipating the future with the eagerness of a lover. The train into which I was transferred at Malton was a very short one. It was evident that the Lorton branch was not one of those for which the managers of the Northeastern railway deemed it necessary to make any very extensive provision.

I took my seat in the carriage to which the porter directed me and awaited the departure of the train. There were few passengers besides myself, and apparently none who were likely to travel first class. So, at least, I thought, until, almost at the moment when the train was starting, a man whose face I had seen only once before, but whom I was never likely to forget, suddenly emerged from a waiting room, and advancing quickly towards the compartment in which I was seated, entered it and closed the door behind him. It was the person whom I had knocked down in the York railway station on the day on which I first saw Daisy.

It would not have been easy then for me to leave the carriage, even if such a course had been consistent with my self-respect; I sincerely hoped, however, that my old antagonist would not recognize me. The motion of traveling in his company was anything but pleasant to me, now that I was able to regard him more attentively than I could do in the hurried encounter at York, that he was about thirty years of age, and that, while his face bore the stamp of vicious self-indulgence, it was weak rather than wicked in its expression. He was dressed in clothes of fashionable cut; but they were somewhat the worse for wear.

When he entered the carriage he had lifted his hat to me and had then seated himself in the farthest corner, where he appeared to be intently occupied in gazing out of the window upon the red tiles of the Malton houses. My hope that he did not know me again grew. It was soon dispelled. The moment the train had begun to move from the platform he turned toward me and, again lifting his hat, greeted me with a bow and an ironical smile. I said nothing, though I wondered much what his next move would be. I had not long to wait. He rose from the corner seat he had occupied and took that directly opposite to me.

DRESS DEPARTMENT

—one of the most prominent features of our business—we again venture to present our Lady friends with our views for the coming Fall and Winter.

DRESS GOODS being perhaps the most anxious item in the economy of every properly constituted DRY Goods establishment, we have this season devoted more than ordinary attention to that Department. During the season, the demand for self colored goods will be very great; among the most popular will be

SERGE CLOTHS, HABIT CLOTHS,
OTTOMAN CLOTHS, NIGGER HEAD De.,
TWEED EFFECTS,
PLAIDS and COMBINATIONS, in Checks and Stripes.

An excellent variety of TRIMMINGS AND BUTTONS TO MATCH.

MISS WINTER, our Milliner, has just returned from Toronto; with the newest goods in Millinery, and will be glad to see all her old friends and as many new ones as possible.

It is stated on good authority that Justin McCarthy will lecture in Peterborough during the third week of November.

The wet weather is putting a damper on all kinds of sport. Only the most vigorous men and reckless boys will trust the damp and slippery field.

Indian Chiefs Coming.

Rev. Wm. McDougall, Northwest Indian missionary, and three converted Indian chiefs, will hold missionary services in the Opera House on Sunday evening next.

Rowse's Trade Palace.

The work of re-modelling the interior of the old Isaac Robinson stand, George street, for Mr. O. C. Rowse, of Oshawa, is being pushed forward rapidly. Mr. Rowse expects to open out by the first of next month.

New Railway Bridge.

The G. T. R. Company has a large force of men at work rebuilding the bridge over the creek on Bethune street, near Murray. The timbers which are being laid are of a very solid character, and no doubt a substantial structure will be erected.

Souvenirs.

The crew of the steam yacht "Dot," which this summer enjoyed a month's cruise on the St. Lawrence and tributaries, have now in their possession a number of fine photographic views of scenery along the St. Lawrence and Richelieu, taken by Messrs. Jas. Little and John Miller, of the party.

Big Jubilee.

The Salvation Army soldiers propose holding a big jubilee in the barracks, Aylmer street, on Wednesday evening next. Staff-Captain Eadie, of Kingston, and officers from the surrounding village corps will take part in the proceedings. Admission 10 cents. All are invited.

Coming Events.

Persons who claim to be well posted in such things, say that there are no less than thirty-three weddings on for next month. Great guns! This does not look like a verification of the prophecy of the negro doctress who claims that the world will come to an end on September 29th.

The Ætnas Win Three Straights.

On Saturday afternoon an interesting lacrosse match was played on the Riverside Park, the third of a series between the Ætnas and the Young Riversides. The match lasted about an hour, and was witnessed by a respectable number of spectators. The Ætnas again distinguished themselves, taking three straight goals from their opponents. The Ætnas are now the acknowledged junior champions.

Well-known Racing Horse Hurt.

The Kingston News says: "While horses were being speeded Wednesday morning, a fine animal belonging to Major McLean, of the Durham Field Battery, collided with another horse and then struck a cannon. It fell to the ground and has not been able to rise to its feet. It is thought the horse, which was valued at $200, will have to be shot." "Lady Macdonald" was well known in town, having appeared on the Driving Park track, taking a leading place in running races.

Not His Own Bread.

Mr. A. Letellier, in reference to an item that appeared in the EXAMINER, stating that he lost a horse through eating sour bread, wishes us to state that the bread was not his own make. He supplied a gang of telegraph repairers with bread, and they gave him a lot of stale, soured bread they had left over. This it was that killed the horse, not Mr. Letellier's. His own bread is always sweet, palatable and wholesome. He has got the art of bread-making down—light, and there is not the slightest danger of fatal results following its use.

Was Brother Sandford Bluffing.

Brother W. E. Sanford, of Hamilton, is a truly good man, wears a long frock coat, is always slick, delights to walk about the aisles when conference is in session, or, when at home, to conduct visitors at his church to a front seat; therefore, the World's Cat would never think of saying that W. E. was only "bluffing" when he offered $50,000 for a Methodist university at Hamilton. Still it is open to the interpretation that it was a safe offer. Brother Cox, of Peterborough, went him better, and asked Brother Sandford to leave his money in the pot no matter where it went to, as he (Cox) had done, but the Hamilton gentleman weakened and declined to go in.—Toronto World.

Police Court.

The Charge Against Michael Licet, of Stealing a Watch, Dismissed—Albert Clarke of Lakefield sent to the Penetanguishene Reformatory for five years.

The charge against Michael Licet, of stealing a watch and chain from John Reardon, on Tuesday last, was disposed of at the Police Court on Saturday afternoon.

John Reardon, testified that he lost the watch on Tuesday night last. He had been at a wedding that evening and was slightly intoxicated. He sat down on the steps in front of Hall's biscuit works and fell asleep. When he awoke the watch, chain, $11 and two cents he had had in his pocket, were gone. On Wednesday he heard that Licet had been showing a watch at Simpson's hotel. Later on in the day he saw the prisoner at Freeman's hotel, wearing his chain. He told Licet that he had his watch, when the prisoner told him to take it, which he did. Chief Cooper, who had been informed by Reardon of his loss and of the party suspected, came up then. Reardon, on being asked by the Chief, gave up the watch. The Chief then arrested Licet and locked him up.

Chief Cooper gave evidence in support of the latter part of Reardon's. When he searched Licet he found one cent in his pocket. Licet explained to him that he had found the watch. He first saw the cent lying on the sidewalk, and when picking it up he saw the watch, and picked it up also.

Michael Licet stated to the court that he was going to the station about six o'clock on Wednesday morning, when he saw a cent on the sidewalk in front of Hall's biscuit works. In picking it up he saw a watch chain, which, on closer inspection, had a watch at the end of it. He showed it to several persons, and when asked to sell it said, "No, if I can't find the owner, I'll keep it."

Wm. Morgan testified that he saw the prisoner with the watch at Simpson's hotel on Wednesday morning. Licet said he had a watch stolen from him a year ago, but this one was not going to be stolen.

Mr. Halpin testified that Licet wore the chain at his place on Wednesday. He asked him if he would sell the watch, and he said he would not. He said nothing of finding the watch. He had known the prisoner for years as an honest man.

W. Logan also testified as to the honesty of the prisoner.

The magistrate in summing up the evidence, pointed out to the prisoner that he should have advertised the watch when he found it. He then dismissed the charge, warning Licet to be more careful in the future.

Mr. R. E. Wood, conducted the case for the Crown.

A BAD BOY.

Albert Clarke, of Lakefield, a boy of thirteen years of age, who was brought to town in charge of Mr. Geo. Cochrane, and who some time ago was before the court as an incorrigible and vicious youth, was arraigned before the court again, this time charged by Samuel Griffin with having stolen $3 from him, and by Capt. Allingham of the Salvation army on a similar offence.

The young prisoner boldly walked up to the Magistrate's desk and pleaded guilty to both charges.

Mr. Cochrane gave evidence as to the bad character of the boy. He stated that he was a very bad and vicious youngster, up to all kinds of mischief, and his mother could do nothing with him. She wanted him sent to the Reformatory.

The Magistrate, after pointing out to Clark the error of his ways and advising him to be a good boy in the future, sentenced him to five years in the Penetanguishe Reformatory.

FIFTY AND COSTS.

Geo. German was summoned before the court, charged with a breach of the Scott Act. He did not appear in court nor was he represented by counsel, and the case was proceeded with in his absence.

Inspector Cochrane and Chief Cooper testified that in searching German's premises under a warrant, they found several bottles of whiskey behind his bar, while the beer pumps were in working order.

The Magistrate found the defendant guilty, and imposed a fine of $50 and costs.

MONDAY, Sept. 13.

Thomas Howden, of Douro, was arraigned before the court this morning, charged by Alexander Watt with the larceny of a ram sheep. The defendant pleaded not guilty.

Mr. R. E. Wood, who appeared for the crown, asked for an enlargement till to-morrow, as the witnesses required had not been subpœnaed. The enlargement was granted.

SCOTT ACT CASE.

Hugh Ray, of Ashburnham, was called before the court, charged by Inspector Darling with having kept liquor for sale between the 15th of June and 9th September, contrary to the terms of the Scott Act. The defendant pleaded not guilty.

Several witnesses testified that they drank Moxie, and other soft drinks at Ray's hotel.

The magistrate dismissed the charge with costs.

Address and Presentation.

One of our New Business Citizens Honored

The Oshawa Reformer of Sept. 10th has the following in reference to Mr. O. C. Rowse, who will shortly open a dry goods shop in the Isaac Robinson stand, George street:

"Last evening, the teachers and officers of the Simcoe Street Methodist Sabbath School were invited to attend the residence of Mr. J. W. Higginbotham, to spend a social evening together, and to make a presentation to one of their number, Mr. O. C. Rowse, before his departure from town. The object of meeting was kept an entire secret and Mr. Rowse was taken completely by surprise. The present was a beautiful Bible, purchased by Rev. Mr. Manning, (formerly of the Charlotte street church, town), while in Toronto, for the occasion. The remainder of the evening was spent in games, singing, and having a good time generally; in which Mr. and Mrs. Higginbotham did their utmost to make their guest comfortable. The following is the address, which was read by Mr. J. E. Ellis, Secretary of the school, after which Mr. Rowse made a suitable reply:—

OSHAWA, Sept. 9th, 1886.

To O. C. Rowse, Esq.:—

DEAR BROTHER,—We, the teachers and officers of Simcoe street Methodist Sabbath School, on this the eve of your departure for a new sphere of labour, feel to express our regret that you are called upon, in the order of Divine Providence, to sever you connection with us, and take the present opportunity of conveying to you our appreciation of your earnest efforts in behalf of our School. Your zeal has been commendable, you have always been found at the post of duty, and we shall miss you from our councils. We ask you to accept this token of our love and esteem for you, and pray that He, who is the rewarder of all good deeds will ever keep and prosper you.

We remain, on behalf of the School,

Rev. T. Manning, Pastor; J. W. Higginbotham, Superintendent; Fred. E. Ellis, Secretary, J. R. Bietle, S. H. Wyatt, Teachers.

A Correction.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—I feel called upon to correct certain false statements that have gone abroad in this town. I do so reluctantly, as strictly private business must be referred to.

I settled here to do a general agency business for a large firm, intending to board. Failing into quarters not suitable, we resolved to rent a house and have our own home, "be it ever so humble or ever so poor." We could be sure of cleanliness and wholesome food, if not of elegant surroundings, and that is something in a Christian country. How to accomplish it, as no provision had been made, was the question waiting for solution. We are not without intimate friends and relatives in business and in the profession, though at present I am short of money, having lost thousands through others. To ask favors or run into debt I would not. "Necessity is the mother of invention," so we resolved to "paddle our own canoe," if only a bark one.

My wife, like a true and heroic woman, which she is, said, "I can help to furnish a house. My physician has told me to take much outdoor exercise. I can make money by introducing certain articles universally used in houses in the States, but little known here; articles that I have used for two years, and know them to be desirable. If any one asks questions, I'll tell my name, give my address, tell who we are and what we are."

Dozens of questions would be asked for it is rather unusual for ladies to do this kind of work in Canada, though I know a lady who lived in a mansion and was the wife of an M. P.P., doing it, and she possesses the ability withal to hold up her dignity and moves in good society. At any rate, whatever the opinion may be, a lady has a right to enter upon this work if she desires, without suffering any injustice.

The information she gave was intended to be truthful—and was really so, and was given in good faith to explain her position, in answer chiefly to questions. The lying gossip that different stories were told, and illigitimate means adopted is absurd on the face of it, and will be disproved if need be. This has been taken to the press unlawfully. Unless restitution is made it don't stop now. Every sentence here is true, as I may have to affirm in Court, and is guarded accordingly.

It seems two or three slight mistakes were made. Mr. Trout, a very successful teacher of technical drawing, was a pupil of mine. Mr. Sawyer's name was quoted instead, both having followed similar occupations. As a matter of fact, I have been at the head of commercial education in two important cities; the one being Ottawa, which I am told Mr. Sawyer attended, but not in my time.

Among many others, Mrs. Nicholls, a wealthy lady of this town, was called on, but declined any patronage. Asking many questions, she was shown a bona fide list of names got up by another lady, and was told that Mrs. Buller had kindly promised to see Rev. Mrs. Beck to make up a joint list of their acquaintances. The object was to facilitate the work. Mrs. Nicholls finds Mrs. Beck, and Mrs. Beck finds the newspaper, and the newspaper finds the public to save the world from a gigantic fraud, a second "South Sea Bubble," viz: a respectable woman, a citizen actuated by a noble motive, a person giving value for money received, saying ladies were helping her kindly. Is comment needed? Burns said: "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn." He might have said: "Woman's inhumanity to woman makes countless thousands mourn," but I suppose woman was included. "Charity suffereth long and is kind." "Charity thinketh no evil." "If I give all my goods to feed the poor and have not charity, it is as sounding brass." By charity is meant religion, just simply the Christian religion.

Yours truly,
S. S. CANN.

Condolence.

The following vote of condolence was passed at the regular monthly meeting of L. O. L. No. 80:—

C. W. Sawers, Esq., W. M. of L. O. L. No. 80:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—We, the members of L. O. L. No. 80, in lodge assembled, hereby tender you our heartfelt sympathy in your serious and trying circumstances caused by the sad accident which befell Mrs. Sawers, prostrating her, for an indefinite period, on a bed of suffering. May she be endowed with fortitude to bear up in this trying ordeal.

And also your own serious illness which has incapacitated you from performing your onerous duties.

Dear sir, we have sadly missed your genial and brotherly presence at our fraternal meetings, where you were always wont to cheer and encourage us, and ever ready to promote the interests of our noble Order.

But we humbly pray that the great I Am will speedily restore Mrs. Sawers and yourself to health and strength, and enable you to perform your several duties (social and otherwise) for many years to come, and crown your efforts with prosperity and happiness, health and strength in this life, and a crown of glory in that which is to come.

Signed on behalf of the brethren of No. 80,

M. A. JAMIESON, D.M.

Rev. John Power, of Janetville, preached in the George Street Methodist Church on Sunday morning, and in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church in the evening, delivering interesting and impressive sermons.

It was announced in the Methodist church on Sunday, that during the next five weeks, while the alterations are being made in the edifice, in preparing for the new organ, etc., the services will be held in the basement of the church.

Rev. E. F. Torrance, conducted the services in St. Paul's Church on Sunday, for the first time since his visit to Europe. A Mad Dog.

Excitement ran high at the west end Brock street on Sunday afternoon, when a large black dog, owned by Mr. Samuel Anglesye, which had been ailing for several days, to all intents and purposes, became mad. He became reckless, his tongue lolled out, while he frothed at the mouth as if he were chewing soap, and finally rushed around the neighborhood as if in great pain, but fortunately did not attempt to bite any person. A call to arms was made, and several guns were brought to bear upon the animal. A charge of 24 buckshot in the head only seem to increase the dog's madness, and it was not till four more charges had been lodged in his body that he finally succumbed, to the great relief of residents of the neighborhood.

LAW OF EVICTIONS.

CONTENTS OF A LOYALIST PAMPHLET JUST ISSUED.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The Irish Loyal and Patriotic Union has issued a pamphlet on the Irish question for the use of members of the House of Commons and the press: "The status of the Irish tenant farmer," says the pamphlet, "has within the past sixteen years undergone a marked amelioration owing to various remedial statutes. There has certainly been a fall in prices, but everything considered there is nothing especially bad in Irish agriculture. The Irish enjoy greater advantages of tenure than other people. With improved methods there is reason to look to the future with confidence." Here figures are quoted showing that full advantage is taken of the right to sell interest in holdings. The pamphlet continues: "Laying aside rhetorical bosh it is necessary to state concisely the actual facts regarding eviction. By the land act of 1881, a tenant cannot possibly be evicted unless he refuses to pay rent or does not comply with certain statutory conditions not forming an imaginary grievance. Ejectment for non-payment of rent cannot be brought for less than a year's rent actually due. If an ejectment be brought the tenant may redeem the property at any time within six months after the execution of the writ, or may within the same period sell the tenancy after the writ has been executed to anybody, and the purchaser may redeem the property. Many other advantages are possessed by tenants. Therefore an eviction is dangerous and costly to the landlord, and is practised only in extreme cases. If a year's rent should fall during September or November the landlord does not get a decree until the January sessions, and six months more must elapse before he can gain possession of the land. The landlord is then liable to the tenant for the crops, so that nearly two years must elapse before he fully recovers his tenancy."

Provisions of Mr. Parnell's Bill.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The Parnell Land Bill as redrafted suspends evictions on payments into court of half the rent due. Many Gladstonians disapprove of the amount of the reduction. The Parnellites assert that the full values justify a demand of over 50 per cent. reduction. Mr. Parnell, in conference with John Morley, urged a reduction of 75 per cent., but on Mr. Morley's advice he limited the reduction to 50 per cent. Leaseholds are included in the bill. The Government's response will be that Mr. Parnell's data are inaccurate; that the Dublin executive returns of market values for 1885-86 show that the reduction in prices in Ireland is less than in England and Scotland, ranging from 10 to 15 per cent. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach and Lord Randolph Churchill will deny that the bulk of the Irish tenants will be unable to pay their rents in November or that a host of evictions are probable. The second reading of the Parnell Bill will take place on Friday. Mr. Gladstone has privately announced that he will return to London on Saturday and that he hopes to take part in the debate on Monday. It is understood that he will support the Parnell Bill. His promised presence is already rallying the Gladstonians. The Unionist whips have sent an appeal to Unionist members in the country to return to London and vote against the bill. The Government also insists upon the recall of absentees. Conservative attempts to curtail the debate to one night will be in vain. The debate will probably extend over four nights.

A Priest to Go to Prison.

DUBLIN, Sept. 13.—Father Fahey, a Catholic priest of Woodford, was arraigned to-day on a charge of having threatened the owner of property in Woodford from which the tenant had been evicted. He was found guilty, and the court gave him the choice of giving bail for his good behavior for six months, or of going to prison for the same period. He chose the latter alternative.

RIFLE SHOOTING IN THE STATES.

Annual Meeting of the National Association of America.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The fourteenth annual contest of the National Rifle Association of America opened at Creedmore to-day with the usual first day's attendance, and was ushered in by a terrific wind that blew a gale across the ranges at the rate of twenty miles an hour. This prevented the early morning pool shooting. There are seventeen matches on the program, most of which are continuous, lasting the week. At the end of this time the winners will be made known. The only match finished to-day was the Wimbledon cup match, presented by the National Rifle Association of Great Britain to the N.A.R. of America. The cup was carried off by J. W. Todd, who made 115 points out of a possible 150 at a distance of 1000 yards. This makes three consecutive years that Todd has won the cup, and it is now his property. F. H. Holton made 112 points and S. J. Dolan scored 109 points with a military rifle. The Governor's match, open to all comers, distance 500 yards, continues throughout the week. H. Rabbeth of Boston made the full possible score twice (35).!

Pacific Line of Steamers.

MONTREAL, Sept. 13. In regard to the question in his investigation, "have any steps been taken by the English Government towards aiding the establishment of a Pacific line of steamers?" Sir Charles Tupper said: "I saw the Secretary of State for War and also the Colonial Minister of the new Government, and they both expressed themselves as strongly in favor of it. They hope to be able to obtain from Parliament approval of the proposal and to subsidise the line of steamers before the present session closes."

Coming Back to Canada.

MONTREAL, Sept. 13.—A scheme is on foot having for its object the bringing back to Canada the Canadians now in the States. Wealthy Canadian families located in Lowell and Lawrence, Mass., having decided to found a colony in the valley of the Ottawa, two delegates were chosen to arrange preliminaries and to interview the Montreal Colonization Society. The choice of the delegates fell upon La Lievre and La Rouge valleys, where they expect to take up from 25,000 to 50,000 acres of land.

A Board of Labor Arbitrators.

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.—In connection with the Bureau of Labor statistics which the Government proposes to establish shortly it is probable that there will be also a board of arbitrators, whose duty it will be to deal with disputes arising between employer and employed. A commission will be appointed to determine the best means to be employed in accomplishing the objects in view in the establishment of the bureau. The report of this commission will likely be presented to Parliament at its next session.

Wash hair brushes and combs in soft water and liquid ammonia in the proportion of four teaspoonfuls of liquid ammonia to one quart of water.

RUSSIA AND AUSTRIA.

AN EXCHANGE OF COMPLIMENTS AT CLOSE QUARTERS.

VIENNA, Sept. 13.—Although Emperor Francis Joseph is at Prasnysh in Galicia and the Czar at Brest Litovsk in Poland, not more than 250 kilometres apart, neither has given sign of a desire or intention of meeting the other. In fact neither has sent the other greetings even by deputy.

The Neue Freie Presse complains of the Czar's breach of courtesy towards Austria. It says it is noteworthy that the Russian military manœuvres are taking place at the precise corner of the Russian domain which would be the principal theatre of war in the event of a Russian conflict with Austria. Emperor Francis Joseph is at the same time reviewing an equal number of Austrian troops, the total being over 60,000 men, at the point which would naturally be chosen as the Austrian base of operations in the same event. "Thus we see," says the Neue Freie Presse, "two rival camps and two rival courts almost within sight of each other."

Russia Replies to Bulgaria.

SOFIA, Sept. 14.—The National Assembly met to-day. The Russian agent has received the Czar's reply to Bulgaria's proposals. The Czar says Russia will recognize the Bulgarian regency and consent to the union of Bulgaria and Eastern Roumelia, on condition that no acts of violence be committed. Russia advises that public opinion in Bulgaria be allowed to calm down before a new prince be elected to the Bulgarian throne. Russia has not yet communicated the Czar's reply to the Bulgarian Government because the relations with the present Bulgarian ministers are very strained. During the sitting of the National Assembly to-day several of the deputies proposed that the Bulgarian Government send a telegram to the Czar requesting him to communicate with the Bulgarian Government direct instead of through an agent.

Francis Joseph and Nicholas.

VIENNA, Sept. 13.—The Emperor Francis Joseph yesterday at a banquet given by officers of the army participating in the manœuvers at the camp at Lublin, proposed the health of the Czar, which was responded to with cheers, which the band re-echoed by playing the Russian anthem. News of this reaching the Czar at Brest Litovsk, in Poland, he at once telegraphed his thanks, and the telegram reached the Austrian Emperor during the night.

ANOTHER FISHERY QUESTION.

France and England Seizing Each Other's Vessels in the Channel.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—The French authorities at Havre have just seized eleven English fishing boats for infringing international maritime and fisheries laws in the Channel. Le Paris says the boats were seized in reprisal for recent arrests by British authorities of French fishing boats off Folkestone on the other side of the channel.

The Matter in Parliament.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—James Round, (Conservative) M.P. for Harwich, has given notice of his intention to call the attention of the Government in the House of Commons to the seizure by the French authorities at Havre of English fishing vessels.

Why the English Vessels Were Arrested.

HAVRE, Sept. 13.—The English fishing boats arrested by the authorities here were taken into custody for infringing the law which forbids foreign fishing vessels to enter French ports, except when compelled to by stress of weather or want of provisions. It is denied that the arrests partake of the nature of reprisals for the arrests of French fishermen in English waters.

Their Release Requested.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Sir J. Ferguson, Under Foreign Secretary, stated in the House of Commons this evening that the Government had sent orders to Lord Lyons, the British Ambassador at Paris, to use all possible efforts to obtain the release of the British fishing boats detained at Havre.

CUFFE THE BAILIFF.

A Dozen Suffering Women Hardly Use Him.

DUBLIN, Sept. 14.—William Cuffe, a bailiff, who had made himself very obnoxious by his cruel treatment of a woman whom he recently evicted, went early to attend mass in Belcarra Chapel. When the men and women of the congregation who were in the chapel noticed Cuffe's presence they became very indignant and the men dragged him from the building. When they had him outside they turned him over to the women who were begging for a chance at him. Among these women were twelve that Cuffe had evicted. These women were furious, and they fell upon the bailiff and beat him unmercifully. Subsequently the priest, who is also president of the local branch of the National League, admitted the battered bailiff to hear mass, and this mercy for the unfortunate has almost caused a rebellion against the priest.

A Rebuke for Lord Randolph.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The Scottish Protestant Alliance will meet to consider Lord Randolph Churchill's reply to its protest against the appointment of Henry Matthews to the Home Secretaryship, which was brought on the ground that he was a Roman Catholic. The Rev. James Paton, Director of the Alliance, has addressed a letter to Lord Randolph Churchill, in which he says: "You have penned an insolent reply to a respectful public document. Although you are now a cabinet minister we observe with astonishment and regret that you have not laid aside those weapons of abuse with which you tomahawked your way to power. It is a national calamity when men pitchforked into high positions are destitute of decent manners." Mr. Paton concludes his letter by saying that the alliance founded its protest upon the same grounds as those upon which the exclusion of Roman Catholics from the throne is founded.

The Crimes of a Forger.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13. Claude B. Lassel, jr., has been arrested here for forgery in Boston. After his pardon from the New Jersey State Prison in 1885, it is stated he went to Boston, claimed to be a reformed criminal and secured the confidence of the Y. M. C. A. officials. He persuaded them to start a reformed convicts home with him as manager, and finally got two checks cashed for $250 each, which were forged with the name of Jennie W. Lassell, daughter of his benefactor, and he then eloped with that young woman to Providence. He married her, passed several forged checks there, and went to New York, Norfolk, Va., and Chicago, operating in each place in a similar way.

English Funds for Charleston Sufferers.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The Lord Mayor of London has received a letter from Mr. Phelps, the U. S. Minister, forwarding a cable message from Secretary Bayard expressing the President's grateful acknowledgements for the gracious action of the Lord Mayor and the city of London in behalf of the Charleston sufferers. N. M. Rothschilds & Sons have contributed £500 and Baron Rothschilds the same amount to the relief fund. Probably a large sum will be realized.

THE LOYALTY OF THE CHURCH.

An Address from the Provincial Synod to Her Majesty on Her Jubilee.

MONTREAL, Sept. 13.—At to-day's Provincial Synod a motion was carried for the appointment of a committee to draft an address to the Queen on her fiftieth anniversary.

Debate was resumed upon the memorial presented by St. Paul's Church, Portland, regarding its difficulty with the Bishop of Fredericton, and after discussion a resolution was adopted to the effect that the Provincial Synod do not interfere in the matter for the simple reason that it had no power to enforce any decision to which it might come to, and that the question of law which was involved had not clearly been defined.

A message was read from the House of Bishops, placing upon record their deep sense of regret at the great loss sustained by the Church in Western Canada by the death of Bishop Fuller, first Bishop of Niagara.

A resolution was passed recommending to the different diocesan synods the necessity of renewing their pledges for the stipends of the Diocese of Algoma which expire in July 1887.

The proposed canon on deaconesses or sisterhoods was adopted with amendments after considerable discussion, which showed a considerable difference of opinion in the Synod.

The House of Bishops sent a message stating that they had appointed a committee to confer with similar committees appointed from other Christian bodies, to devise, if possible, an honorable union amongst these bodies.

Considerable discussion took place on the memorial from the Diocese of Toronto asking that the Provincial Synod authorize the use of the revised edition of the Old and New Testament at morning and evening prayer. The House of Bishops rejected the memorial and when it came before the Synod Rev. Mr. Baldwin withdrew it.

The following were appointed by the House of Bishops as a board of enquiry for the trial of bishops: S. Bethune, Q.C., Hon. E. Blake, R. W. Heneker, Canon Bagstock, Dr. Henderson, Rev. Drs. Partridge, Vereschoyle, Crony and Canon Dumoulin. Assessors to the Metropolitan Court of Appeal were also appointed, being Hon. George Irvine, S. Bethune, Q.C., and R. T. Walkem.

THE GENERAL ELECTIONS.

It will be erring on the safe side for the Liberals to be ready for the general elections this year. Contrary to the general expectation, the rebuffs of Chambly and Haldimand seem to be likely to precipitate rather than postpone the election of a new House of Commons. It is stated, on good authority, that the Government is at present having in consideration the wisdom of bringing on the general elections this fall. It is, moreover, said that, before the Haldimand contest, so sure was the Government of success, the necessary blank writs and all other necessary papers were made out. The miscalculation of the result in this case has, however, disarranged the programme temporarily. But it will soon be known what is the intention of the Government in the matter. Last Saturday a full Cabinet council, was called to determine the question. Sir John evidently looks forward with dismay to another session of the present Parliament. The last session was so fruitful in unearthing scandals tending to compromise the Government and to damage its reputation, that, it is reasoned, he will let bad enough alone and go to the country, unembarrassed by at least the ugly revelations another session might evolve. Sir John is losing in prestige every day. He still relies upon Ontario and the trend of public opinion is not in the direction of increased popularity. We shall speedily know what course the Premier will pursue; at least the course will have been decided on, but the Liberals cannot be expected to be enlightened upon the subject. Sir John would dearly love to catch the Liberals napping. To avoid this it would be well to be prepared for either emergency. If immediate preparation is made, there can be no harm done, even if the general elections should not be brought on at once. The labor will not be wasted, for next year, at the longest, the elections must be held; the dissolution of the present parliament will have been effected by the effluxion of time. Organization, if completed now, though not called into operation this year, will be in a condition to be perfected by the coming year. Liberals, you have a wily enemy to deal with; to be continually ready is the only way of successfully meeting the emergency, whenever it may come.

"COLLEGE FEDERATION."

Dean Swift's far-fetched conceit of the extraction of sunbeams from cucumbers, is not a circumstance to the ingenuity displayed by the senior local Tory organ, and its journalistic allies in the manufacture of political capital. The political fortunes of the party are at so low an ebb that no subject, sacred or profane, is safe from being dragged into the political arena. The subject of College Federation, as recently discussed at the General Conference of the Methodist Church, is one of strictly denominational interest, but the Review and other Tory organs seek to divert it into the muddy channel of partizan politics. As is well known, the project received the endorsation of the Conference, and it may be put down as the settled policy of the church, whose decision on the subject should be treated with respect. But for the sake of a stab at the Mowat administration and to make political capital, our contemporary devotes a large portion of its space to show that the Conference did not know what it was about when it pronounced in favor of College Federation. For this purpose one of the most bitter speeches made upon the subject is largely quoted. The publication of this slightly unclerical and scrimonious address, after the decision of the subject, can have been for no other object than political gain. The speech itself is a remarkable one in more respects than one. It is of remarkable ability, but throughout its length it is marred by singular bitterness and personal feeling, considering the speaker and the occasion. The covert, as well as the overt, attacks on Rev. Dr. Dewart did not convey the lesson of charitable forbearance to an opponent, one is accustomed to expect. And the failure of the address to accomplish the end sought shows that the majority of one of the most intelligent deliberative bodies ever assembled in Toronto, was not—to borrow the language of the politicians—to be "bulldozed" into adopting the reversed speaker's views, contrary to the interests of the Methodist church and of higher education. Those who heard Dr. Sutherland during the session of the conference here, upon the subject of Union, can have some idea of the tone which he adopted in his address upon College Federation. In striking contrast was the calm, grave, argumentative address of Rev. Dr. Dewart, which carried conviction, not only by the able and logical array of fact and argument, but also by the singleness and honesty of purpose shown for the promotion of the best educational interests of the church. But Dr. Dewart whose position on this great question, the General Conference of the Methodist church has adopted, happens to be Liberal in his political sympathies, while Dr. Sutherland's political creed is Conservative. This is enough for the Review and its political confreres. It is their cue to attempt to invest a great church problem with the bitterness and slime of political taint—all, of course, in the interests of the Conservative party. It seems to be gall and wormwood to our contemporary that Hon. Mr. Mowat's proposal on the subject of confederation should have secured the sympathy of the General Conference of the MetLodist church, and it would discredit and belittle the decision of the conference, simply because Hon. Mr. Mowat had the foresight and fairness to support a proposal that met the approval of that body. For the past fourteen years the Review and its allies have been vainly endeavouring to dislodge Mr. Mowat from power and from his place in the hearts of the people, and no subject is too sacred, no interest too great, to save it from being degraded to petty and unworthy political purposes.

NELSON-LADY HAMILTON.

If time were all we need to say, we cannot have little excuse for thrusting the painful history upon public notice. The last act of the tragedy is, as usual, the most melancholy and instructive. The career of Lady Hamilton ends fitly for mankind, woefully and dreadfully for her.

Upon the return of Sir William Hamilton and his wife to England, after their heavy losses in Naples, the former petitioned Government for compensation, and the latter parted with her jewels to support both until such compensation should be granted. Before it came Sir William died. Dying, he commissioned his nephew, the Hon. Mr. Greville, to pray to his Majesty for a continuation of his pension to his wife after his decease, in consideration of her zeal and services. The zeal and services, however, were never recognised.

On the 21st day of October, 1805, and on board the Victory, "then in sight of the combined fleets of France and Spain, distant about 10 miles," Lord Nelson retired to his cabin and made a codicil to his will. He recorded the services performed by Lady Hamilton (the reader is acquainted with them), and then wrote as follows:

"Could I have rewarded those services, I would not now call upon my country; but as that has not been in my power, I leave Emma Lady Hamilton, therefore, a legacy to my King and country, that they will give her an ample provision to maintain her rank in life.

"I also leave to the beneficence of my country my adopted daughter, Horatio Nelson Thompson; and I desire she will use in future the name of Nelson only. These are the only favors I ask of my King and country at this moment when I am going to fight their battle.

"May God bless my King and country, and all those who I loved dear. My relations, it is needless to mention; they will, of course, be amply provided for."

Within a few hours of his signing the document Nelson lay upon a bed, stripped of his clothes and covered with a sheet. A shot from the mizentop of the Redoutable had done its work. As the men placed the wounded here on his back, he looked round for Dr. Scott. "Doctor," he said, "I told you so—I am gone." And after a short pause he added in a low voice, "I have to leave Lady Hamilton and my adopted daughter Horatio as a legacy to my country."

An hour and a quarter afterwards Captain Hardy was at his side.

"I hope," said the dying man, "none of our ships have struck, Hardy?" "No, my lord," replied Captain Hardy, "there is no fear of that." Lord Nelson then said, "I am a dead man, Hardy. I am going fast, it will be all over with me soon. Come nearer to me. Pray let my dear Lady Hamilton have my hair, and all other things belonging to me."

Another hour elapsed, and Hardy was at the bedside again. He told the captain "he felt that in a few minutes he should be no more," and added in a low tone, "Don't throw me overboard, Hardy." The captain answered, "O, never, never." "Then," replied Nelson, "you know what to do. Take care of my dear Lady Hamilton; take care of poor Lady Hamilton!"

A few minutes more and Nelson uttered his last words. They were: "Thank God, I have done my duty!" But the words that immediately preceded them were the old plaintive sounds: "Remember Dr. Scott, that I leave lady Hamilton and my daughter Horatio as a legacy to my country. Never forget Horatio."

Nelson's codicil proved waste paper. His last imploring accents passed into the air. Lady Hamilton derived no help from either. We do not apologise for the Government that took no heed of the last breath of Nelson; but on behalf of humanity, we ask pardon for the treachery of the man who kept back the codicil. Captain Blackwood, faithful to his friend, brought home that document after the Battle of Trafalgar, and placed it in the hands of the Rev. William Nelson, the brother of the Admiral, and subsequently Earl of the name. At this period the rev. gentleman, his wife and family, were residing with Lady Hamilton, and had partaken of her hospitality for many months. Indeed, for six years his daughter had been consigned exclusively to Lady Hamilton's care. The rev. gentleman, fearful that the codicil would affect the sum about to be voted by Parliament for Lord Nelson's family, quietly kept it in his pocket until the day when £120,000 were duly voted for their support. On that day he dined with Lady Hamilton in Charges-street, and with the satisfaction of a man amply provided for, produced the paper, and sarcastically told his hostess to do what she liked with it. Lady Hamilton registered it at Doctors'-Commons the very next day; there it has been ever since, and may be seen any day by the curious reader upon the payment of one shilling.

It is, perhaps, hardly necessary to add, that all the good and great people who flocked round Lady Hamilton during the life-time of Nelson, became all at once shocked at the improprieties of a lady left destitute. As for the Rev. William Nelson who tumbled into the title and fortune which Lady Hamilton had helped to earn, that respectable gentleman very properly removed his daughter from her instructress's roof, without even condescending to give the usual quarter's notice. In the year 1801 the Rev. William Nelson, writing to Lady Hamilton, took occasion to observe that—

"Now we have secured the peerage, we have only one thing to ask, and that is, my promotion in the Church, handsomely and honorably, such as becomes Lord Nelson's brother and heir-apparent to the title. No put-off with small, beggarly stalls. Mr. Addington must be kept steady to that point. I am sure Nelson is doing everything for him. But a word is enough for your good, sensible heart."

In 1805 there was nothing to ask, and the Rev. Mr. Nelson forgot that Lady Hamilton had a heart at all.

Nothing to ask, did we say? Yes, there was bread to ask for a fallen and a starving woman. Not far from the Merton turnpike, and within a few miles from London, there is to be seen a field, upon which once stood the home of Nelson and his mistress. It was left, with its debts and liabilities, to Lady Hamilton. These were large enough, for extravagance accompanied the meridian of her life, as it had characterised the dawn. The Government proving obdurate to the last, the owners of Merton was dismissed from the place. She went to Richmond, and then took temporary lodgings in Bond-street. Hence she was chased by importunate creditors, and for a time hid herself from the world. In 1813 we find her imprisoned in the Kings' Bench, but charitably liberated therefrom by a city alderman. Threatened again with arrest by a coachman, in sickness of heart the unhappy woman escaped to Calais. Here the English interpreter gave the refugee a small and wretchedly furnished house. What follows completes the romance of Lady Hamilton's life. There is sublimity in the moral.

An English lady in Calais was in the habit of ordering meat daily for a favorite dog. She was met on one occasion at the butcher's shop by the English interpreter. "Ah, madame, madame," said M. de Rheims, "I know you to be good to the English. There is a lady here that would be glad of the worst bit of meat you provide for your dog." M. de Rheims received permission to supply the poor woman with whatever she needed, but he dared not reveal the sufferer's name, for he had promised secrecy, and she was too proud to see visitors. Through the charitable kindness of the English lady (let her name be recorded for the credit of her countrywomen; she resided in Brighton and her name was Hunter), wine and food were supplied to the pauper until she became too ill either to eat or drink. M. de Rheims entreated the poor wretch again and again to see the lady who had been so good to her. Finally she said she would, if the lady were not a woman of title. Mrs. Hunter came—the poor patient thanked and blessed her—and so Lady Hamilton died: "beautiful," says her humane visitor, "even in death."

Is the lesson told? Not yet. Mrs. Hunter desired to bury the remains according to English custom. She was laughed at for her importunities upon the subject, and Emma Hamilton was placed in a deal box without inscription, her pall being a black petticoat stitched on a white curtain. No English Protestant clergyman could be found in Calais, but an Irish half-pay officer was sent for, and he read the service. Again, and [illegible] he was heard in the [illegible]; it could not be a public cemetery in 1805, and Lady Hamilton had found her resting place in the January of the preceding year.

"The Earl of Nelson," (it is written) "went over to demand Lady Hamilton's property, but found only the depletion of trinkets, etc., pledged, and which he wished to take away without payment. He declined proposing any expenses that had been incurred."

Pity ending to the poor nursery maid's history!

"Well, my friend!" he said, cool with the disagreeable smile upon his lips. "You did not expect to see me to-day, did you? I suppose I have given you the best of your game though that I was fool enough to drive away by this time—too far to disturb you in your operations."

He apparently expected me to make some reply to this, for he ceased to speak, and contented himself with staring into my face in an extentatiously offensive manner.

"You really have the advantage of me," I said. "I don't know what you are talking about."

"Oh, indeed!" he laughed mockingly. "You did not even know what you were doing when you tried to murder me at York, I suppose."

"Don't talk nonsense, sir," I replied hotly. "You know that you struck me first."

"Possibly; and you, sir, know why you refused to allow me to enter that carriage in which I had a better right to be than yourself, or any other man living." He spoke with a savage emphasis which I should hardly have expected from one whose face betokened so much weakness of character.

What was his right to enter the carriage where Daisy was? I confess that my heart was beating more quickly as I put this question to myself.

"Oh, make no mistake!" he continued, recovering at the sound of his own voice. "I know you all. I know your game. Shall I tell you what it is? Don't think that I am afraid of any of you—neither of you, nor of Brankscme, nor of Flinter—no, nor of Miss Stanciffe's either! It's a pretty name, Stancliffe, isn't so? And she has a pretty face, too. I——her and all of you."

My blood grew suddenly hot. "If you say anything more about the young lady, sir, I shall do again what I did at York."

He laughed insultingly. "No, you won't," he said, "Oh, no, you won't! Your game now is not to kill me, but to find out how much I know. Well, guess, and I'll tell you if you are right. But as for the young lady, leave her to me. Unless you are a greater fool than I take you to be, you know that my right to talk about her comes before yours."

Not for a moment did I credit the monstrous insinuation contained in his words. And yet there was a keen pain at my heart as I listened to him.

"Now look here," he continued; "I want to tell you, Mr.—why, I don't even know your name. I never saw you before that day at York. You are the newest recruit, I suppose. But never mind your name. I've seen you with the whole gang—with her, and with Flinder and with all the rest—and I know you are one of them. So just let me tell you that I am on your track. You thought it a clever thing to bury yourselves down in the wolds of Yorkshire, I suppose. You could do anything in a haunted old house, half a dozen miles from anywhere, and fear no awkward inquiries. Oh, I've seen the place, and I congratulate you on the taste you have shown. A capital place it is upon my soul, for such work as yours."

"Either explain yourself," I cried angrily, "or be silent. You talk like a madman."

"Well, if I were mad it would not be wonderful; but, as it happens, I am as sane as you are. So I will explain myself, by G——, and clearly, too. There is murder going to be done at the place to which you are now going, and you know it! Is that enough?"

"There is murder going to be done."

I smiled incredulously. He really is mad, was the thought that flashed across my mind.

"Oh, you laugh; but you will laugh in another way yet. I am on your track, I tell you, and when the time comes I'll strike. Tell that to your friends. Tell it to Brankscme; tell it to Flinter; tell it to Fosdyke; and, above all, tell it to Miss Stancliffe. Say that I told you that I'll bring every one of you—every one, mind—to the gallows yet. Go on with your hellish plots, and see how they will succeed now that I'm kept out of them. That is my message to your friends. Take it to them without fail; tell it to them exactly as I have told it to you, and prepare, every one of you, for the worst!"

I had no doubt in my mind now as to his being mad. The change in his face would have alone convinced me of that fact. His eyes literally blazed with the passion that had possession of him. But his words had moved me also to something like passion.

"And who are you, sir, that you dare to talk in this way to me? What is all this raving about, and from what asylum have you escaped?"

In a moment he was perfectly calm. "You are a new hand at the business altogether," he said—"just sworn in, eh?" with a malicious chuckle. "But if you want to know my name, I'll tell you. It is James Gregson, and James Gregson has given you your orders, which you'll please to carry out."

The train was slackening speed at a wayside station a few miles from Malton. My companion nodded his head with emphasis, as though to enforce his words, and then, almost before I was aware, he had opened and closed the door, and I found myself alone again. Hardly had he gone than my attention was attracted by something lying on the floor—something which had evidently fallen from his pocket as he leaped from the carriage. I picked it up. It was a photograph of Daisy, apparently taken a year or two before. The likeness was unmistakable. I turned the card and saw the name of a Sydney photographer printed upon it. There was something more. Faintly written in pencil were the words "Daisy Stancliffe, alias ——." Some other name had been written after the "alias," but either purposely or by accidental friction—for the photograph had evidently, from its appearance, been carried in Gregson's pocket for a considerable period—the second name had been obliterated.

I had enough and more than enough to think of during the tedious remainder of my journey to Little Lorton.

CHAPTER VI.

GREAT LORTON HALL.

When I alighted at the railway station I saw a smart dog cart standing by the roadside, and no sooner had I mentioned my destination to the porter than my portmanteau was placed in this vehicle. It was a drive of nearly four miles to Mauleverer's house. The country through which we passed looked beautiful in the early autumn, from which it is now worn. There were distant views of blue hills, and near at hand long meadows sloping to where a little river meandered down a gentle valley; with dark stretches of woodland interspersed here and there among the variously colored patches which represented cornfields and stubble.

I had asked the groom who drove me how Mauleverer and his niece were, and had discovered that he was too new a comer to be able to tell me anything that I did not know respecting them. I remained silent, therefore, during the greater part of the drive, occupying myself with listening to the larks, which were pouring forth their carols high up in the clear, blue heavens, and with keeping a sharp lookout for the house where I was to meet my darling.

We came at last to a long avenue of venerable trees which lined the public road on either side. It was unusual to see trees like these planted by the side of a highway, and I could not resist the conclusion that this must have been the main approach to the hall in past times. It led, however, straight into a little village, consisting of not more than a score of ancient houses. Beyond the village I could see the river and a bridge with a high-crowned arch, which I learned subsequently had accommodated all the traffic in that sparsely inhabited district since the days of good Queen Bess. Beyond the bridge again all was open country. I looked round in bewilderment in search of the hall.

Suddenly I caught sight of it, standing hard by the road, on the very edge of the little river. A great rookery of lofty elms had shielded it at first from my observation, so that I did not see it until we were almost at the door. We passed through a fine gateway, flush with the village street, and found ourselves in a large quadrangle, covered with grass, upon which one of the gabled ends of the hall looked out. There was another massive stone gateway opposite to that by which we entered this enclosure, and here the dog cart stopped.

As I jumped to the ground, the iron gates of beautiful hammered metal were thrown open, and Daisy and her uncle stood before me. They gave me a cordial greeting. Mauleverer being, as usual, quietly courteous. Daisy's face was radiant with a happiness that seemed to answer that which filled my own heart. I forgot everything about my strange companion in the railway carriage in the joy of the moment.

We were standing, I found, on a broad terraced walk which stretched along the main front of the hall and a warm garden wall of red brick which was continued, for a hundred yards or more, beyond the end of the house itself. The hall was a venerable and imposing structure, built at different periods and in many different styles of architecture. The oldest portion dated back from the reign of Henry VII and was a fragment of some ecclesiastical edifice which had been sacked and confiscated at the Reformation. The most modern part was that in front of which I now stood, and which had been erected in the reign of James I.

There was something very striking both in the appearance and the situation of the house. It stood, as I have said, close to the village street; and yet the double gates and the great walled quadrangle, to say nothing of the tall elm trees, seemed to shut it off completely from the outer world. The river ran so close to its northern walls that there was hardly room to pass between the house and the edge of the stream. Here, on the south side, where I had met my host and his niece, the broad walk on which we stood was the only level piece of ground. Immediately beyond it the park land rose steeply toward the sky line.

A house at once beautiful and romantic, I thought, and unmistakably a house with a history. I could imagine that in the dark days of winter it wore a ghostly aspect, as it rose amid the skeleton branches of the elms from the edge of the sluggish stream that swept past its walls. But to-day it had a pleasant appearance enough for the sun was shining upon its richly-tinted brickwork, and upon the multitude windows enriched with numberless heraldic devices in stained glass.

"Do you admire the house?" said Daisy, with a smile that had something in it of the pride of ownership.

"Indeed I do," I responded. "But is not the situation, so close to the village on one hand and to the river on the river, rather peculiar?"

"I thought so myself, at first," interposed Mauleverer, "but I find that we are as completely secluded here as if no village at all existed; and as to the river, you know there is no house so dry as one that stands on the banks of a stream. But come, Daisy, we must not keep Mr Fenton standing here. Let us show him something more than the outside of the house."

We entered, through a quaint stone porch, a large hall, with immense open fireplace, low paneled roof of carved oak, and columns of the same wood supporting the ceiling. There were doors leading from this hall in almost every direction. The apartment itself was furnished in a style which corresponded with the architecture. There were heavily carved Jacobean chairs and tables, a lounge or two, some magnificent black oak cabinets, and an antique clock which would have created a furore if it could have been seen at Christy's. An immense staircase, up which it would have been an easy matter to drive the traditional coach-and-four, led from the hall to the drawing room floor. The walls of the staircase were hung with splendid tapestry. From the gallery to which the stairs gave access I was conducted by my host into the drawing room, an apartment which corresponded in size with the great hall below. At either end of it were smaller rooms, one fitted as a boudoir and the other as a library; while beyond these again were suites of spacious bed rooms, many with rudely carved walls of paneled oak, and others hung like the staircase with venerable tapestry.

I could not refrain from giving audible expression to the admiration with which I saw the noble dimensions of all the apartments, and the fine taste with which they were furnished.

"Yes," said Mauleverer, "it all does credit to the people who have made a ramshackle old house habitable in a wonderfully short space of time. When I saw it three months ago, nobody would have supposed that it could ever again be made fit to live in. Yet we find it comfortable enough now—do we not, Daisy?"

"Oh, it is a charming place," she answered. "But you know, uncle, I have already told you that or some things—such as brightness and life and society—I preferred the Grand hotel at Scarborough."

"Yes, my dear, I know you are always throwing Scarborough in my teeth. Never mind; we shall see it again some day."

"THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE." This opinion is confirmed by the fact that Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, aided good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength, and sound health will be established.

CONSUMPTION,

which is Scrofulous Disease of the Lungs, is promptly and certainly arrested and cured by this God-given remedy, if taken before the last stages of the disease are reached. From its wonderful power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all

LOCAL NEWS.

Oddfellows.

Six young men, assisted by Otonabee Lodge men, took the initiatory degree in Oddfellowship last night.

Band of Hope.

The recently organized Band of Hope held a meeting in the Y. M. C. A. lecture room on Monday evening. It was well attended, and an interesting programme was provided.

The Crop.

As a general rule the farmers in this section are through with the harvest. The crops have turned out far better than was at first expected, and are turning out more than an average yield.

Company Drill.

On Monday evening Companies No. 1, 2, 4 and 5 of the City Battalion held their usual drill in the drill shed. Half a dozen members of No. 6 Company turned out, but having no commanding officer did not drill.

Football.

The football season is in earnest. Early in the morning a dozen or so enthusiasts go to the Athletic grounds for an appetizer, where they kick to their heart's content. In the evening scores of the school boys and as many others as can get there repair to the grounds where they do all the pretty feats peculiar to the game.

Big Jubilee.

The Salvation Army soldiers propose holding a big jubilee in the barracks, Aylmer street, on Wednesday evening next. Staff-Captain Eadie, of Kingston, and officers from the surrounding village corps will take part in the proceedings. Admission 10 cents. All are invited.

Justin McCarthy.

It is said that the local branch of the Irish National League will invite the celebrated Justin McCarthy to come to Peterborough to deliver an address in reply to Rev. Dr. Kane and Mr. Smith, the "Loyal" Irish delegates. We hope Mr. McCarthy may visit Peterborough, as the public, irrespective of their opinions on the Home Rule question, will be pleased to hear such an able man.

The Industrial Exhibition.

The exhibition to be given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the George street Methodist Church, on Wednesday, September 21st, in the shop north of Smart's music store, promises to be a most interesting event. The young people of the church are busy preparing articles for exhibit (all to be the sole work of the exhibitor) and a keene competition for honorary prizes will be the result. Tea will be served in the exhibition building from 5 to 7 in the evening.

A Dandy Delivery Wagon.

Messrs. Fitzgerald & Stanger have turned out for Messrs. Van Every & Co., of the "City Depot," a fine new delivery wagon. It is built on the most approved principles. In the painting, Wing comes off with flying colors. The platform, gear and wheels are painted a cold buff, while the panelled box is done in wine color, the sunken portion of the panels being, however, a cross between Chambly chocolate and Haldimand blue; the resulting tint is a deep green, so perfect an imitation of glass that the touch is required to dispel the illusion. The whole turn out is a beautiful one, a credit to both firms concerned.

The Exhibition Buildings.

The work on the new exhibition buildings of the Peterborough Central Exhibition are almost completed, and it is expected that they will be in readiness for the coming exhibition by the end of this week. The directors of the society, who have been untiring in their efforts to make the exhibition a permanent success, and who have displayed considerable zeal and enterprise over the many obstacles in their path, are deserving of the heartiest support from all classes. The farmers, manufacturers and merchants should combine to make the coming exhibition the grandest ever held in this district, and by so doing encourage the society to still greater efforts.

Merited Praise.

The following paragraph from the Lindsay Post speaks highly of the excellence of the machinery turned out of the William Hamilton Company's works:—"On Tuesday the new engine at Ingle & Co.'s new factory was started up and ran very satisfactorily. The engine and boiler and a part of the new plant being put in and will furnish sufficient power to meet all requirements. The boiler was furnished by the Hamilton Machine Works at Peterborough, and is an excellent specimen of the careful and thorough workmanship that has given the Hamilton works a provincial reputation. The engine is probably the finest and most complete power machine to be found in the district, of 30 h. p., with a great many improvements on engines such as were manufactured in recent years."

Dressmakers, give the Gilbert linings a trial, and be convinced that they are the best. R. FAIR.

Mattress Making.

The Peterborough Mattress Company's Enterprise.

The manufacturing industries of Peterborough have been recently augmented by the establishment of another important new industry. This is the manufacture of mattresses and their allied adjuncts pillows and bolsters. Mr. J. W. Diozee of Perth and Mr. William Gibb, proprietor of Patrick Woollen Mills, Almonte, have united their capital, resources and knowledge for the purpose of carrying on the business. For the past week the work has been in process of being brought into shape the making of mattresses has been begun, but the full capacity of the establishment has not yet been reached. It will be however attained in a few days.

The premises used are the top floor of Faint's Woollen Mills, but this will prove no interruption to the former business, Mr. Faint intending to carry on the carding work on both floors as usual. In fact it is an important part of the new factory's work.

The mattresses made consist of 12 different kinds ranging from the cheapest to the dearest—from that suited in price to the repose of the meanest labourer, to that for the relaxation of the limbs of the millionaire.

Very little machinery and appliances is necessary for the production of mattresses, but the Peterborough Mattress company will employ more machinery than other establishments of a similar nature. Mr. Faint has invented and applied a simple device for the untwisting and separation of the fibre, tea grass etc., which come in ropes, and which lose half their elasticity, and, therefore, suitability for making first-class mattresses, if this process is imperfectly performed, as it must be, if done by hand.

An important specialty of this company's manufacture is the extreme pains taken to INSURE THOROUGH CLEANLINESS.

This point receives the most rigid attention, a fact which makes the Peterborough mattress absolutely healthy for the user. This is guaranteed, and, as detection is easy, if this self-imposed stipulation is not carried out with every mattress, the absolute cleanliness of the filling, of whatever material, of every mattress may be depended upon. The batting is prepared in the woollen mill connected with the works, and the utmost pains is taken with this, as well as with all other filling material, to insure its being clean and sweet as water can make it. It is also produced more cheaply than it could be bought, and in this, as in other respects everything is arranged to lessen the expense of production, admitting of more work being put on the goods, thus making them better, while they are as cheap as the best mattress made elsewhere in Canada. The power is cheap, all material, such as ticking, is purchased direct from the manufacturers, and machinery is made to do the larger part of the work. Even the sewing machine used is driven by power, and thus the girl who runs it is enabled to do more work with less fatigue.

The capacity of the factory is 60 full-size mattresses per week, besides a proportionate number of wool and feather pillows and bolsters. Thus the annual output of the factory will be over 3,000 mattresses—of the value, taking the average price of the different qualities, of about $10,000. The works give employment to seven or eight hands.

Only a wholesale business is done. Persons in this vicinity can secure them at the leading furniture stores, and already a brisk demand has sprung up for the goods. A leading local dealer called to see the process of manufacture, and was so impressed with the cleanliness of it that he said he was perfectly satisfied to guarantee all the goods of this firm he handles—he can guarantee that no "dirty stock" enters into their composition. There is promise of the Peterborough Mattress Company doing a large trade, for every purchaser of their wares can rely on getting clean, well-made, honest goods. The EXAMINER wishes the firm every success in their new enterprise.

Personal.

Mr. Charles Paisley, of Montreal, and formerly of Peterborough, is in town.

Mr. R. Tate left town this morning for ten days' holiday in the west.

Mr. Matthew Walton left for Detroit this morning on a visit.

Mr. W. McAvella, one of the Riverside Lacrosse Clubs strong defence men, has left town for Michigan.

Mr., Mrs. and Miss Wishart, of "Bay View," West Flamborough township, are in town, the guests of Mr. Wm. Van Every, Charlotte street.

Mr. John Brennan, of West Point, New York, is in town visiting his son, who is head miller in the Otonabee Grist Mills, Ashburnham.

The Oshawa Reformer states that Miss Panton, formerly of town, has been presented by her pupils with a photograph album, as a token of appreciation.

Mr. R. Latimer left this morning for Stoney Lake to take charge, for Mr. Hewson, D.L.S., of a party to be engaged several weeks on the survey of the islands in Stoney Lake.

Mr. John Jacques, recently with Prof. Brustell, of Liverpool Cathedral, and who has received the appointment of organist for the George street Methodist Church, arrived in town yesterday. He will enter on his duties immediately.

Mr. J. C Maguire, of New York, brother of Mr. A. S. Maguire, of Peterborough, accompanied by Mr. Beatty, of the firm of Beatty & Sons, of New York, are in town. They purpose making a trip to the Pacific coast before returning home.

On Sunday morning Mr. Chas. Stapleton received a telegram from Chicago informing him that his wife, who with Miss Stapleton is visiting in that city, was seriously ill, and that his presence was required immediately. Mr. Stapleton was almost ready to take his departure when he received a second message stating that Mrs. Stapleton had recovered, that all danger was over and that his presence would not be required.

During the past week Mr. M. Tierney, of the firm of Morrow, Tierney & Co., has been spending a holiday in and around Rochester, N. Y. While it is rumored that Mr. Tierney's visit to the Flower City is purely a holiday one, it is not without rumor that his tour is of a more interesting nature. He is expected home in a few days.

Mr. Harry Long confectioner, returned home last night from his ten weeks' visit to the Old Country, per Beaver line, after a rather rough passage. He has enjoyed his trip immensely, and returns laden with spoil—consisting of a splendid pair of pedigreed thoroughbred English pug dogs—from the kennels of the Duke of Albany, and a pair of English thrushes. Had Mr. Long brought over one other pet, his happiness might be counted complete.

Non-Commissioned Officers' Class.

At the conclusion of the drill on Monday evening, a meeting of the battalion officers was held, at which it was decided to form a non-commissioned officers' class. The class will meet weekly for drill, under charge of Adjutant Dr. Bell and Lieut. Dr. Brennan. The object of the drill is to prepare the non-commissioned officers for their examination to take place in October.

A "Correction" Revised.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—Mr. Cann's letter in last night's EXAMINER. I was never connected with the Business College in Ottawa except as Penmanship Principal for [illegible]. I have been [illegible] the whole time I was in business education, [illegible] of the kind in Ottawa and have never been fortunate enough to run across either Mr. Cann or his reputation.—Any [illegible] statement that the writer can [illegible] for the purpose "Let" and Confute; or to the shoeing of "Mechanical drawing" "Art night" there in a Mechanic's Institute and training young men and women in the various branches of a business education in a Commercial College, cannot be very readily seen.

To prevent further misinformation being given, I might say that I received my business training from S. G. Beatty, of Toronto; R. J. Wallace, of Denver, Col., and H. W. Kibbee, of Utica, N.Y. To these may chiefly belong the pride and the blame of teaching me how to make a living.

Mr. Cann's informant most likely intended to say that I was a student for three years at the Ontario Art School, under Professor Brymner, also in science at St. Joseph's College, Ottawa.

I think if Mrs. Cann sells her goods as she has begun, but without telling any of her customers, there would be more money to be made in the line of business she has undertaken. Humanity is, of course, curious and quick to hear tales of sorrow and misfortune, but slow, indeed, to relieve or sympathize tangibly.

I very much misjudge the people of Peterborough if any of them would despise or slight or do anything but honor the woman who undertakes, in a straight-forward, honest, business way, to hurry her circumstances back to their former state of ease or elegance. Certainly no intelligent man or woman, whose will or ill-will deserves notice, will think any thought less than that of respect of those who strive, like all our forefathers in this country, "to better their condition."

Yours faithfully,
BANNELL SAWYER.

Peterborough, Sept. 13, 1886.

Police Court.

TUESDAY, Sept. 14.

The hearing of the charge against Thomas Howden, of Dysart, of stealing a sheep from Alexander Watt, was taken up at the Police court this morning.

Mr. Moore, who appeared for Mr. Howden, informed the court that his client elected to be tried summarily, and asked for an adjournment of one week, to allow time to procure a material witness.

The Magistrate thought it would be better to hear the witnesses present, and the case was proceeded with.

Alexander Watt, the plaintiff, was called first. He testified:—I live in the township of Dummer; I am a drover; on the 10th of August I drove from Warsaw to Peterborough 20 head of cattle and 25 sheep for shipment to Montreal; about four miles from town I put them in charge of three boys and drove ahead to town; on reaching me the boys reported that they had left two sheep behind, one in a field and the other lying by the side of the road; as soon as we loaded, the boys returned for the sheep left behind; I went to Montreal; the boys brought home the sheep left in the field, but the other they did not; on Saturday I went to Peterborough; I left town to search for the missing sheep, but did not find it; my wife informed me that some one (Mr. Taylor she thought) called at my house and told her that the sheep had been driven to town with some lambs; I enquired of the butchers in town on Friday if they had been out collecting lambs; I found out that Mr. Mervin had bought some from Mr. Howden on that day; I enquired of Mr. Mervin how many lambs he had purchased; he told me his sheep were in Mr. Webber's field in Smith; I went there and saw a sheep which I thought was mine; I returned to the field with my two sons; I caught the sheep and examined it; I did not think it was mine; on the following day I sent the boy with Mr. Edwards, from whom I bought the sheep, to examine it; the boy returned and said that he found the sheep; I went to Mr. Webber's on Saturday and took away the ram Mr. Mervin bought from Howden; the ram had two blue marks on the hips made by me; it also had the tip of its right ear cut off; it also had scratches on the left side of the face, and a small scallop on its left ear.

To Mr. Moore—I got the sheep on the 9th of August from Edwards Bros.

Mr. Warren Taylor gave evidence to the effect that when coming to Peterborough on the 10th of August, he saw a ram lying by the roadside about four miles from town. Knowing that Mr. Watts was driving sheep to town, he came to the conclusion it was his, and made inquiries regarding it. On the 12th when coming to town he saw two boys driving the same ram together with a number of lambs toward town.

Mr. John Mervin testified that he bought a lot of lambs and one aged ram from Thos. Howden about August 13th. Howden said he paid $4 for the ram, which he bought with the lambs in a lot. He sold it again to Mr. Webber for $4.50.

Mr. R. E. Wood, Crown Attorney, appeared for the prosecution.

NON-PAYMENT OF WAGES.

A charge against Adolphe Faucher for non-payment of wages was enlarged till tomorrow.

SENT UP FOR A WEEK.

Patrick Sullivan, charged by P. C. Pidgeon with being drunk and disorderly, was sent up to jail for one week.

A Curious Bed-fellow.

On Sunday evening a young man who resides on Water street was left alone at home, all the other members of the family being out of town visiting friends. He had left the front door open in the evening for a short time. About ten o'clock he locked up and retired for the night. On coming down stairs in the morning he was surprised to find the front door open. At first he could not understand how the act was accomplished, but in searching the house to see if it had been burglarized, the mystery was solved. A bed in a room not far from that occupied by the young man in charge, had been occupied during the night, and there was every indication that the uninvited visitor had made himself "at home." He had evidently entered the house in the early part of the evening, and kept quiet till he had an opportunity to retire. Nothing was stolen. The occupants of a house a few doors north had a similar visit from presumably the same fellow a few nights before.

N. Washington, M.D., Throat and Lung Surgeon, Toronto and Half ix.

DEAR SIR.—I am pleased to be able to express my extreme satisfaction at the result of your "Vapor Method" of inhalation, which has cured me of catarrh of a very troublesome character. In fact all the usual remedies failed to give me any relief whatever, but your treatment from the first gave me great relief and in a short time entirely cured me of a most terrible disease which had for years threatened my life. I can honestly recommend anyone who may be suffering as I was to your skillful operation. Yours truly, GEO. GOULDING.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1886.

ST. THOMAS OF HALDIMAND.

Hon. Thomas White, Minister of the Interior, laboring under the hallucination that "party exigencies" justify straight—well—mis-statement, has improved upon his long since enunciated code of ethics and added slander, the stirring up of strife, and the arousing of evil passions to the catalogue of mortal sins made venial, if not made virtues, by "political exigencies." This recent infamous insult to the French Canadians and French Roman Catholics cannot but be regarded as evincing on his part a most degraded idea of what party loyalty requires of a supporter, and a most debased idea of what becomes the dignity of a cabinet minister. He has not had the grace to apologize for the insult. In one quarter he has made a half-hearted and transparent attempt to deny it in the columns of the Mail, and of his own journal, the Montreal Gazette, but the value of his denial is destroyed by his reiterating the insult in another form in another place. In his speech at Cayuga, Hon. Thomas White, Her Majesty's Minister of the Interior for the Dominion of Canada, exhibited to his hearers a portrait of Reil with a rope around his neck, and assured them that this was a picture of one of the new saints of the Catholic Church! This act in itself was more than sufficiently malicious, but his object in exhibiting such a picture, accompanied by such a statement, deserves, as it receives from all respectable and peace-loving citizens, the severest condemnation. The object was to inflame the passions of the people of Ontario against their French fellow-citizens, regardless of whatever bitter consequences might follow, in order that he might secure a petty political advantage in a mere by-election contest, the issue of which his party, now that they have lost, declare had no political significance. If political baseness can descend to greater depths, the advocate of the doctrine of total depravity has a chance to suggest an instance. Mr. White's denial of the charge was actuated more by the fear of the consequences of the act, which "political exigency had impelled him to committ, for at Essex a day or two afterward he practically repeated the statement. He hoped that his act would not be known to his French-Canadian friends, but it was faithfully reported, hence his anxiety to have it denied. The position in which he finds himself doubtless led also to the assertion made in the Gazette, that he was not an Orangeman, and made with a warmth which argued that he thought occupying such a relation, would be a disgrace. Hon. Mr. White already finds that the way of the transgressor is hard, but the full revelation of the truth of this will not dawn upon him till he shall seek the suffrages of the Orangemen of Cardwell, whom he so indignantly repudiates, or attempts to direct in an election contest, the franchise of the French-Canadians, whom he has so grossly and unpardonably insulted.

CAPTAIN TREVELLICK delivered an admirable address on the occasion of the Trades and Labor demonstration in Toronto on Saturday last. His remarks on the seizure of public lands by political grabbers, though applying to the United States, so accurately describe the situation in our own Northwest that they are worth re-producing:

"The only way to get the public lands back was to repeal the laws which were bad. For instance, if a man bought 20,000 acres of land and kept them doing nothing, the assessor valued them as wild lands and levied small taxation. If a poor workingman bought five acres and converted it by the sweat of his brow into a little Paradise and built a small house upon it, the assessor came round and said this is improved land, and assessed it as much as forty acres of the other man. If they gave any man a reward at all they should take off the taxes on the cultivated lands and put them on the wild lands, and the speculator would be obliged to sell or burst."

Let this principle be applied to the land now held in idleness by Government favorites. Then they will not be so anxious to hold their estates till they are improved by the toil and industry of surrounding farmers.

THE Liberal watchword for the Dominion general elections: "Remember Chambly and Haldimand."

Protect the Dumb Beasts.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

The Niagara cranks are still at work trying to outdo each other in daring feats. As long as they risk only their own lives there is not much reason for public concern, but it is now proposed to have an intelligent horse, Blondin, walk a tight rope suspended over the Falls. This is a kind of cruelty that should be stopped, for the horse is not a free agent. If left to himself he would have sense enough not to undertake any such foolhardy venture. Such an animal deserves protection not accorded to the barrel and other cranks.

Putting up the Price of Coal.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—At a meeting of coal managers here to-day there was a long discussion on an advance of the different sizes of coal. The ultimate decision was to advance chestnut 15 cents, and all other sizes 10 cents per ton. The Allegheny Committee meets on Sept. 25 to consider the October allotments, and the managers on Sept. 30 to consider further advances.

Not Evangelical.

MONTREAL, Sept. 14.—The Governors of the Montreal Diocesan College, now known as the Bishop's party, have decided to withdraw the pupils from attending Sunday morning services in the cathedral. The reason given is that the present services are not evangelical and therefore the students' attendance is not consistent with the principles and tenets of the college.

The Loyalists of Hamilton.

HAMILTON, Sept. 14.—The Orangemen of Hamilton district to-night held a big meeting in Larkin Hall, at which they presented Rev. Dr. Kane of Belfast with an address and a cheque for the Loyal Patriotic Union funds. Dr. Kane and Mr. G. H. Smith made rousing Loyalist speeches.

Honor to a Hero.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 14.—A monument was unveiled to-day by General Sir Frederick Middleton to the memory of Alex. Watson, who was fatally wounded at Batoche. He was a member of F Company, Winnipeg Rifles. The monument was paid for by private subscription.

Beach, Rose and Hanlan.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Deeble, the Australian hotel keeper who is backing Beach in his coming race with Wallace Ross, offered at a well known sporting resort to-night to bet £1000 to £800 that the Australian sculler would win. The offer met with no takers, and Deeble subsequently offered to wager 5 to 4 on his man, which odds several bets were booked. Beach in conversation respecting the merits of Hanlan, said: "Hanlan is a very good man in a boat but a very big fool out of it. He won't come here to row against me, you may depend upon that, nor will anything induce him to row me on the Paramatta. I don't regard a match with him as among the possibilities."

Coney Island Fall Meeting.

Third race, a mile and three-sixteenths, Editor won, Valet 2nd, Rinaldo 3rd; time 2.03. Fourth race, Great Eastern Handicap for two year olds, 1 mile, King Fox 125 lbs. won, Connemara 115 lbs. 2nd, and Laredo 108 lbs. 3rd; time 1.15. Fifth race, 1½ miles, Ernest won, King George 2nd, Florence M. 3rd; time 2.10½. Sixth race, 7 furlongs, on the turf, Mona won, Bay Rebel 2nd, Fawn 3rd; time 1.28½.

THOSE ALASKAN SEIZURES.

A Question that is Surrounded With Diplomatic Difficulties.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—The seizure of the British vessels in Alaskan waters, it is found, upon examination, may involve our government in a diplomatic controversy with Great Britain of an important character. It is believed that the commander of the Corwin merely enforced the law, as his instructions required him to do. His act being in conformity with the law the Secretary of the Treasury has no authority to annul the act or exercise his judgment as to whether the acts of congress are unconstitutional, or not in harmony with international law. Congress and the United States courts are the only two sources of official power to order the release of the vessels, and neither can act upon the question in a hurry.

Even the President, it is said, cannot interfere until the matter has been judicially decided. On the other hand, the claim of eminent domain over a large part of the high seas is so contrary to the law of nations that England, it is thought, will not patiently endure the delay which legislative or judicial action may involve. The question is not one either which the state department can settle. The acts of congress requiring the commander of the Corwin to do what he did, are laws of the land and cannot be abrogated by any department of the Government. The issue will be plainly and forcibly presented on the demand for their release, that the seizure cannot be defended on any ground, and that the laws alleged to have been violated have no bases of right to sustain them.

A Manitoulin Man Skips to the States.

MANITOWANING, Sept. 13.—Robt. McClinchey of Kagawong has skipped to the other side. McClinchey carried on quite an extensive business. He had a store at Kagawong, the saw mill of the Henry estate at that place, was postmaster and reeve of the municipality of Billings. He was doing a good business, and his sole object in leaving was to make a haul out of his creditors, to whom he is said to be indebted to the amount of some $18,000, with assets nominal.

The Imported Pleuro-Pneumonia.

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.—Dr. McEachran, Chief Inspector of Cattle Quarantine, has returned to Ottawa from Levis. He reports that all cattle infected, or likely to be infected, with pleuro-pneumonia, have been destroyed and all the buildings connected with the quarantine station have been burned. He thinks the disease has been effectually stamped out.

Refuse to Give the Rifle.

The proposition to present Col. Gzowski, A. D.C., with a costly rifle, properly inscribed, as a token of appreciation of his services as President of the Dominion Rifle Association, has fallen through. Subscriptions were obtained, a splendid rifle purchased, and an inscription put on it, but the council have repudiated the whole thing. Hon. Mr. Kirkpatrick, who was brought to task about the affair, said: "Really I know nothing about the matter. I have no knowledge how the rifle was secured."

The Ute pappoose when quite young is placed in a buckskin or rawhide receptacle with a straight board back. The buckskin opens down the center of the front. The pappoose is placed in it, and the edges of the buckskin are drawn tightly together by buckskin thongs, as you would lace a shoe. The child's arms are pinioned down by its side; no part of the body can be moved except the head, which can be rolled slightly from side to side. Straps are attached to the board to enable the squaw to sling it across her back or hang it in the branches of a tree. You very seldom hear a Ute pappoose cry. I have seen the little things standing up against a tree in the broiling sun in one of these barbarous straight-jacket receptacles. The flies were crawling in and out the corners of his eyes and mouth, great tears were chasing each other down its cheeks, but not a whimper nor sound was heard. They are kept laced up in this way, except at short intervals, until they are large enough to learn to walk. They are taught to ride a horse almost before they begin to walk, and it is curious to see the little things, often three and four on one horse, and clinging to his back and to each other with the tenacity of monkeys. The children of 2 years old and up are often bedecked with war-paint and bead and silver ornaments until they are hardly recognizable. Great silver rings are suspended from their ears, silver plates three and four inches in diameter hang upon the breast. Three, four and sometimes five pairs of silver bracelets of Navajo designs adorn the arms. Beaded buckskin moccasins, a bright little Navajo blanket, otter-skin trimmings in the hair, rings upon the fingers, a brass or silver armlet above the elbow, and several necklaces of beads, wolf's teeth, etc., a buckskin belt five inches in width and gorgeously worked with beads, and you have a Ute child dressed and ornamented according to the fond parent's idea of artistic taste.

One Over His Mouth.

Observing Little Girl—Mamma, who is that young man on the other side of the car?

Mamma—I don't know, dear. Why?

Observing Little Girl—He looks so queer; he has three eyebrows.

Mamma—How do you make that out?

Observing Little Girl—He has one over each eye and one over his mouth.

The young man had important business to transact in the first barber shop to be seen, and the passengers all wondered why he got on just to ride one block.

HARVEST HOME FESTIVAL.

On Tuesday the annual harvest home festival was held, under the auspices of the South Monaghan Agricultural Society. The attendance was fairly good. One of the events of the day was a lacrosse match between Keene and South Monaghan clubs. After a spirited contest, Keene was victorious, adding their purse to their credit. In the evening a concert and entertainment was held in the hall, at which a good programme was presented, to which Mrs. J. R. McIntyre, town, was one of the best contributors. The programme promised was an excellent one, but several of the persons expected to sing were unable to be present, but those who did appear acquitted themselves most creditably. Several persons from Peterborough and Millbrook attended the festival, which was altogether a very pleasant success.

"Imitation is the Sincerest Flattery."

If the above quotation is true, then Dr. R. V. Pierce ought to feel highly flattered, on account of the many imitators of his popular remedy, the "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," for they have scores of imitators, but never an equal, for the cure of sick and bilious headache, constipation, impure blood, kidney pains, internal fever and all bowel complaints. With a bottle of the augured granules in the house, you can dispense with the family doctor and his often nauseous medicines. 6d61w37

FIVE MILLION POUNDS

By T. WILLIS HILL.

I took care to catch Daisy's eye while her uncle was speaking, but she would not look at me.

"You will sometimes be at the window," I said, [illegible] "and I will look up at it from the hotel."

"What is that?" asked Maulever.

"A haunted room—Miss Stancliffe told me of it. I suppose you have not seen the ghost yet?"

"You do not believe in such nonsense?" said the millionaire.

"If I did I should not like to acknowledge it in the present day," I replied.

"Nobody has seen it yet," said Daisy, with an air of much solemnity; "but we all believe in it—all but my uncle and Dr. Branksome. And do you know that, if you are not afraid, you are to sleep in the haunted chamber! It is the best bedroom in the whole house."

Afraid! I should have been a poor creature, indeed, if, in the presence of the girl I loved, and as I stood in the full sunshine, which was streaming through the painted windows from the cheerful day outside, I had for an instant admitted the thought of fear to my heart.

"Oh, nothing could be better than that," I cried, with a laugh; "I shall be able to investigate a genuine case of ghost-seeing for myself. It is not often a man has that privilege."

"And very seldom that he has it under such favorable circumstances," said Daisy.

I turned with a sudden start; for it was Branksome who had spoken. He had joined us unperceived as we stood chattering in the gallery at the head of the great staircase. He stood inside with one hand in a friendly fashion, and then, accordingly, he [illegible] said; "You will not only sleep in the haunted room to-night—that is, if you are not afraid—but in one which, I am told, nobody has ventured to sleep in for more than a century."

"So much the better. I ought to have a story to tell to-morrow."

"Yes," said Daisy, "we shall think very poorly of your imagination if you cannot make our nerves tingle at breakfast time with the horrors you have to relate."

"And may I see the torture chamber?" I asked, resolved to keep up the jest.

"Oh, certainly!" said Maulever. Even his usually equable temperament, which was pervaded at most times by a mild melancholy, seemed to have caught the spirit of the joke. But, with his accustomed kindness he added, "Perhaps you may not like the room when you have seen it. I don't know that it is altogether kind to ask you to sleep in it—it may be damp, or disagreeable in other ways, you know; so if you would prefer another——"

"But, my dear Mr. Maulever, there is no other room in the house which I shall prefer to this. I shall like it, I am sure, above all things."

And having said this, I started off with the rest of the merry little party to look at my destined dormitory. The room, I discovered, did not lie on the same floor as the drawing room, on which most of the sleeping chambers were to be found. We passed along a corridor from which a number of bedrooms opened, until we came to a heavy oaken door, black with age, [illegible] the end of the passage. On [illegible] we found ourselves on a landing in another staircase—worm-eaten and silent, which descended into black depths below us, and wound its way above our heads for several flights. Up this staircase we went, still gayly. More than once we found an oaken door like the by which we had come [illegible] the stair, but in every case the door was heavily barred and padlocked. Some faint perception of the fact that the haunted chamber had other disadvantages besides the dampness of a supposititious ghost began to enter my mind.

"You will be quiet enough here, at any rate," said Branksome. "Unless the ghost comes to trouble you, there will be nothing to disturb your sleep."

"And I suppose I shall at least hear the ghost—in the [illegible] rain."

"Rats!" cried Daisy. "I don't think they have mounted as high as this, but in the kitchens they are to be found in legions and armies. Every hour that the spirit draws back. It is not the ghost that is the drawback here—it is the rats."

"You will need to summon the Pied Piper to your aid," I said.

"Better try strychnine!" was Branksome's commentary on my jocular remark.

But we had reached a broad landing at the top of the lonely flight of stairs. I could see that we were in one of the more remote wings of the house; for the windows which gave us light looked down upon the sullen river.

"Here we are," said the doctor, who now took the lead, probably because Maulever was breathless after his climb.

We entered a small anteroom, the walls of which were panelled. There was a quaint old fireplace in one corner of the apartment, and the mullioned window gave comparatively little light. The room had been newly furnished in the French fashion, with heavy chairs, gilded mirrors and girandoles, a beautiful ormolu writing table, a richly carved bookcase and all the accessories of a delightful little salon such as a bachelor might rejoice to own.

A curtain of velvet hung over the doorway which led from this antechamber into the sleeping room. There was nothing ghostly here. It was a large, bright, airy apartment, with a big window commanding a matchless prospect along the valley. Like the sitting room, it was furnished in the French fashion, [illegible] and were sumptuous. The only feature of the room that seemed to suggest the idea of age was the embossed leather which, hanging heavily from the ceiling, covered all the walls.

"I think you will agree with me, Mr. Fenton," said Branksome, "that a man has no occasion to complain of his quarters here. This is by far the finest room in the house, to my thinking. Just look at the view from the window. It is rather curious by the way, that these [illegible] the original hangings of the room. All the tapestry downstairs has been [illegible] this old leather is genuine. It must have covered these walls for a couple of hundred years at least."

We all turned to admire, the hangings. The gilding had nearly disappeared from the surface of the leather, but the designs embossed upon it were still pleasing to be seen. They were elaborate and beautiful. Nothing, I felt, could be better than the rooms allotted to me; and yet, even then, I confessed in my innermost heart that I heartily liked the way to them.

It was five o'clock, and when our inspection of the noble old house being finished, we [illegible] to [illegible]

"Had you a pleasant journey?" was Branksome who put the question to me.

I colored. To tell the truth, I had forgotten all about the journey and my strong resolve to be extremely [illegible] at Great Lorton, and for the [illegible] sake. Now I felt [illegible] back to [illegible] I hesitated to [illegible] [illegible] my confusion at the fact that Branksome appeared [illegible]

"It was not a pleasant [illegible]" I said at last, [illegible]

At that moment, to my great relief, Daisy proposed that she should show me her flower garden while there was still light [illegible] which to me, it [illegible] [illegible] threw a wrapper of some kind around her shoulders, and led the way before [illegible] I followed her, delighted at the thought that at last I should see her for a few moments alone; for Maulever and Branksome remained behind.

The flower garden was at the end of the broad walk which passed along the front of the hall. We entered it through a door in an old stone wall. It seemed to me that everything at Great Lorton was cut up by walks or barred by doors. I had seen nothing like it before. But within the garden, which was spacious and well laid out, there were no signs of restricted liberty. Everything here was beautiful.

Daisy was in the best of spirits, and pointed out to me, with all the pride of a proprietor, the lovely autumn flowers which were still in bloom, and the promise which the garden gave of further loveliness in the coming summer. But by and by her spirits seemed to flag, and she ceased to speak. The truth was, that from the moment when we entered the garden I myself had hardly uttered a syllable. We moved slowly along the winding walks, now speechless and self-conscious. Oh, the joy of being near her—of hearing the rustle of her dress, the sound of her foot upon the path; oh, the delight of being allowed once more to look into that face dearer to me than the face of any other of God's creatures!

But the silence was becoming oppressive. I broke it at last with an effort. "You are glad that I came?" I said.

With eyes full of tenderness and a smile that made her face as an angel's she turned and looked at me. She did not speak, but I had my answer, and my heart throbbed with an exquisite bliss which it had never known before.

She had plucked a lovely tea rose that we had found lingering on one of the trees.

"Will you give me the rose?" I said.

As she gave it to me our hands touched, and even at the same moment our eyes met, and in an instant she was clasped in my arms and I had printed the first kiss of love upon her fair cheek.

There were a few moments of silence—of silence broken only by her sighs, which sounded in my ears almost like sobs. She did not attempt to release herself; but at last, in answer to my passionate prayer, she slowly raised her face, radiant with love and tenderness, towards mine and our lips met in a long kiss, in which our very souls seemed to mingle.

Presently she slowly drew herself away from me, though she still left her hand in mine.

"How did you know," she said in a voice that struggled against the conflicting emotions that were leaving the room for the [illegible] "how did you know that I loved you?"

"My darling," I cried, "I only knew that I loved you, and that life without you would be utter misery to me. But you do love me, Daisy—do you, dearest?"

"Ah, yes!" she said, in a voice the tender cadences of which sounded like music wafted from some far-off heaven, "I love you. I cannot help it. But it is wrong, I fear. They will never allow us to meet again."

"I know," I said, with a bitter heart, "they will say that it is your uncle's riches that I love, and they will despise me as a fortune-hunter."

"No, no. They must know you better than that. It is not that. But I know they will never allow us to see each other any more when they discover—ah, there is [illegible] coming!"

She started from me in affright, and answered quickly.

It was Branksome's voice which we heard.

"How now, young people!" he cried, in a tone of banter. "The sun has been set this half-hour or more, and you can hardly appreciate the flowers in the dark. Besides, it is almost time to dress for dinner, and your uncle has been asking for you, Daisy."

There was nothing in the tone of his voice to indicate that he had any suspicion as to the relationship we had [illegible] to [illegible] in the garden. We walked silently beside him. When we reached the door, he suggested that it would be well to lock it now, as no one was likely to return to the garden from the house that night. But even as he pulled the key from his pocket a voice I had learned to know and hate saluted us. It was that of Finter.

"Don't lock me in all night, please," he cried, in gruff tones. "I've been just looking round a bit. There's plenty of room for improvement here, it seems to me."

He took no notice either of Daisy or myself, and there was something in his manner that was almost insolent. In the dim twilight I eyed him sharply, and loosed for a chance of quarreling with him. But I felt a light touch upon my arm, and the next moment I saw that Daisy in her white dress had passed through the gate. I followed her hastily.

"Hush!" she said in agitated tones. "There is no notice of that man. He is dangerous." And before I could recover from my surprise she had entered the hall, where her uncle awaited her.

Our dinner was not quite such a success as I had anticipated. Mr. Maulever, it is true, was courteous as ever; and Branksome talked, with that fulness of knowledge which distinguished him above any other man I had ever met, on many different topics. But Daisy had a headache, and sat with a pale face at the head of the table; while I was overweighted by the joy that filled my heart as I thought of her avowal in the garden. There were no signs of Finter. It was evident that at Great Lorton Hall he was not allowed to associate with the millionaire on the ground of equality which were permitted in the village.

After dinner we went up stairs to the drawing room, but that apartment was too vast to be comfortable. A fire had been lighted in the library adjoining it and we resorted thither and spent some time in examining a collection of priceless etchings which had been supplied—I could not help thinking—by the contractors who furnished the hall. Mr. Maulever was a man of fine taste, but he could not be called a collector. He had simply filled the walls with the best of the valuable [illegible] impressions of the Dutch masters, from Rubens downward, which none but a millionaire could have acquired. I was allowed no opportunity of exchanging a word with Daisy until she was leaving the room for the night. Then, as I handed her the candlestick that lighted, I murmured two words only to her ear, "My darling." She looked up at me with a faint smile and by her hand rest a moment in mine as we said good night.

"Will you smoke?" asked Maulever, and on my replying in the affirmative he led me to a comfortable smoking room, where I found everything needful provided for us. Branksome did not appear. I had already learned, however, that he was no smoker, and I was [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] abstaining himself [illegible] while I, and long before I had finished my cigar his cigarette had been consumed. With an apology on the score of his delicate health he by and by left me to myself.

From its wonderful power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all CHRONIC DISEASES OF THE Liver, Blood, and Lungs.

A Second Social.

A social under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's Church, was held at the residence of Miss Stewart, river road, Otonabee, on Monday evening. The entertainment was a continuation of the social held at the same place on Thursday last, at which there was a large surplus of edibles. The entertainment was well patronized by the friends of the church who reside in that neighborhood.

Market Items.

The market was languid this morning and produce sold slowly. Prices were quoted:—Butter, 18 to 20c.; eggs, 12 to 13c.; chickens, 40 to 60c.; potatoes, 35c. per bag; cabbages, 30c. per doz.; tomatoes, 30c. per bas.; corn, 10c. per doz.; onions, 30c. to $1 per bus.; apples, 75c. to $1 per bag; crab apples, 25c. per pail.

The superintendent takes this opportunity of thanking the ladies of the committee, through whose efforts this gratifying result was obtained.

Harvest Home Festival.

A grand harvest home festival, under the auspices of the Methodist church, Fraserville, will be held at the residence of Mr. John Lightfoot, South Monaghan, one mile north of Centreville, on Friday, 24th September. A football match and other amusements will be provided during the afternoon. Admission to the grounds and tea 25c.

The First of Four.

Messrs. J. S. Parker and D. B. Macduff, who are arranging for a series of four grand concerts to be given during the coming season, announce the first entertainment of the series to be held in the Opera House on October 14th. The best foreign and local talent will take part in the concerts. Mrs. Martin Murphy, of Hamilton, one of Canada's leading vocalists, will sing at the first concert. Mrs. Caldwell, of Toronto, Mrs. McCullough, of Hamilton, and others will assist in the other concerts of the series. The entertainments, no doubt, will be of unusual excellence and merit, and it is hoped the promoters will be rewarded for their enterprise.

The Farmers' Favorite.

Farmers will be interested in the great success that has attended Mr. R. Mowry, of Ashburnham in perfecting his "New Improved Separator." He has manufactured a large number this season, and those in use have given the very highest satisfaction. They are constructed so as to be driven by either steam or horse-power, and a simple device, by a slight change, enables them to be converted into a pea thresher. The separator not only does its work well, but rapidly, and practical tests have established Mowry's New Improved Separator as the equal of the best threshers manufactured. It will, in fact, do more work with better results than any other separator in the market. Among many other testimonials, is that of Mr. Richard Callaghan, of Emily, who writes: "We have threshed 198 bushels of barley in one hour, and 1,400 bushels in one day. The farmers here think with us that it is just the kind of thresher needed, being light to handle and capable of doing any amount of work."

Police Court.

The hearing of the charge against Thos. Howden of stealing a sheep from Alex. Watt was continued at the court on Friday afternoon.

Geo. Webber testified that he purchased a ram from Mr. John Mervin, about three weeks ago. The ram he bought from Mr. Mervin was the one taken away being Mr. Watts.

A boy named A. Kidd testified that he assisted Mr. Watt to mark the ram in question, and was certain the one taken from Webber's field was the same sheep.

Edwin R. Watt gave evidence in support of that of his father's.

S. Edwards and A. Edwards, who sold the ram to Mr. Webb, had owned it for two years, knew the marks on it, and after seeing the sheep in Mr. Webber's field, recognized it as the one sold to Mr. Watts.

Levi Payne testified that he owned the ram when it was a lamb, and kept it for two years. He marked it by clipping off a portion of one ear and by cutting a hole through the ear. He saw the ram in Mr. Webber's field and was confident it was the same animal he had owned and marked.

THE DEFENCE.

George Howden testified that about a month ago, he drove out to the township of Douro in company with his brother Robert to look after some cattle. When some miles from town they met Thos. Howden, the prisoner, who was buying lambs. A stranger came along driving a ram, which the prisoner purchased for $4, giving $2 bills in payment. He did not know the man, who was apparently 30 years of age, was short, and wore dark whiskers. The ram had a false mark on the lip. His brother sold the ram to Mervin.

Robert Howden testified that he was present when the ram was purchased from the stranger, whom he did not remember ever having seen before. The ram was sold to Mervin.

The case was then enlarged till this morning.

WEDNESDAY, Sept. 15.

NON PAYMENT OF WAGES.

The charge against D. Faucher, of non-payment of wages, preferred by R. G. Gray, was continued at the Police Court this morning.

Mr. E. B. Stone, appeared for the Plaintiff, and Mr. W. H. Moore for the defendant. R. G. Gray, testified that Faucher agreed to pay him $1 a day and board as engineer of the Steamer Yacht "Pearl." He worked 110½ days and Faucher had only paid him $66.45. He claimed a balance of $44.06. Faucher refused to settle with him and discharged him on Sept. 7th.

The plaintiff showed his cash book, with entries of amounts received from Faucher. A letter from Faucher was also put in.

Mr. Moore contended that the plaintiff was not entitled to the balance, as engineer, as he had no engineer's certificate, and that he was not entitled to pay for working on Sundays.

The plaintiff stated that Mr. Adams, Steamboat Inspector, gave him permission to run the boat, and that Faucher agreed to pay him for Sundays, on which days he had to work.

The Magistrate gave judgment for the complainant, for $42.55 and costs, to be paid in 24 hours, and in default of payment, distress.

THE SHEEP CASE.

The hearing of evidence in the case Queen vs. Howden, on a charge of sheep stealing, was again taken up.

Bertie Howden testified that he remembered driving a number of lambs and one ram to town with his father about a month ago.

John Northey testified that he saw a man, whom he thought was a Howden, driving a number of sheep towards town. He did not see a man driving a ram, nor did he meet the two Howden brothers or two men driving from town.

This concluded the evidence.

After hearing the counsel on both sides the Magistrate delivered judgment. He found the prisoner guilty of the charge and imposed a penalty of three months in the county jail.

Mr. E. E. Wood appeared for the crown, and Mr. W. H. Moore for the defendant.

Personal.

Mr. Charles H. Allison, local editor of the Napanee Express, is winding up his holidays by spending a week in town.

Mr. E. W. Cox is in Hamilton attending the annual meeting of the Canada Life Insurance Company.

Mr. John Canning left town this morning for Oshawa, where he goes to take a position in the dry goods store of Mr. E. S. Rowse.

The many friends of Mr. M. J. Sullivan will regret to learn that he is confined to his house by a severe attack of malarial fever.

Mr. C. H. Crofts, who has been in Peterborough since the Midland offices were removed from Port Hope, left yesterday for Ingoldsby, Haliburton, where his family has been residing during the summer. Mr. Crofts, it will be well remembered, was purchasing agent and storekeeper for the Midland R. R., and, in that capacity exercised great shrewdness and care, to such an extent indeed, that, when, upon amalgamation the Grand Trunk took over the effects of the Midland, a premium was allowed for the stationery supplies. Shortly after the amalgamation of the two roads, Mr. Crofts became secretary-treasurer of the Lock Works, but he resigned this position to become treasurer and accountant of the Peterborough Stove Works. He is a thorough practical accountant, and the leakage that escapes his notice must be a very obscure one. While a resident of Peterborough Mr. Crofts made many friends who will regret his departure, and be glad to welcome his return.

W. C. T. U.

A meeting was convened on Monday, September 13th, at 4 p.m. President in the chair. Opened with singing, prayer and reading Isaiah 35 in concert. Thirteen members present. Usual routine of business carried out. Communication read from Mrs. Chisholm, of Ottawa, urging the advisibility of appointing a delegate to attend convention at Owen Sound, October 11th to 14th. After some discussion it was deemed wise not to send a delegate this year.

Mrs. Wand and Miss Wood were elected a committee to procure bandages for Nichols Hospital.

Five and means were discussed of carrying on Band of Hope work, and it was resolved that each member of the Band pay 5 cents per year to defray expenses.

The ladies of the Union desire to thank all friends who have so kindly donated bouquets to the flower mission, and trust to their generosity for supplies every Wednesday while the flowers last. Bouquets may be left at Miss Sandercom's store. Many sick people have been cheered by these bright messages as helped by the accompanying texts.

Meeting dismissed in usual form.—Com.

Veterinary Skills.

Dec. Stevenson, V. S., requests us to state that he will, until further notice, be found either at his office on Chambers street, or at Morgan's hotel, but not at his residence, having closed up house for a short period.

Reception.

Rev. R. F. Torrance, pastor of St. Paul's church, who last week returned from a visit to Europe, will be tendered a public reception by his congregation in the church school rooms this evening.

The Newest and Best.

For the best teas Morrow & Tierney cannot be beaten. They have just received a large stock of new season teas, in which they are offering special inducements. Camping parties' supplies and fancy groceries a specialty.

Young Philanthropists.

This is flower day at the hospital, and the flower committee of the W. C. T. U. beg to acknowledge, from the pupils of the Collegiate Institute, the largest and handsomest contribution of flowers yet received for the benefit of patients at the Nicholls Hospital.

"Something New."

We understand that the young folks of the George street Methodist Church, with their usual enterprise, have determined on having an Industrial Exhibition of their own. They intend holding it in the drill shed next Tuesday afternoon and evening, Sept. 21st. They expect a great variety of exhibits, comprising, in young ladies' and girls' work, painting, fancy needle work, plain sewing and patch-work, and specimens of bread and cake, canned fruits and pickles, while the young men and boys will show miniature engines, sets of harness, boats, and a great variety of the curious and wonderful. Judges have been appointed and prizes will be awarded. In connection with the exhibition, the ladies of the congregation intend serving a substantial tea between the hours of five and eight o'clock. The Fire Brigade band will be in attendance during the evening. Admission for exhibition and tea, 25 cents; for exhibition alone, 10 cents. Proceeds in aid of the organ fund.

Young's Point.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

DROWNED.

Mr. Jas. McManus, who resided with his sister near Burleigh, was found drowned on Monday evening in an inlet about one and a half miles above Sandy Point. He was last seen on Thursday, Sept. 2nd, passing the store at Burleigh. It is supposed that he wandered into the woods, and on coming to the lake attempted to follow the shore and slipped off a rock. The remains were interred on Tuesday in the R. C. cemetery here.

Deceased was about sixty-five years of age, and for the past few years had been very feeble. His friends have the undivided sympathy of this community in their sad bereavement.

NEARLY AN ACCIDENT.

On Friday morning of last week a six-year-old son of Mr. P. P. Young fell into the canal while crossing the upper lock gates, which caused quite an amount of excitement in our usually quiet village. Mr. J. Godfrey succeeded in rescuing him after two other citizens had failed in an attempt to bring him from the bottom.

COURT.

Mrs. Ada Givour was arraigned before a local J. P. on Friday last, charged by Patrick Kearns, of Burleigh, with using grossly insulting language to him on Friday, Sept. 3rd, and several other occasions. She pleaded guilty and was assessed $2 and costs.

Important Telephone Extensions.

The Bell Telephone Company has just completed a number of new and important trunk lines, and others are under way, and will be finished very shortly. The following is a partial list of what has been done in this Province, viz:—A line from Walkerton through Mildmay, Clifford, Harriston, (taking in Mt. Forest), Arthur, Fergus and Elora, and connecting with the rest of the system at Guelph. This will be also connected with London, etc., direct via Palmerston and Listowel, and extended to Brussels and Wingham. A new line has been run from Toronto to Barrie. A new line has been finished and is now working from Collingwood to Owen Sound via Clarksburg, Thornbury and Meaford. In fact as the company is now using nothing but hard drawn copper wire, which is greatly superior to iron for these lines, and has already a copper wire from Buffalo to Toronto, the officials say they could easily guarantee a satisfactory conversation from Buffalo to Owen Sound—290 miles—if any one ever required to use a line of that length. A new line has been strung from Wallaceburg to Sarnia. A new exchange has also been opened at Alvinston, and a trunk line connection made via Watford; also at Aylmer with a line to St. Thomas, and at Plattsville with a wire to New Hamburg. Men are now engaged in building from Hamilton to Brantford by an entirely new route, and this wire will be extended immediately to Waterford and Simcoe. Business is now done over the whole of the Bell Company's system, comprising many thousands of miles in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, at a uniform rate for five minute conversations, according to distance. Of the stated messages (in the Province alone where the sender has not chosen the best rate to speak direct to his correspondent), at a rate of 25 cents for a twenty word message to any subscriber within 100 miles of the sender, with an extra 12½ cents for each additional twenty words.

A Delicate Attention.

A young doctor, having just bought a practice in the suburbs, was waited on by a gentleman unexceptionally clad. "Doctor," said the visitor, "would it be agreeable to you to renew the agreement your predecessor made with me? I gave so much for every customer he sent me." "Ah, you are the chemist." "No, I am the undertaker."

A Fire Bug's Sentence.

Sam Wright (colored) son of Hattie Wright, of Ingersoll, has confessed to burning the building of Messrs. Johnston and Chamberlain in that town. The magistrate sent him to the Penetanguishene for five years.

He stood under the window and sang, "How Can I Leave Thee." But he did leave, and so suddenly that the dog went back of the house and wept.

IRELAND AND HER GRIEVANCES.

A Parnellite Complains That the Government Ignores Them.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—J. J. Clancy (Parnellite) in the House of Commons this evening charged the Government with refusing to pay the slightest attention to the Irish members when they urged remedies for the local grievances of the people of Ireland. Lord Randolph Churchill replied that the accusation was unfounded. He declared that the Government was eager to remedy "Every reasonable Irish grievance," and intended for that purpose to develop the functions of the local Government Boards and Board of Works in accordance if possible with the views of the Irish members. The Government, he adds, would make proposals to Parliament at the earliest moment possible for placing all questions of local government and public works in Ireland in the hands of the Irish people.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Chief Secretary for Ireland, also complained of the constant reiteration of the same subjects in debate. He was, he said, unable to conceive why this was done unless for the purpose of wasting time.

ON THE NICKEL PLATE.

Henry Pyrck, aged 32, legs crushed off, died last evening at Erie; home in Sterrettania, Pa. Henry Gebhardt of Pittsburg, killed in seat with his son. John F. Gebhardt of Pittsburg, dead in his father's arms. Davie Sharp of Erie, a cripple, killed instantly. — Sharp, a little son of the lavid Sharp, killed instantly. John Selfert of Erie, crushed to death. Charles Hirsch of Erie, instantly. John Meyers of Erie, mangled; dead when taken out. Adriel Heidler of Erie, instantly. John Seidler of Erie, formerly of Pittsburg, crushed under a seat. Twelve others were severely injured.

THE PROVINCIAL SYNOD.

Religious Education in Schools—The Use of Wine in the Sacrament.

MONTREAL, Sept. 15.—At the Provincial Synod to-day the committee appointed to study the question of religious education in the schools of Canada reported recommending the formation of diocesan sub-committees to obtain all the necessary information in this matter and that the secretary of each sub-committee prepare a digest of the laws of each province on this subject.

Rev. Dr. Carey moved a resolution strongly admonishing the clergy of the province not to employ in the sacrament of the Holy Communion any other liquid than wine and to adhere faithfully to the custom and tradition of the Catholic Church and make no innovation in so sacred a matter. The discussion on the motion was carried into the afternoon session. The motion was almost unanimously adopted.

DALY THE DYNAMITER.

A Petition in His Favor that is Unworthy of Consideration.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—A correspondent writes to the Times in reference to the resolution of the Limerick branch of the National League expressing sympathy with Daly the dynamiter whom the resolution describes as "dying in a British dungeon." The correspondent reminds the Times that when Daly was arrested there was found in his house in Birmingham a letter from Brennan, which proved that it was Daly's purpose to obtain admission to the strangers gallery in the House of Commons and to throw a bomb on the table during the debate. The Parnellites were to receive caution beforehand to absent themselves on the occasion. "If," continues the correspondent, "Daly's purpose had been successfully carried out, every leading statesman in the House of Commons, both sides, including Mr. Gladstone, would have been killed."

Mines in the Mattawa District.

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—Reports received from the Mattawa district say that operations are being vigorously pushed at the Wright silver mine near Lake Temiscaming. The erection of an expensive smelter will be completed this week rendering the exportation of the quarts unnecessary in future. The deeper the miners go the richer has the vein proved, and a yield of 80 per cent. is confidently expected by the chief engineer. An old hunter who resides in the vicinity alleges that the entire region abounds in silver deposits. He claims to be aware of the existence of a mine of immense value, but refuses to reveal its whereabouts until he is liberally rewarded.

Lord Churchill's Soundness.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Lord Randolph Churchill replying to the directors of the Scottish Protestant Alliance, who recently severely criticized his answer to their remonstrance against the appointment of Mr. Matthews, a Roman Catholic, to the Home Secretaryship says he must decline to enter the field of polemic theology in regard to the position of Catholics in a Protestant state. He adds that if the views of the Alliance were pushed to a logical conclusion they would involve the repeal of all of those acts of Parliament removing political disabilities of Catholics, and the re-enactment of penal laws, which the vast majority of the British people are anxious to forget.

British Aid for Charleston.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—The Lord Mayor of London has received a letter from Mr. Phelps, the United States Minister, forwarding a cable message from Secretary Bayard expressing President Cleveland's grateful acknowledgments for the generous action of the Lord Mayor and the city of London in behalf of the Charleston sufferers. N. M. Rothschild & Sons have contributed £500 and Messrs. Baring Bros the same amount to the relief fund. It is probable that a large amount will be realized.

Very Inhospitable Treatment.

BOOTH BAY, Me., Sept. 15.—Captain Reed of the fishing schooner Vought, from the Bay of Chaleur, reports that he went into Paspebiac in distress. His rigging had been carried away and he was out of water. Upon application to the steamer Lansdowne for permission to enter to repair and fill with water, he was peremptorily ordered to sea and given an hour to get out of the harbor.

A Buffalo Brewery Burnt.

BUFFALO, Sept. 15.—The premises of the Lake View Brewing Company were destroyed by fire to-day. Four of the men were severely injured by the falling of a floor. Loss $120,000, insurance $58,000.

Lots of Herrings.

QUEBEC, Sept. 15.—Damase Turgeon of Beaumont, who has just arrived from Labrador, reports that the herring fishery is very abundant there, several schooners having been filled at Bras D'Or and at Red bay by a single cast of the seine. The fish is also of a superior quality. The cod fishery on the other hand is poor.

Sir John in London.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 15.—A large crowd assembled at the Grand Trunk Railway station to-night to welcome Sir John A. Macdonald and party. The train arrived at 8:45 p.m. and the visitors were at once driven to the residence of the Hon. Mr. Carling.

All the material used in the construction of St. Michael's Church in Charleston was brought from England. That church is the only tall structure which the earthquake did not bring down.

WESTERN BREEDERS ALARMED.

The Pleuro-Pneumonia at Quebec made an Excuse for Asking for an Embargo.

OTTAWA, O., Sept. 15.—The State Board of Agriculture has sent the following communication to the Secretary of the Treasury:

In view of the recent outbreak of pleuro-pneumonia at the Quebec quarantine and the general apprehension that the same has occasioned among the farmers of this country, the Board of Agriculture suggests that the public interests would be subserved by the immediate rescinding of the order made by Sir head of your department some two or three years since, permitting the importation of cattle from the British dominions into the United States without quarantine, and when they are claimed for breeding purposes without the payment of duty while American cattle have been admitted into Canada only subject to a restriction of a ninety day quarantine. The order has always appeared to the stock breeders of the Western States as an unnecessary hardship because with the exception of the importation from the Atlantic Coast in a single instance of pleuro-pneumonia which, though appearing in four of the Western States, was promptly stamped out, these states have certainly been as free from disease as any part of British North America, and we see no reason whatever for admitting cattle or sheep duty free where other products are required to bear a share of the burdens of the public revenue. But whatever view your department may take of this branch of the subject, it is manifest to the board that until the apprehension, occasioned by the recent outbreak at Quebec, is allayed and the public is assured that the contagion is effectually stamped out, no importations of cattle should be allowed from that country, and we earnestly urge the importance of prompt action on the subject. We also suggest the propriety of requiring that all sheep imported be subjected to a quarantine, as it is well known that by this importation foot and mouth disease have several times been brought from Great Britain and Canada.

JUMPED A HUNDRED FEET.

All Philadelphia Stops to see an Acrobat's Leap.

From the Philadelphia Times.

The announcement that Prof. Charles Leroux of New York would jump from the top of the Dime Museum building drew a great multitude to the vicinity of Arch and Ninth streets yesterday at noon. All traffic was suspended. Cars and vehicles of all kinds were blockaded, until Arch street, from Eighth to Tenth streets, was one solid mass of people, horses and vehicles. The blockade also extended for a long distance north and south on Ninth-street. The windows and housetops were filled with people. Boys climbed upon the obstructed wagons, paying five cents a piece for the privilege. Uniformed messenger boys were conspicuous in the crowd and no amount of money could induce any boy to do an errand at that hour. Promptly at 12.30 o'clock the Professor appeared upon the high mansard roof one hundard feet above the pavement. He was greeted with loud cheers. His well-knit figure was displayed to advantage in light blue silk tights and satin trunks. A parachute sixteen feet in diameter swayed back and forth in the wind, and as the professor seized the lower end of it the crowd called out steady "One, two, three, one, two, three." The policemen cleared a space twenty feet square on Arch-street directly in front of the place from which the leap was to be made. As the crowd cried "three" the third time the professor leaped into the air. His descent was very rapid. A light breeze carried the parachute and its passenger about thirty feet to the east, and the professor just missed the lamp-post at the street corner. He struck a man upon the head, which threw the professor's right knee against his forehead, cutting a gash, which bled profusely. The jumper was led into the office as the crimson fluid dripped upon his bright-colored clothing. In a few moments the hero had donned his stylish suit and a high white hat, in which he looked like a veritable New York dude. After the crowd was dispersed it required twenty minutes for the policemen to move the cars and carriages and restore travel to its accustomed course.

This is taken as signifying that the alliance is at an end.

THROUGH THE AIR.

Successful Voyage From Cherbourg to London in a Steering Balloon.

The balloon Torpilleur, which is fitted with a patent steering and propelling apparatus, and in which the aeronaut L'Hoste and astronomer Mangot ascended from Cherbourg, France, at 11 o'clock last Thursday evening, descended in London at 6 o'clock the next morning. The aerial navigators returned to Cherbourg, and will attempt a voyage from that place to Norway.

The most recent feat, with conclusive proofs in the new born science of balloon navigation was performed in France on September 26, 1885, by the young military engineers, the brothers Renard, from the camp at Chalons, within a few miles from Paris. Starting at 4.20 p. m., the aeronauts reached Point du Jour after 5 p. m.; returning to the camp at 5.45 p. m. a distance of three miles each way. On this journey in the outward trip the wind was against them, opposing the advance of the apparatus toward the capital at the rate of four metres per second. The rate of speed of the balloon, as recorded by the "log balloon," was six metres per second. The revolution of the screw was fifty-five per minute; its diameter seven metres. The volume of the balloon was 1860 cubic metres, filled with pure hydrogen gas. The machine was eight horse power, constructed by M. Gramme, with a battery by Captain Renard, weighing in all 320 kilos, and capable of working at the rate given for two hours. The whole journey was performed with perfect evenness, and the balloon acted in a most satisfactory manner. After the journey Captain Charles Renard said: "I consider the problem of aerial navigation solved by the results of our experiment." A journey was also made on Sept. 23, 1885, with much the same results, the only difference being that the wind was with the aerial boat going out and against her on the return journey, and was light all the time, blowing at the rate of one metre per second. The distance covered was about five miles.

On November 3, 1884, Captains Renard and Krebs made a balloon voyage from Meudon to Bellancourt, and returned, alighting at the point from which they started in forty-five minutes. This was the third attempt made by Captain Renard with his balloon and steering apparatus, the second having proved a failure. His first attempt was in August, 1884, with such good results as to create the greatest interest in all the military circles of Europe. The balloon was cigar-shaped and pointed at each extremity. In the car were seats for two aeronauts, and the balloon had a directing apparatus and rudder. The force was obtained by a series of electric accumulators of ten horse power, and the balloon was operative for four hours.

On October 29, 1883, an experiment took place at the Place de la Defense, Courbevoie, Paris, under M. Brisson, but the cable apparatus failed and the result was consequently unsatisfactory.

In June, 1879, Professor Grimley started from Montreal for New York in the air ship Canada, but he had a fearful experience and came near losing his life owing to the poor quality of gas used.

In September, 1879, Professor C. R. Ritchell's air ship was sent up at Hartford, Conn. It consisted of a balloon above and a vertical screw, worked by hand power, beneath for lifting purposes, and a horizontal screw for steering. The result was anything but a success. In a four-mile breeze it could be steered out at a little increase above that force, it drifted miles to leeward.

The Last Swindle.

From the Pittsburg Chronicle.

Some time ago a couple of young gentlemen came to this city with a patent last. They took the absolute measurement of the foot and modeled the last after that. So perfect was it to be that any shoemaker could, by using it, make a boot or shoe which would be a perfect fit. They asked $5 a pair for them. One of the victims talking with a representative of this paper, yesterday, said: "I took a pair with the rest, and there was scarcely a business man in the city who did not give them his order. They arrived in due time, a whole barload of them via Adams Express Company and C.O.D. I paid for mine and placed them to one side. Some weeks after I thought I needed a pair of shoes and took them down to my shoemaker. He commenced to laugh as soon as he saw me, and pointing to a large pile of lasts on the floor, said: 'Throw them down there, they are worth 30 cents.' No one ever gave the story away, but there are business men in this city yet who will blush and use strong language if they are reminded of this little episode."

Not the Tips She Wanted.

From Tid Bits.

"Harry," said a young wife to her husband, "can you get me some ostrich tips to-day, as you go down town, and have them sent up?"

"Ostrich tips!" he answered, with a puzzled look.

"Yes, dear, ostrich tips."

"Oh," he replied, as if he knew all about it, "of course I can," and he went away without betraying his ignorance.

That evening when he came home his wife met him at the door.

"Oh, Harry," she cried, "the tips didn't come. You forgot them, you naughty fellow."

"Not much I didn't," he said with spirit; "but they didn't have any."

"Didn't have any? Why, I saw them in a dozen places yesterday. Where did you go?"

"Every place. Frank's and Joe's and Sam's and a whole lot more places. They could give me base ball tips, and horse-race tips, and regatta tips, but nobody had any ostrich tips, and I gave it up as a bad job."

She looked at him closely for an instant, took in the situation, and mutual explanations resulted in an amicable settlement.

Love Episode in a Prince's Household.

A genuine love episode in the Prince of Wales's household has recently attracted a pleasant degree of attention. Mr. Robertson, a personal attendant of the princess, has been seriously ill at Windsor for several weeks. A tirewoman of the princess, when the illness seemed likely to result fatally, declared that she loved the sick man, though she had previously rejected his addresses. The result was that she was married to him while he lay seriously ill, nursed him to recovery, and afterward the princess organized a household fete in celebration of the happy event.

A Word to the Girls.

From the Omaha Republican.

Let not the virgins of the far east be beguiled by fables of the wealthy cowboys in Montana and Wyoming who are said to be prancing up and down the land in search of wives. As a rule these chaps are loafers and the woman who is led away by stories of their fabulous riches is simply a fool. The real men on the frontier who want honest wives do not seek them by methods of cheap advertising.

Newspaper Notoriety Catches Them.

A Miss Derby at Newport, being chided by her aunt for appearing in an immodest bathing dress, replied: "Why, aunty! I don't think myself that it is exactly the thing for a young girl, and I saw in a newspaper that it was very wicked, but then it was described in such glowing and attractive terms that I could not resist getting one." Such is poor, weak human nature.

Newspapers printed in luminous ink are now Italian devices for making sleepless nights more entertaining.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1886.

A VOICE FROM THE NORTH-WEST.

The following vigorous deliverance, on the subject of the Haldimand election, is from the pen of the editor of the Southern Manitoba Times, Mr. George Walton, son of Mr. Joseph Walton. The latter gentleman is well known in this vicinity as a gentleman of such pronounced political opinions that to call him a Conservative would be like an insult—no term but Tory will express the depth and ardour of his political feelings. That a son of his should rise to so high a plane as to pen the following, shows that his early political education was neglected or that he got so strong a dose, that his knowledge of the corruption of the Conservative party's ways and means, easily led him from the error of his ways. The fact is a sign of the times. It shows that fossil Toryism cannot bind the rising generation, and that they, naturally, when left to think for themselves, elect to range themselves on the right side. Below is the article alluded to:—

The contest in Haldimand is over. Polling closed last night with a majority of 100 for Coulter, the Liberal candidate. This is, perhaps, the greatest victory ever obtained by the Liberals, and beside it Chambly sinks into insignificance. The pressure brought to bear by Sir John Macdonald's government, in order to capture Haldimand, has never been equalled in point of determination, and total disregard of means employed. It will be remembered that the seat became vacant through the death of Mr. Thompson, M.P., which occurred prior to last session of the Dominion Parliament. During the session, enquiry having been made as to when it was the intention of the Government to issue the writ to fill the vacancy, Sir John replied, that as it would be unfair to those who were entitled under the new Franchise Act to vote, to bring on the election before completion of the new lists, the election would be deferred until after that date. Notwithstanding the apparent solicitude of the Premier, on the new electors' account, the County of Chambly, Quebec, was opened before the new lists were prepared, with the result already known. Having lost Chambly, it was determined by a desperate effort to stir up in Ontario, a war of races, and during the excitent, capture Haldimand, which could be used as a menace to the bolting Quebec wing of the Government. Haldimand was therefore opened, and into the field were sent D'Alton McCarthy, Tom White, and a specially selected horde of electioneering and bribery agents, well loaded with election clap, trap and money, and with instructions to carry the county at all hazards. So desperate became the fight that Sir John, the Indians' great father, was summoned and hastened to the scene, to coerce the 125 unwilling Indians to help the Tory cause. While McCarthy screamed "down with the French," and "to hell with the Pope," from the public platform, the brigade of Tory bribers quietly pursued their work, and with the use of money, promises, and every other available corrupt electioneering agency, known to those experts, sought to turn the tide in favour of their candidate. All to no purpose, however. The result is a crushing defeat for the Government, who are now compelled to accept from both Quebec and Ontario the unmistakeable warning, that the electors but wait for the General elections, to oust from office, the most signally corrupt and incapable Government, with which any country has ever been cursed. Haldimand in 1882 gave a Liberal majority of 126, and now with a gain of 100, claimed by the Tories under the new lists, and 125 enfranchised Indian electors, with every electioneering engine in the field underfull head of steam, the majority is reduced by only. All honor to the electors of Haldimand, whom Canada will to-day contemplate with pride, as a people over whom a rotten and tottering Government, in the last stages of decay, have failed to cast their fetid glamour.

"Imitation is the Sincerest Flattery."

If the above quotation is true, then Dr. R. V. Pierce ought to feel highly flattered, on account of the many imitators of his popular remedy, the "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," for they have scores of imitators, but never an equal, for the cure of sick and bilious headache, constipation, impure blood, kidney pains, internal fever and all bowel complaints. With a bottle of the sugared granules in the house, you can dispense with the family doctor and his often nauseous medicines. 6d61w37

Locksmiths Locked Out.

"Tell you something about the locksmiths?" exclaimed the craftsman, dolefully. "There are none now. The trade is dead. Locks are now all made by machinery, except, perhaps, safe and prison locks; those are hand-made, because they afford greater security than the other kind.

Time was when the lockmaker was a smith and bell-hanger as well, and the trade was a good one; but it has all changed now, and we do nothing except repairing or duplicating a key that has been lost. 'Electricians' do the bell-hanging, and so we are crowded out.

"The factory-made lock has taken the place of the hand-made article. Now perhaps twenty men are required to make a lock which was formerly the work of one man. These men superintend machinery by which certain parts of the lock are made. One man handles a punch and cuts out the tumblers; another makes the sliders; the springs are made by another, and so on, until all the parts are ready to be put together. One of the men could not make a lock without assistance from the other workmen, and they have no knowledge of the principles of locks.

"Before the era of machinery all locks were made by hand. That is why old locksmiths understood their business so well. But there are very few smiths of the old school in the business now. Most of them have quit making locks, and are making sewing-machines. The principles on which sewing-machines are made can be easily understood by any locksmith, and there is more money to be made in the new business.

"There's an old key to one of the doors on what used to be the 'Connecticut bastile,' the old copper mine at Simsbury. It's large enough and heavy enough to knock a man down with. There's an old key that used to jingle at a state prison turnkey's waist, but all these old keys are now out of use and style.

"Yes, the modern lock is superior to the old-fashioned one, and for this reason it is harder to pick. The old lock was made to accommodate a large key, so that no matter how fine the construction inside, an accomplished cracksman could always get an idea of the works. The keyhole being large, he would insert a wire, the end of which being covered with wax, would receive an impression of the lock. It was an easy matter to make a key after this model in wax, so that most of the old locks could be picked with but little difficulty. Banks used to secure their outer doors with locks that required keys six inches long to open, and the wax-impression plan and skeleton keys have opened many and many a bank in years past.

"But the patent lock of to-day, requiring a flat key, defies any attempt at picking the works, because the keyhole is so small and the slots are so numerous. For that reason skeleton keys are useless to thieves nowadays, and cracksmen rely for success principally on their possession of duplicate keys.

"Jail work, as it is known to the trade, is the only branch of our business where machinery is not used.

"All the locks for jails and penitentiaries are made of wrought iron and constructed with from two to five tumblers, finished off smooth on the inside, and held together by steel screws and brass clasps. The parts, when thus joined, are air-tight, and the only opening in the lock is the keyhole. Such a lock is as durable as can be made."—Hartford Globe.

CHAPTER VII.

THE HAUNTED ROOM.

I am afraid I sat longer than I should have done in the Australian's little smoking room. It was not the admirable quality of Mauleverer's cigars that charmed me in the spot. My mind was full of all the incidents of the day, and I slowly pondered on them as the fragrant clouds of tobacco smoke rose above my head. My predominant feeling was one of almost extravagant delight. "She loves me! She loves me!" was the thought that most frequently came uppermost in my mind. But ever and anon there shot across the broad current of my joy a sinister sense of doubt and apprehension. I remembered the inscription on the back of Daisy's portrait, "Daisy Stancliffe, aetat ——." I recalled, not now with the scornful indifference that I had felt in the train the wild words of Gregson, "There is murder going to be done at the place to which you are going, and you know it." If that were true, then, at least, I thought I did know by whom the murder would be wrought. It would be the man Flinter, whom Daisy had just described to me as dangerous. Aye and once or twice I remembered how Gregson had involved all of us, myself and Branksome, and even Daisy herself, in a common condemnation with this ruffian. I knew how guiltless I myself was of all criminal plots against any human being. But I was not more certain of my own innocence than I was of Daisy's. Let me write that here with emphasis, so that, blamable as I may have been in many matters, I shall at least be free from blame in this.

But from all these wild and wandering fancies my mind ever returned to the same delightful thought of Daisy's love. That soon or after she should be mine, I was resolute. As for Mauleverer's millions, let them perish with him, if they were to stand between us.

I was aroused from a long, deep reverie by the silvery tone of a clock which stood on the mantelpiece of the room. I looked up and to my surprise saw that it was one o'clock. I had spent more than an hour by myself after Mauleverer had left me.

There was all through the house that dead and deathlike stillness which is never so complete as in a large country house at that hour of the night. I could feel, as it were, all around me the great empty rooms, and the long corridors, with their mysterious windings, and the worm-eaten staircases, up and down which those who had been dust now for hundreds of years had once passed in the flush of life and health.

There was not a sound, I say, to break the silence; and yet as I listened that very silence seemed to become vocal, and all the air was filled with one rythmic cry that struck upon my tingling nerves with a distinctness which spoken words could never have attained. "There is murder to be done here; murder, murder, murder!" That was what the awful silence of the great house seemed to say to me. I knew that it was nothing more than the effect of the imagination due to the excitement of the past day. Yet I started up in nervous terror and lighted my candle, hardly daring to look behind me as I turned from the room to seek my chamber.

Where or how I got wrong I hardly knew. I found presently, however, that I had missed the corridor through which I had to pass on my way to the staircase leading to my room. I turned into another passage, thinking it might lead me in the right direction. As I was passing a door in this corridor, I distinctly heard a voice raised as in anger. It was Flinter who was speaking.

"Curse him! what has brought him here to meddle with everything? You may believe me or not, as you like, but if that infernal boy is not put out of the way, and quickly, too, we may as well give up the game."

I heard no more. There was a faint murmur as though some one responded to Flinter, but I could catch no intelligible sound, so I passed on, hardly thinking for the moment that what I had heard could have any reference to myself. The next turn brought me in some inexplicable fashion to the head of the great staircase, from which spot it was an easy matter for me to find my way to my bedroom.

I closed the outer door opening upon the lonely stair that gave access to my apartment and looked around me. I was in the delightful little sitting room beyond which the bedroom was dimly visible through an open door. A fire had been lighted in both rooms, but in neither case was it now burning. The black ashes contrasted drearily with the sumptuous furnishing of the two apartments. I did not linger in the outer room. I crossed the threshold of the haunted chamber, and closing the door, began at once to prepare for bed.

And now, in the very dead of the night and cut off by long galleries and lonely staircases from any other human being, with nerves shaken, too, by all the exciting incidents of the day, I first realized the fact that to sleep in this room with all its memories and traditions was by no means so pleasant an adventure as it had seemed a few hours earlier. What was the ghost which was said to haunt the place? I sat down and tried to recall the legend as I had heard it after dinner. A woman, false and cruel, who had Once been the mistress of the hall, kept the young heir a captive in this very room for many years in order that she might substitute her own child for him. In this lonely chamber—so the story ran—the captive boy had only one visitor; it was his half brother, the child for whose sake his own life was doomed to misery. And the two had learned to love each other, so that day by day the young favorite would creep up the dark staircase and find admission to the chamber where the true heir was imprisoned. One day the younger child was playing as usual in the room when something attracted him to the window. It was open, for it was in the summer time. He peeped out and saw his mother standing below him. With a cry of joy he leaned out of the window clapping his hands, and in a moment he had overbalanced himself and had fallen a crushed and lifeless mass at the feet of the cruel woman who had sinned for him in vain. A few hours later, when the particulars which the shock of so terrible a tragedy had produced had died away, the lady climbed the dusty oaken staircase and entered the room where the heir lay, overwhelmed with grief and horror at the fate of his little playmate. Dark vengeance was on her face—the vengeance of a woman who has lost all that made life worth living and who burns with a desire to make every other woman childless. There was the sudden glitter of a knife, a sharp cry of terror from the captive and then silence. In the morning the little prisoner was found lying dead, stabbed to the heart, while beside him crouched his stepmother, a gibbering maniac.

This was the tragedy of my room. It was the ghost of the lady that was said to haunt it, though there were legends which told how the cry of a child, a long, low wail of misery, had been heard in the silent night echoing through the corridors in the deserted wing in which the chamber stood. I glanced round upon the rich hangings of the wall. Had they seen that awful tragedy enacted? I remembered that for scores of years, perchance a century, no one had slept in this room before to-night. It needed all my skepticism in regard to supernatural appearances to nerve me to that outward show of indifference which a man, even when no one is near him, regards as essential to the preservation of his self-respect. Before I extinguished the light I drew aside the curtain of the window, the outline of which was made visible against the background of sky. Then I hastily sought my bed, and tried to compel myself to sleep.

Far sooner than I had expected sleep came. It seemed, indeed, that I had hardly laid my head upon the great square French pillow when I was wandering away in dreamland. There was nothing bright or pleasant about my dreams, however. I was in bed, it seemed to me, in the haunted room; but I was lying wide awake, and all my senses were so acutely alive that I was able to hear the faint ticking of the clock in the great entrance hall, far, far away from this remote wing; and while conscious that the darkness of night brooded all around me, I found that everywhere I could see as plainly as in the daylight. Nay, more plainly, far; for now doors and walls, and heavy hangings of tapestry and leather no longer obstructed my vision. My eye pierced through all these things and revealed to me everything which lay beyond.

What was it that—in that strange phantasmagoria of sleep—first attracted my attention? Far away in some distant part of the great mansion I heard, with that preternaturally acute sense of hearing with which I now seemed to be endowed, a door stealthily opened. Some one peeped out into the darkness of the corridor. It was Flinter—or rather it was Flinter's face—that I saw, through all the intervening doors and walls and passages, as I lay here on my bed in the haunted room. But it was Flinter's face—cruel, brutal, vicious—upon the body of a woman; and I knew that I was looking upon the lady who had done murder here where I lay bound in the hideous spell of this nightmare vision.

Slowly, the figure advanced. He—she—it—I knew not what to call it, so frightfully compounded was it of the real Flinter and the legendary woman—came slowly down the corridor, something bright and sharp glittering in its bony hand. Though no lamp was lighted anywhere it advanced with unfaltering certainty of step turning round many a corner, now opening door and passing a ghostly chamber into the gallery beyond, now climbing a stair, and now pausing for a moment to feel the keen edge of that flashing blade, and to indulge in a chuckle of devilish malice. I knew that some mysterious agency had lifted me from my bed, had carried me down all these intricate stairs and corridors, and had placed me by the side of the apparition. I was following it as in a trance; conscious, too, that I had been endowed suddenly with the power of flying, and that at any moment I could soar into the air above me.

Suddenly I found that the figure had reached a door which I recognized as the outer door of my own apartments. We seemed to pass through the stout oaken barrier, and across the little sitting room, and then in an instant we had entered the sleeping chamber, and stood by the side of the bed. Some one was quietly sleeping, with his head half buried in a great square pillow of down. I looked to see who the sleeper was, and with a thrill of horror I saw it was myself who was lying there. Myself! No, I was brooding, unseen even by the fearful thing that I had been following, above the bed, hovering in mid-air, while my body lay below me, motionless, as under the spell of some mysterious trance.

The horrid thing with the knife looked down with a grin of cruel delight upon my defenseless form. It was Flinter now that I saw. That woman's disguise had been cast aside, and the ruffian stood there in his ordinary attire, with all the mean and brutal lines upon his face plainly visible. He looked at me closely for a moment, then softly he turned down the covering and placed his hand upon my heart. With the spell of an awful terror resting upon me, I watched him from above. Quickly he withdrew his hand, and then I saw the other arm upraised, the knife glittering in his grasp. I tried to scream; I tried to throw my improbable self between the assassin and my helpless body. I was powerless, frozen, lifeless. The knife descended like a bolt from heaven, and I saw it buried deep in my heart.

I awoke from my terrible dream bathed in a chill perspiration, and shivering from head to foot with such a terror—cold and ghastly—clutching at my heart as I had never felt before. I knew that at the last moment, as the knife fell, the spell of silence had been broken, and I had uttered a cry. That or some other sound was still ringing in my ears. What was it? I knew that I had heard something—something which had aroused me from that fearful nightmare—and that it had been close to my ear; but in the agitation of my mind at that first moment of my return to consciousness I could not recall what it was that had aroused me.

And then in an instant it all flashed upon my mind. I had heard a faint rustling as of a woman's dress sweeping across the floor, and then there had been a sharp sound, such as that which is made by the quick closing of a tightly fitting door. Yes; now that I was wide awake I was conscious of the fact that if that hideous fancy which had taken possession of my brain while I slept was but the vision of a nightmare, I had, at least, been visited in my chamber during my slumbers.

I sprang from my bed, and, running to where I had seen a box of matches, struck a light, and then turned to survey the room. All was as it had been when I had lain down to sleep an hour before. All! I looked round upon those somber walls, through which, in my terrible dream, my vision had pierced with ease. They gave me no hint of the secrets which they held. The door of the room was locked on the inside, just as I had left it. No one could have vanished through that substantial barrier without leaving some trace of his passage. I felt the leathern hangings of the walls. Behind them the wainscot gave forth in response to my blows a muffled, hollow sound; but it told me nothing. And yet, that some one had been with me in the room, I felt certain. I no longer had any superstitious apprehensions. It was no ghost, I was well assured, that had visited my bedside. I shuddered at the thought that perhaps my dream had been only too real, and that it was Flinter who, by some mysterious means, had found admission to my chamber—Flinter, whose last words, as I accidentally overheard them when I retired to rest, had pointed clearly, as I now felt, to my own removal. It might be that he had been alarmed by my sudden cry at the moment when he was about to dispatch me, and had retired by some mysterious doorway—such as I was well assured existed—to wait until I was again asleep.

LOCAL NEWS.

Lacrosse Match.

The Actives will play a match with the Young Riversides on the Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon if the weather will permit.

Annual Meeting To-night.

The Young Men's Christian Association will hold their annual meeting in their rooms this evening at eight o'clock. A full attendance of members is expected. Subscribers to the Association are also invited to attend.

Picnic Party.

A large picnic party of young people drove from town this morning to Lakefield, from which place they took steamer for the back lakes, where picnic festivities occupied their attention, without regard to wind or weather.

Rifle Matches.

A well-attended meeting of the Peterborough Rifle Association was held in the orderly room in the drill shed on Wednesday evening, to make arrangements with regard to the annual matches. It was decided to hold the regular monthly match on Thursday, Sept. 30th, and the annual fall matches on Monday and Tuesday, October 11th and 12th.

No Lacrosse To-morrow.

Mr. Harry Neil, secretary of the Riverside Lacrosse Club, to-day received a message from the Secretary of the Norwood Lacrosse Club, stating that the club would not be able to play in Peterborough to-morrow, as they could not get a team together. The Riversides and the public are very much disappointed, and it is hoped the Norwoodians will come to time at an early date. The Riversides will lose considerably on the transaction, as they have been liberal in advertising the game.

Salvation Army Jubilee.

The marching and accompanying musical productions of the Salvation Army, and the proceedings of the army at the barracks last night were of an unusually vigorous nature, the occasion being a grand jubilee and thanksgiving. Staff-Captain Eadie, of Kingston, and officers and senior soldiers from the corps of the surrounding villages, ably supported by the captain, officers and soldiers of the local branch, took part in the services. Although the weather was unfavourable, there was a large gathering of the forces and a hallelujah time was spent.

The Interpretation Thereof.

"Bon March"—"What a funny name for a store!" "What does it mean, and how do you pronounce it?" said a lady walking down George street to a companion. "It is pronounced bo' marshay, and it means immense bargains, such as will always be found at Mr. Carton's Bon Marche." "They do tell me—those who have tried it—that at this shop, everything required for household use can be got of first-class quality at delightfully low prices." "I'm going to try it, will you come with me?" "Yes." "When, to-morrow afternoon?" "Yes." They passed on, and the next moment a millinery store absorbed them.

Wedding Bells.

A Trio of Marriages on Wednesday After-Noon.

The matrimonial fever ran high on Wednesday, no less than three (fate)alities occurring. The residence of Rev. Mr. Davis was the scene of one of these joyous events, the occasion being the matrimonial union of Mrs. Kidd to Mr. James McPherson, of St. Johns, Que. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Davis father of the bride, assisted by Rev. I. Tovell. Miss Davis and Miss Purrier. acted as bridesmaids while Dr. Caldwell of Lakefield, and Mellville Kidd supported the groom. A large number of elegant presents were received by the bride. After partaking of the wedding breakfast the newly wedded couple left by the C. P. R. express for Toronto and west.

NUMBER TWO.

About four o'clock in the afternoon the bell of St. John's church pealed forth a merry chime, publishing the marriage of Miss Nellie Pethick to Mr. Harry Hunter of Michigan. The ceremony was performed in St. John's church, Rev. John Farncomb, of Lakefield, officiating. Miss Mary Pethick and Mr. Walter Hooper assisted the bride and groom in the trying ordeal, At the conclusion of the wedding the party drove to the residence of the bride's father near Lakefield, where the wedding breakfast was attended to.

NUMBER THREE.

The third event of the day was the marriage of Miss Emma Armstrong, daughter of Mr. R. Armstrong, to Mr. Albert E. Botsam Hardware merchant of Bobcaygeon. The wedding took place at the brides home, Rev I. Tovell officiating. The happy couple left on the evening train on an extended trip westward.

The usual congratulations are considering the multiplicity of the circumstances pooled for the occasion.

Reception to Rev. Mr. Torrance

The Congregation of St. Paul's Welcome Home Their Pastor on His Return from a Visit to Europe.

The congregation of St. Paul's assembled in the spacious Sunday School rooms of the church on Wednesday evening, on the occasion of a public reception given to Rev. E. F. Torrance, pastor of the church, on his return home from a visit to Europe.

A splendid tea was provided in the school room by the ladies of the church, and was thoroughly enjoyed. After tea, Sheriff Hall, who presided, announced the object of the gathering, and called on the members of the choir, who sang the following hymn of welcome, the words of which were written for the occasion.

"WELCOME HOME."

We greet our friend and pastor
With joy and thankfulness,
And to our gracious Master
Our gratitude express,
For all the mercies given,
On land and ocean wide—
Through dangers seen or hidden,
His hand did safely guide.

In health and strength returning,
To do the Father's will,
From God the Spirit learning
"To feed the flock"—until He comes"—the Great and Holy,
To gather young and old,
"To be with Him" in Glory,
In yonder Heavenly fold.

We welcome thee with pleasure,
And fervently do pray:
That God with heavenly treasure
May fill thy soul alway.
And whilst to others showing,
The path of life divine.
May Jesu's peace, o'erflowing
In plenteous streams, be thine.

And when THY LORD RETURNING,
Shall claim "His own" from thee.
Thy loyal work discerning,
Shall say: "Well done for Me,"
May He on that blest morning
His faithful servant own,
With "Crown of life" adorning,
And a glorious "Welcome Home."

Rev. Mr. Torrance, in a brief and happy speech, thanked the congregation for their great kindness in giving him such a hearty welcome. In referring to the ten years of his ministry as pastor of St. Paul's, he said his duties had been a joy to him, his meat and drink, and he hoped they would continue to be the same.

A musical programme, appropriate to the occasion, was provided.

The church choir contributed a number of choice choruses, while Mr. Macduff delighted the assembly with several beautiful violin solos. His imitation of the bagpipes seemed to thrill the hearts of his hearers and was greatly appreciated. An encore was insisted on. Miss A. Hall and Mr. Parker, and Mrs. Ferguson and Miss Gray contributed pretty piano duets, and Miss Vair sang with particular acceptance a charming solo.

The doxology brought the reception to a close, and the congregation separated, after having spent a very joyous evening.

Provincial Government Circular

Relating to the Enforcement of the Scott Act.

The following circular will be read with interest by all concerned in the enforcement of the Canada Temperance Act.

PROVINCIAL SECRETARY'S OFFICE,
License Branch, Canada Temperance Act Division,
TORONTO, Sept. 11th, 1886.

To the Commissioners, License Inspectors, Chiefs of Police, and Constables in counties and cities in which the Canada Temperance Act, of 1878, has been adopted:—

Complaints have from time to time reached the Government through the public press and otherwise to the effect that the Canada Temperance Act, of 1878, is not efficiently enforced in some localities, and Inspectors have also complained that the constabulary do not in all cases render them the aid they have a right to expect in the enforcement of the law.

In a former circular inspectors were instructed that it was their duty to see that the several provisions of the Canada Temperance Act, of 1878, were enforced in their districts; that they were to be specially vigilant in the prosecution of offenders for infraction of the Act, and not to wait for others to make complaint; and they were also required to perform such necessary detective service as their position would admit.

In again calling the attention of inspectors to these instructions, the undersigned begs to remind them that the enforcement of the Canada Temperance Act is the single object for which they have been appointed, and if that duty is neglected, then the ground for their appointment ceases to exist.

It is the duty of police and constables to aid in the enforcement of law, not only rendering necessary assistance to the officers charged with enforcing a particular law, but also by themselves prosecuting where an offence is brought to their knowledge.

In many places the Inspectors complain that the constables refuse to serve summonses, or execute warrants in violation of the Canada Temperance Act. The undersigned desires to impress upon all constables that by the obligation of their office, they are in duty bound to act in all cases when called upon by the constituted authorities to that end.

I again urgently call the attention of the Commissioners and Inspectors to the desirability of impressing upon the minds of the Justices in Sessions the importance of appointing in each municipality one or more constables in sympathy with the Act and its due enforcement. This will be found to be a most efficacious mode of securing the observance of the law, or its enforcement against those who violate it.

The refusal of magistrates to act in cases arising under the Act is a source of embarrassment in some districts. Inspectors will please notify the Department promptly when magistrates refuse to act or when those willing to act cannot be found.

I have the honor to be
Your obedient servant,
ARTHUR S. HARDY,
Provincial Secretary.

J. W. Manning, Chief Office C. T. A. Division License Branch.

Personal.

Mr. R. J. Lee is holidaying at St. Thomas.

Rev. I. Tovell, on Tuesday, bade adieu to the General Conference being held in Toronto, to attend to a particular conference in Peterborough yesterday. He again left for Toronto Conference this evening.

Mr. James Stevenson, Mayor, and Mr. Geo. Hilliard, M. P., left town yesterday for the east and thereby hangs a tail, or rather a handle—it is stated on one hand that their business is in connection with the local squabble over the vacant senatorship due this district. The other explanation given is that they are on their way to be present at a combined conference and conspiracy by leading Tories respecting the coming elections.

The Lair of the Lion.

What the Dry Goods Den of the "Golden Lion" Contains. Bill of Fare for the Fall and Winter Trade—A Glance at the Gorgeous Array of Goods.

Among the many first-class dry goods establishments which characterize the commercial activity of Peterborough, the "Golden Lion" occupies a prominent position. In passing, a representative of the EXAMINER was struck with the indications of business life, and, dropping in, was astonished at the plethoric shelves and piled-up counters the interior presented. A closer inspection only deepened the impression made by a cursory glance.

DIRECT IMPORTATIONS.

One feature that distinguishes the stock is, that it has been purchased either in the wholesale markets of Belfast, Glasgow, London and Manchester, or directly from the great manufactories. The public will thus see that chance for better selection is presented, and that better goods can be offered, at prices not heightened by two or three intermediate profits being added. Direct importation admits of the dealer giving better goods at the same prices. So great is the business that it is necessary to divide it into distinct departments, occupying the three stories of the block.

THE DRESS GOODS DEPARTMENT is in charge of Mr. William Thomas, who, with an experience in the trade of over 20 years, ten of which have been passed with the Golden Lion, can be counted on to minister to the wants of customers in the most satisfactory manner. This department includes all dress fabrics, plushes, silks, satins, Rhadames, brocades, mourning goods, etc. All these lines are fully represented by an immense stock in all the leading shades and textures, including the latest novelties, of which Jersey cloths, buncle cloths, and costume cloths will be in demand. The popular colors run from tan to dark chocolate, with navy blue a close competitor. A vast stock of mourning goods embraces all known fabrics. A full supply of proper trimmings, including rosary, passementerie, fringes, and marabout (feather) trimmings make the department complete, not to mention the celebrated Gilbert dress linings.

THE HABERDASHERY DEPARTMENT is in charge of Mr. J. B. Hutchins, recently of Brockville, and a valuable addition to the staff he is. In his department will be found a stock of gloves and hosiery equal to the cities—a fine variety of ladies' kid gloves in black, colored and evening shades, mosquetaires, all shades, ladies' children's and misses' black and colored cashmeres. The hosiery comprises splendid lines of black and colored cashmeres. Mr. Hutchins has introduced an appliance for displaying hosiery which lady customers must appreciate—fifty dozen seen at a glance. Corsets include the Ball Health and the Broadway French Wove corsets. Every description of laces and embroideries, lace collars and plastrons ties, etc., buttons, ornaments, required in ladies' attire, will be found here.

THE STAPLES AND CARPET DEPARTMENTS

receive the personal supervision of Mr. R. Fair, the proprietor of the Golden Lion, and include a splendid array of goods in these lines, imported direct and the very best value. Cottons and woollens bought before the rise and sold at old prices. In carpets a vast and varied stock, from the costliest Brussels to the humblest hemp, together with Axminister and Smyrna rugs, floor oilcloths, etc., invite attention, as well as lace curtains, and, in fact, everything required in house furnishings.

Mr. Harry Adams is in charge of which contains a large stock of tweeds—Canadian, Scotch, English—broad-cloth, overcoatings, gents' furnishings, etc. etc.

THE TAILORING AND ORDERED GOODS DEPARTMENT,

THE MILLINERY DEPARTMENT, under Miss White present a magnificent array of attractions, and her large experience as a milliner enables Mr. Fair to guarantee perfect satisfaction in this department. She has spent the past 11 months on the continent and has thus come in contact with the latest fashions in the most splendid stores in the world. She has a magnificent stock of hats and bonnets, which space will not admit alluding to but which can be seen at the grand opening on Sept. 29th, 30th and Oct. 1st when can also be seen a great stock of imported mantles, dolmans, dolmanettes etc. etc.

THE DRESS AND MANTLE DEPARTMENT, with Miss Gilchrist at its head; with a staff of some 20 skilled assistants, with unstinted access to the best of goods; with a full knowledge of the business; prepared to guarantee every satisfaction in fit and styles is doing a wonderful business daily increasing in patronage and winning every day new customers by the excellence of its work.

The fitting rooms are on the second floor at the head of the principal staircase, and are thus easy of access to the lady customers of the establishment.

THE COUNTING HOUSE DEPARTMENT has at his head Miss Thompson, as bookkeeper and cashier, who has been in that position since the opening of the house. She is very thorough, seldom, if ever, making a mistake. The members of the staff in general are genial and obliging, and they have special instructions to extend the utmost courtesy to every customer, no matter of what station in life.

The "Golden Lion," with a thoroughly complete stock, with a capable staff, with a first-rate past record, and Mr. R. Fair as ruling spirit, cannot fail to be eminently successful in its fall and winter trade. In all respects it is worthy of the patronage of the public.

During the week of the coming Central Exhibition, among the sights to be seen, visitors should not omit the "Golden Lion," which is well worthy the inspection of visitors, whether regarded from an artistic or business point of view.

HALF-BRED HUNTERS.

Observations on Their Value by an English Writer.

A writer in The London Field, in an article on Hunting Sires, says: "There is no other way to get hunters than by thoroughbred sires, and, for the sake of our own national credit, sportsmen should be more particular than they are in making quite sure that they have the genuine article, instead of the spurious imitations that are passed off as weight carriers. They are sure to find it out in the long run, as a twenty minutes' burst with hounds will bring out some very undesirable indications, and, long before a season is out, the half bred one on the sire's side as well as the dam's, is certain to go all to pieces. It seems to be the one essential in a hunter that his sire should be thoroughbred, though any amount of allowance may be given to the dam for coarse hairs in her composition. Her inferiority of blood only appears to come out when her offspring is put into race horse sort of training; but in a hunter proper it may never show. It could not be though that the best hunters, when kept as stallions, if they are only half bred, never get their own merit. There was a noticeable case of this in Devonshire years ago. Gainsborough, by Rubens, was the best sire ever known in the western counties, as everything he got was a hunter. To make a hunter breed, as it was anticipated, a young Gainsborough was kept, by Gainsborough out of a half-bred mare; and always under the most jealous if not the hardest rider in the hunt, nothing could beat him over any country with anything like a start. With this sort of reputation he was as largely patronized by the farmers as the old horse, but he never got one worth two ten pound notes. I have never heard of a half-bred one that did, and there have been a good many in the country since Gainsborough's time, and there are a great many in the country still, with many people, I am sorry to say, foolish enough to use them. There is time, indeed, to be lost when breeding in the orthodox fashion by the true thoroughbred, without trying other expensive experiments; and when those who are now using their best efforts toward the encouragement of the best thoroughbred hunting sires can succeed in lessening the risk of failures, they will deserve well of their countrymen."

Racing in the States.

SHEEPSHEAD BAY, Sept. 16.—First race, 1 mile—Rupert won, Blue Wing second, Saxony third; time 1.43. Second race, 1½ miles—Queen won, Barnum second, Heel-and-Toe third; time 2.12. Third race, 7 furlongs—Beside Jane won, Nero second, Gusette third; time 1.28½. Fourth race, 1½ miles—Aretino won, The Bourbon second, Tenbooker third; time 2.37½. Fifth race, 1½ miles—Lizzie Minch won, Sapphire second, Unab third; time 1.55. Sixth race, 1 9-16 miles, on turf—Tattler won, Elizabeth second, Ernest third; time 2.08.

A Sensational Horse Race.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Sporting circles are greatly excited over a sweepstake race of £1000 sterling each, arranged to be run on the last day of the Houghton meeting at Newmarket on October 29, between the Duke of Westminster's 3-year old bay colt Ormonde, carrying 122 pounds, Lord Hastings 4-year-old bay colt, Melton, carrying 122 pounds, and H. L. Baroley's aged brown horse Bendigo, carrying 122 pounds. The distance will be one mile and a quarter. It is expected that the race will be the most sensational on record. Ormonde is considered the best horse produced this century, while the other three also have splendid records. The betting on the race will be enormous. The public will make Ormonde their favorite, as he has an unbroken record.

Sad Stories of the Earthquake.

From the New York Times.

A couple of young folks living in a country hamlet a hundred miles or so from Charleston were married about a week before the earthquake's fury, and they were enjoying the first days of their honeymoon in a visit to friends in Charleston when the terrible disaster came. The groom—whose name is Culbreth—was hurt somewhat, not gravely but enough to add a large measure of personal anxiety to the fears of his bride, who, naturally of a frail constitution, became mentally overwrought, and though the doctors strove their utmost to give her assistance, all efforts were in vain, her condition growing worse and worse, till within a half week the beautiful girl had become, not merely emaciated and a wreck physically, but was as well—so the doctors said—hopelessly insane, beyond all possibility of recovery. The young husband bears his sorrow in a dazed sort of way that promises ill, too, for his future, seeming scarce able to comprehend what really has come to pass. These young people had exceeding bright prospects; they had money, intelligence and happy dispositions. Seldom has such gloom ever fallen on the blisses of a honeymoon.

"Imitation is the Sincerest Flattery."
If the above quotation is true, then Dr. R. V. Pierce ought to feel highly flattered, on account of the many imitators of his popular remedy, the "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," for they have scores of imitators, but never an equal, for the cure of sick and bilious headache, constipation, impure blood, kidney pains, internal fever and all bowel complaints. With a bottle of the sugared granules in the house, you can dispense with the family doctor and his often nauseous medicines. 6d61w27

THE PEOPLE'S WILLIAM.

MR. GLADSTONE ENDORSES MR. PARNELL'S LAND BILL.

The Irish Party Agree to Forego their Obstruction Tactics in Order to Reach the Second Reading of their Leader's Measure—The Gladstonian Prospects.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—The Parnellite members of Parliament at an informal meeting to-day agreed to abate their obstructive tactics after a full debate on the vote for the Irish police, and permit the Government to conclude the consideration of the estimates. The object of this decision is to enable Mr. Parnell's Land Bill to reach a second reading on Monday. The plan of the Government is to pass the Appropriation Bill also before allowing a division to be taken on the Parnell bill. The Government whips will endeavor to have as many members as possible, and it is thought the attendances of Conservatives will be larger than at any time since the opening of the session. No special call has been issued for the Gladstonian members, eighty of whom have paired. Mr. Gladstone will speak Tuesday.
At the opening of the next session the Government intends to introduce new rules of procedure to prevent the obstruction of business.
It was stated in the lobby of the House of Commons this evening that Mr. Gladstone would return Saturday, and that he approves the principle of Mr. Parnell's Land Bill and will speak in its favor and vote for its second reading, but that he objects to several minor details which will be rectified in committee.

A CYCLONE IN INDIANA.

Many Buildings Destroyed and Farming Property Wasted.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 16.—A despatch from Terre Haute says, at 11:30 to-day a cyclone struck the city coming from the south-west. The storm was confined to the central portion of the city. Numerous large buildings were unroofed, and the rain which followed, did great damage. The canvas of King, Burke & Co's circus was blown down and the large audience left in the storm. Many of the actors were in the dressing-room half nude, and they made a brisk movement up the street for the nearest hotel. Several thousand people were at the fair grounds. An eating house was blown down and the wreck caught fire, severely burning a woman and a boy. No fatalities occurred. A special from Newport, Vermillion County, reports six or eight buildings destroyed but no lives lost. The damage reported along the Wabash valley is great. The storm struck Montezuma, Stark County, unroofing a number of houses and uprooting trees.
MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Sept. 16.—A rain and wind storm of unequalled severity swept over the lake and city this morning. Large trees, sheds, outhouses, lumber piles, etc., were levelled. The wind capsized a small fishing smack which was a few miles out on the lake. The occupants were rescued. The telegraph and telephone lines are down. The damage to the surrounding country is very great.

AGAINST LANDLORDISM.

United Ireland Suggests that Dismantled Tenants Should go to the Workhouse.

DUBLIN, Sept. 16.—United Ireland suggests that in view of the probable rejection of Mr. Parnell's Land Bill all distressed tenants in Ireland should resort to the workhouse. "While it is disgraceful," says United Ireland, to enter the workhouse as a loafer it would be in the highest degree honorable to occupy the workhouse as an encampment against landlordism."

A COPYRIGHT CONVENTION.

An International Agreement Arrived at by Representative Authors at Berne.

BERNE, Sept. 16.—The copyright convention just signed here secures to authors of literary products and works of art in all countries attending the convention the same protection and rights which each one enjoys in his own country. The rights of translation are secured to the author and his heirs for ten years from the day of original publication.

BOYCOTT ENGLISH GOODS.

The Canadian Traitor at the Recent Irish Convention.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—In reply to an inquiry to-day, the official stenographer of the recent convention of the Irish National League said that Mr. Foran of Quebec was the Canadian delegate who made an eloquent speech advocating the adoption of the clause in the league constitution placing a boycott on goods of English manufacture until the objects of the league are attained. The speaker was pointed out in the convention at the moment as "Lynch of Quebec," and Mr. Lynch was erroneously reported in the despatches being sent from the platform as having made the speech in question.

THE GREAT FASTER

Proposes to Patent His Secret for the Benefit of the Poor.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Succi, the Italian faster at Milan, will not divulge the secret of his African herb liquor, as he intends to take out a patent for it. He claims that the liquor will become a staple drink among the poor. He says it will be sold cheap, so that a large family may subsist for a week, on a franc's worth of the liquor. Succi is visited daily by dukes, princes, senators, deputies and hosts of foreign doctors. His strength is unimpaired.

Gen. Booth's Son's Marriage.

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Miss Charlesworth, whose enlistment in the Salvation Army against the wishes of her parents, and detention in the ranks despite the protests of her father, led to such an outcry against Gen. Booth sometime ago, was married to-day at Clapton to Gen. Booth's son. The marriage ceremony was witnessed by thousands of persons. Miss Charlesworth's sisters were present but her father was not. The Salvation army had a great torchlight demonstration in London to-night in honor of Gen. Booth, who departs to-morrow for the United States.

Austria's New Rifle.

VIENNA, Sept. 19.—Specialists declare that the Newmann Licher repeating rifle, now being manufactured for the Austrian army, is the most perfect rifle ever invented. It fires forty rounds a minute. Yesterday's edition of the Extrablatt was seized for publishing a description of the mechanism of the breech of the new rifle.

Cholera in Japan.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—The Japan Gazette says that the total number of cholera cases throughout the country since its first appearance this year is 59,000, of which 37,000 ended fatally. The indications are that the epidemic is now abating. Intelligence from Seoul, Corea, says the cholera is still raging in that city. According to the official returns the fatal returns for July was 26,000, out of a population of 250,000. Outside of the capital the epidemic is equally fatal. At Seipahu, in the Province of Keishodo, 5000, or Total 6000 deaths in one month are reported.

CAMP LIFE AT NIAGARA.

General Middleton Complimentes the D. A. G.—A Fine Review.

NIAGARA, Sept. 16.—"The most orderly and best conducted camp we have ever had here" is the unanimous verdict of the good people of Niagara, and as far as your correspondent's experience goes he agrees with them most emphatically. Although some of the old officers complained bitterly at first of the "red tapeism" of the staff they cannot but feel satisfied now that it is a decided improvement on past years. Too much credit cannot be given to the D. A. G. and his efficient staff for the manner in which the camp has been conducted both in drill and discipline.
The Commandant and the Brigade-Major have been untiring in their efforts from reveille to "lights-out" and earnest but feel satisfied at their result.
Yesterday the Major-General inspected the brigade. At 2:15 sharp the brigade markers were covered by Major Smith and by 2:30 the different corps were on the ground. The brigade was formed up in line of quarter of column with the artillery on the right. In a few minutes Col. Otter with Major MacLaren and Lieut. Sears as staff galloped on to the ground. The bands were brigaded under the charge of Mr. Henderson, Bandmaster of the 36th Battalion, and played well, although in marching past in quarter column the time was a trifle too quick. On the arrival of the Major-General he was received with a general salute, the officers and colors taking post in review order. The Major-General, whose staff consisted of Capt. Wise, A.D.C., and Capt. Mutton, Q. O. R., then rode down the ranks and inspected the different corps, after which the "march past" commenced. The marching drew forth from the general the remark to Capt. Wise "that these fellows had evidently been drilling." The Hamilton Field Battery went past almost perfectly and the "trot past" was extremely good.
After the brigade had "advanced in review order" the presentation of the Northwest medals to the 35th Battalion was made by Mrs. Col. O'Brien and Mrs. McCarthy. General Middleton addressed the regiment and stated the pleasure it afforded him to be present and that if he had had his way they would have joined his column, although the duty they had been on was just as important though less glorious than that of some of their comrades. The General then informed Colonel Otter of the pleasure it gave him to find his brigade so well up in their drill considering the difficulties they had had to contend with and the short time they had to become anything like efficient in their drill. Of the artillery he made special mention, saying that although by far the hardest worked branch of the service, as a rule they come in for the least praise.
The camp will break up on Saturday.

A DISHONEST SOLICITOR.

W. W. Moore of Wellington Charged With Deliberate Swindling.

HAMILTON, Sept. 16.—W. W. Moore, of the County of Wellington, a solicitor and writer of poetry, was one of the prisoners at the Police Court to-day. He was arrested yesterday for false pretences, the complainant being Horace Shaver, of Ancaster. About two weeks ago Moore, with whom Shaver had been acquainted for some time, represented to the latter that he owned property in Mooretown valued at $600. Shaver, without making a search in the registry office, took Moore's word and advanced him $300. Recently he has made discoveries which led him (Shaver) to believe that Moore didn't own anything and that he had no means of collecting the $300 he had lent. The case was adjourned.

Charged With Manslaughter.

MONTREAL, Sept. 16.—Alphonse Forgais, who was brutally assaulted on Tuesday night by two men on St. Paul-street, died to-night at Notre Dame Hospital from the effects of the injuries then received. The two men, Belleville and Cothier, will now be charged with manslaughter.

A Grist Mill Destroyed.

LONDON, Ont. Sept. 16.—Last night about 12 o'clock a fire broke out in a large grist mill in London South, owned by Henry Payne. The City Fire Brigade was called out but could do nothing there being no water. The origin of the fire is a mystery as there were parties in the building as late as 11 last night. Loss $6000, insurance $2000.

Chief of Police McKane of Coney Island has notified all parties interested in the Sullivan-Kearney fight that he will not allow the fight to take place, and if it is attempted that he will have a sufficient force of police to stop it completely. Capt. Law Clark, manager of Queen's Park, summoned out six miles below the city of Pittsburg received a telegram from John L. Sullivan asking if he could arrange to have his 12-round contest with Kearney in Pittsburg on Friday. Capt. Clark wired back that the match could take place in Geneva Park either Friday, the 17th, or Monday, the 20th. It is probable the fight will take place on Friday.

ST. THOMAS TRIPPED UP.

On behalf of St. Thomas, of Haldimand, the Mail still persists in denying that at Cayuga, Hon. Thomas White, M. P. for Cardwell and Her Majesty's Minister of the Interior for the Dominion of Canada, exhibited a portrait of Riel with a rope around his neck, sneeringly describing it as the picture of a new saint of the Roman Catholic Church. It was a dastardly act, of which any man would naturally be ashamed, but it is one which cannot be lied out of by any crafty manipulation of the doctrine of "political exigencies." It is susceptible of the most indisputable proof. Rev. Father Bardou, of Cayuga, asserts that it Hon. Mr. White did not use the exact words attributed, there were only slight verbal differences, and what he did say had the same meaning. The reverend gentleman was present, and heard distinctly what Mr. White said; furthermore, if Mr. White persists in his denials, Rev. Father Bardou is willing to repeat over his own name the statements proving the falsity of the denial of Mr. White and his coadjutors. It is no wonder he is ashamed of what he has done. It was a most insulting, dastardly, and malicious act.

THE General Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada has extended the term of location of its ministers from three to four years.

RESPECTING the statement that Sir Charles Tupper came over to Canada to see about the establishment of the Colonial Exhibition on a permanent basis, the Toronto News remarks that it is more probable he came to assist in establishing the Dominion Government on a more permanent basis, as its present standing has very little of that character.

SIR JOHN, it is said, disappointed with the working of the Indian clauses of the Franchise Act, will next session, unless the elections are held in the meantime, put up some back bench supporter to move the repeal of that portion of the Franchise act; much as he moved the rejection of his own proposal to enfranchise women.

IN the coming general elections Sir John would have no difficulty in finding in the West Riding a candidate after his own heart. The man who can promise his influence in favour of one coterie of his party, and then secretly undermine them in favour of an opposing clique, would be just the double-facer Sir John would delight to have as a supporter.

THERE are probabilities of there being an organized resistance in Wales to the payment of church tithes. To pay one-tenth of one's substance to the church one believes in is a hard enough command for the ordinary mortal to obey, but to pay it to a church to whose doctrines he cannot subscribe, is asking a little too much. The tithing proctor will be the next to go.

THE Brantford Expositor points out a rather anomlous condition of things in connection with the Indian vote on the Haldimand reserve. The returning officer, Peter Jones, a strong Tory partizan, is an Indian. The law provides that a returning officer who is guilty of any official irregularity is liable to a fine of $200. The Expositor asks Sir John Macdonald, as the father of the Franchise Bill, how any liability under this clause of the election act could be recovered from Dr. Peter Jones. There is in reality no protection in the law against irregularities on the part of such returning officer, for if the attempt were made, he would at once set up his "infancy" under the Indian Act.

N. Washington, M. D. Throat and Lung Surgeon, Toronto and Medical.
DEAR SIR.—I am pleased to be able to express my extreme satisfaction at the result of your "Vapor Method" of inhalation which has cured me of catarrh of a very troublesome character. In fact all the usual remedies failed to give me any relief whatever, but your treatment from the first gave me great relief and in a short time entirely cured me of a most terrible disease which had for years threatened my life. I can honestly recommend anyone who may be so afflicted to your skillful consideration.
Yours truly, GEO. GOULDING.

FIVE MILLION POUNDS.

By T. WESTWOOD REID.

I felt the leathern hangings.

Instinctively I approached the bed, candle in hand, and examined the pillow where a deep impression marked the place where my head had been laid. I almost thought that I could see myself lying there, as I had done in my vision—unconscious, silent, helpless, beneath the knife of the villain. I shuddered at the thought; but even as I did so, I found something else to startle me. Lying on the bedclothes, as it seemed to me, at the very place where, if I had still been sleeping, they would have covered my heart, was a knife. It was not the long, keen, glittering, well-polished deadly blade of my vision. It was old-fashioned, rusted, of quaint shape, with a clumsy handle of bone, curiously carved and stained. I took it up in wonder. It seemed to me that the handle was still warm from the grasp which had held it a few moments before. What did it portend? How came this fearful confirmation of my dream into the room where it had certainly not been when I retired to rest? What meant all the mysteries that seemed to haunt this house, and to envelop all the dwellers in it?

I stood, candle in hand, by the side of the bed, asking myself these questions, and as I did so my eye suddenly lighted upon something which was lying, apparently where it had slipped from the sloping pillow, on the sheet below. It was a scrap of paper—a note. I opened it with nerveless hands, and in an instant the chaos of fears that had been trooping into my heart vanished. I forgot ghosts and nightmares, and even the hateful Hunter himself with his deadly knife, and with a low cry of joy I pressed the little note to my lips, for I saw that it bore my name in the hand-writing of my darling.

With a trembling hand I opened it and read the message which it conveyed to [illegible]

[illegible] You must leave this place to-morrow—for your own sake even more than for mine. But do not suppose I shall forget you. I shall be free some day, I hope. God grant it may come soon! Whenever it comes you may depend upon me. Do not go far away, dearest, if you still care for me. If you go to Scarborough I shall know where you are, and that at least will be some comfort. Good-by, darling, for I shall not be allowed to say it by word of mouth. But remember that I shall always be true to you. DAISY."

There was a postscript written in characters so straggling that it was clear that they had been penned under the influence of some intense agitation. "I have had a terrible scene with my uncle. He came to me when he left you. I could never have thought that he would have been so cruel."

How the long remainder of that night passed I cannot tell. I was almost stupefied by this crowning misfortune. The secrets of the haunted chamber no longer troubled me; nay, I cared nothing now for Flinter's hardly concealed animosity. The thought that overbore all others was that, as Daisy herself had put it, I had found her but to lose her. In comparison with this, all nightmare visions, secret visitations of my bedroom, and even portents like the rusty knife, which had so mysteriously been placed upon my bed, seemed of no consequence. I dressed and sat in dreary suffering, waiting for the coming of the morn.

Much sooner than might have been expected in the ordinary course of things I heard a servant moving in the outer room. I was aware that a fire was being lighted, and by and by the rattle of cups and saucers told me that a table was being laid in the room. I was somewhat surprised, as I had been given to understand on the previous night we would all breakfast together in the hall below. I waited impatiently to learn my fate.

I was not very long in suspense. Long before eight o'clock there was a tap at the door, and I opened it to admit the servant who came laden with hot water and the necessaries for my bath. He stared in amazement when he saw that I was up and dressed. It may have been that part of his astonishment was due to my appearance. I was conscious of the fact that the experiences of that terrible night had given me a face so haggard and worn that I might have been years older than I looked when I retired to rest.

He made a few inquiries as to the services I required, and then, in a somewhat hesitating manner, as though he were aware that he had unpleasant news to communicate, he said:

"Your breakfast, sir, will be served in your own sitting room in half an hour, or sooner, if you wish it; and my master has ordered me to tell you that you will find a letter from him on the breakfast table."

Then he retired respectfully.

Too well I knew what the letter would say. I was utterly jaded and dispirited by that night of agony. And yet, when I thought that I was about to be expelled from the house which sheltered the woman I loved, and that I should be compelled to leave her in the society of such a man as Flinter, I felt ready to do anything and dare everybody if I might but be with her.

I bathed and redressed wearily, and then in the sitting room I read the letter addressed to me from Mr. Mauleverer. It was very courteous, but very cold and emphatic. The writer said that he had learned with surprise and pain that I had been guilty of conduct which he could never have thought [illegible] between me and Miss Stancliffe—if I had acted openly, as he should certainly have expected me to do. But in seeking surreptitiously to win the affections of his niece I had adopted a course which he refrained from characterizing, because he had no wish to wound my feelings by the use of strong language, but which, he regretted to say, made it impossible that he should continue to receive me as his guest. Orders had been given for the brougham to be ready for me at nine o'clock precisely, and it would take me to Lorton station in time for the express train. He concluded by wishing me a polite but very formal farewell.

In my rage, humiliation and bitterness I sat down and dashed off one of those impetuous letters which are only penned by young men in love. In it I repudiated with scorn the notion that the wealth of which he was unhappily possessed—do I put it—had anything to do with my love for his niece, and while expressing my regret that I had not secured his approval of my suit before I spoke to Daisy, I declared emphatically that, loving her as I did with my whole heart, I should never willingly relinquish the hope of making her my wife.

Possibly there might be other phrases in this letter that were calculated to wound the natural pride of a man like Mauleverer. I hardly know whether this was so or not, for it was written while my mind was agitated by a whirlwind of passion and grief. Be this as it may, however, when by and by I was taking my seat in the brougham, prepared to leave Great Lorton Hall with crestfallen head and sullen heart, I received a letter from one of the servants, on opening which I found that my own letter had been returned to me without a word. In my rage and indignation at this insult I tore the unlucky epistle to pieces, and, as I stamped upon the fragments where they lay upon the terrace, I literally shook the dust of Great Lorton Hall from off my feet.

One long, lingering look back I gave when the brougham mounted the hill. I could not see the house, inclosed within its red brick walls. But there were the great elm trees, among which the rooks were circling in the clear morning air. I thought that Daisy perchance heard their hoarse cries. When should we be so near to each other again! My heart was filled with a deadly sense of pain, and I felt my eyes, too, filling with all hidden tears.

Two souvenirs I took with me from my visit to the hall. One was the rusty, old-fashioned knife I had found upon my bed; the other, the precious note in which Daisy confessed her love for me.

A meeting of the True Blues and Orangemen will be held in the Orange Hall, Peterborough, to-morrow evening at 7.30. All are invited to attend.

Mud and More Mud.

The principal streets of the town and particularly George street, are in a filthy state with mud. About a week ago several loads of gravel was spread over the street, but it has all been swallowed up in the deep, deep maw of the muddy sea.

Rifle Matches.

A well attended meeting of the Peterborough Rifle Association was held in the orderly room in the drill shed on Wednesday evening, to make arrangements with regard to the annual matches. It was decided to hold the regular monthly match on Thursday, Sept. 30th, and the annual fall matches on Monday and Tuesday, October 11th and 12th.

Oddfellows.

The great goat of Peterborough Lodge, I. O. O. F., must have been weary on Thursday evening at the conclusion of his duties. Several new members were initiated into the higher mysteries of Oddfellowship, and among those who rode the goat was a brother who stands high and heavy among men. It is said he tips the beam at 230 lbs., in the shade. It would be hard work for the goat to place him high in the order at one lift, and he had to be content to rise by degrees.

A Sumptuous Cow Pasture.

The wardens of St. John's church appear to have become exceedingly accommodating. Last night a horse and cow were to be seen serenely pasturing on the nice grass of the splendid and well kept lawns surrounding the church. The manner in which the cow by-law is enforced certainly gives little encouragement to keeping open lawns unconcealed by high and unsightly fences. It is shameful that nomadic cows and horses should be permitted to roam unrestrained, and select their pasturage from such places as St. John's church grounds, the Central Park, and the many beautiful open lawns that adorn the town.

Ashburnham to Have Electric Light.

At the last meeting of the Ashburnham Council it was decided to illuminate the village by electric light, four lamps to be placed on Elizabeth St. On Thursday Mr. John Burnham, Reeve of the village, signed a contract with the Electric Light Company to illuminate the village for five years, and to-day the work of putting in the poles was commenced. It is probable that next week the white light will shine forth over the river. The enterprise of the village fathers is to be commended, which places Ashburnham, with a population of about 2000, ahead of many towns of greater pretensions. It will be the smallest town in Canada using electric illuminators.

Y. M. C. A. Annual Meeting.

Reports for the First Year Submitted—The Association in Debt Over $600—The Association Work to be Continued—Canvassing Committee Appointed, to Solicit Subscriptions.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, was held in the Association rooms on Thursday evening, the principal objects being the hearing of the reports of the various committees for the year, and the considering of the advisability of continuing the work of the Association. Owing to the unfavorable weather and other causes, the attendance was not very large, there being about thirty present.

In the absence of the President, Dr. Fife, Vice-President of the association, occupied the chair.

The meeting opened by singing "Bringing in the Sheaves."

The Secretary after announcing the object of the meeting, read a LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT,

Mr. J. W. Flavelle, who was unavoidably called away from town on business. The letter expressed the writer's regret that he could not be present on so important an occasion. He assured the members of his sympathy in the work, and encouraged them into vigorous action. He felt confident the association could be maintained—if a few business men would lend their influence, and if the young men—the members of the association, would go hand in hand in assisting the secretary in the work, all of which he was confident would be done.

The chairman then called for the reports of committee.

DEVOTIONAL COMMITTEE REPORT.

Mr. J. Richardson, chairman of the devotional committee reported, that the Association had great cause to thank God for the many blessings bestowed upon them during the past year. The several meetings of the Association, and especially the gospel service on Sunday evening had been a source of great blessing to many.

The thanks of the Association were tendered Miss Stevenson, who acted in the capacity of organist at the song services, and also to Mr. Thomas Walton, who acted as organist at associations meetings. Rev. Mr. Wallace's Bible class was a source of great blessing to many as was also the training classes. The boys' meetings and the young men's Sunday afternoon meetings had been specially blessed. The Auburn Mission was still in charge of the Association and was doing a good work. The number of meetings held during the year was 273 with a total attendance of 9953.

It was the opinion of the committee that the Association had special facilities for reaching young men and it was hoped that through its instrumentality many would be saved.

On motion the report was adopted.

ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE.

Mr. Bannell Sawyer, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, reported that the work of the committee had been satisfactory, a number of choice entertainments having been given. The proceeds were almost sufficient to pay the expenses. The association lost $150, but the entertainments, it was hoped, had had a beneficial effect.

FINANCE REPORT.

Mr. D. B. Gardiner, chairman of the Finance Committee and treasurer of the association, submitted his report.

The receipts for the year, including $52.30 balance on hand, amounted to $1,364.11, while the expenditures were practically the same, a balance of 75c. only remaining. The liabilities of the Association amounted to $566.78, while the assets were $414, leaving a deficit of $152.78 for this year, which added to the debt of previous years, made a total debt of $462.72.

The committee had made numerous efforts to devise ways and means to carry on the work, and, thanks to numerous subscribers, had struggled along.

They had come to the conclusion that the only way out of the difficulty was to discontinue the work of the Association. It seemed impossible to struggle under the present debt and against the great difficulties they had to contend with. The subscribers did not always renew their subscriptions, and the members of the Finance Committee, who had not a great deal of time at their disposal, could not find time to canvas to such an extent as would be necessary.

Mr. Williams, general secretary, explained that the cause and secret of the whole difficulty was that the work had fallen on a few men only.

Rev. Mr. Torrance suggested that the Association make an effort to secure subscriptions to cancel the debt before deciding as to what should be done in the future.

The Secretary was confident there was money and sympathy enough to carry on the work, if the number of men necessary to carry on the work would only come out, as Mr. Flavelle said, by soliciting subscriptions and by taking an active part in the association work.

Mr. Bannell Sawyer spoke strongly in favour of continuing the Association, and in concluding his remarks, moved that the Association be continued, and that a committee composed of members of the several churches in town be appointed to solicit subscriptions in aid of the Association.

Mr. Fred. Wesley, in seconding the motion, offered $2 toward the present indebtedness and $5 a year toward carrying on the work.

The motion was carried almost unanimously.

THE SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Mr. Geo. E. Williams, General Secretary submitted his third annual report. The association he said had much to be thankful for during the past year. There had been a large increase in the membership, 84 new names being added. The Association during that time had lost thirty members, chiefly by removal, among whom were some of the best workers. The attendance at meetings was about 55 per cent better than last year. The intellectual work of the Association though undoubtedly beafical to the members was not a financial success. The series of interesting entertainments given last winter resulted in a loss of $150. Mr. B. Earle's literature class had been a source of profit to many, and he was pleased to be able to announce that Mr. Earle had promised to teach a similar class during the coming winter. In physical training the Association was behind. He thought they should have a gymnasium. The lady friends of the Association had given it a great deal of assistance on several occasions, especially on the new years reception. He was in favor of forming a womans auxiliary, which had been found to add greatly to the strength of the Association in other places. The Association Notes published by the Association was doing a good work. This year the advertising paid for the expenditure. The Association was represented at the Hamilton convention by four members, and also by two from the boys branch. In helping young men to secure employment the Association had been very successful.

The difficulty of securing financial support had cramped every department of the work. They had not trusted enough in God. Although there were many difficulties to contend with, he felt confident the work could and should be continued. In conclusion he thanked the officers and members for the support they had given in the work.

The report was adopted.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS DEFERRED.

After a lengthy discussion it was decided to defer the election of officers until after the convention to be held next week.

CANVASSING COMMITTEE.

The following committee was appointed to solicit subscriptions, which, it is to be hoped, will be of such a liberal nature that the Association will be warranted in continuing the work. The sum required, outside of membership fees, to carry on the work this year and to pay off the debt will be about $1,400.

CANVASSERS.

George Street Methodist Church.—Messrs. S. B. Griffin, W. Hilliard, Geo. Schofield, W. Yelland, and Fred. Wesley.

Charlotte Street Methodist Church.—Messrs. E. W. Cox and Felix Brownscombe.

The meeting adjourned sine die.

Personal.

Mr. Geo. Mearse left town to-day for Millwaukee, via C. P. R. and connections.

Mr. H. Sheehy, of Lindsay, has been appointed to the position of night operator in the Central Telephone Exchange, Peterborough. He has entered upon his duties, which his experience qualifies him to ably discharge.

The Man and the Hour.

It is to be remarked that in any great national, social or industrial crisis, the hour generally brings the man. The era of depression is upon us; times are hard; money is scarce, farmers' prices low, and the business problem is how to make one dollar do the work of five. The problem is solved, and Gough, the Wonderful Cheap Man, gives the solution. His cheap store, Arcade Buildings, town, contains cords upon cords of high piled, low priced, ready-made clothing—his new fall and winter stock—purchased at way down prices during Mr. Gough's trip last summer. This is the most extensive stock ever laid in in any provincial town. These goods have been sharply bought in the best wholesale markets and, while being of the very best quality, are of the lowest prices. His line of overcoats are equal to the best custom work, and at prices infinitely lower. Gough's immense stock of gents' furnishings are marvels of excellence and cheapness. The public must read and study Gough's half-page advertisement in this issue. In reading it remember that Gough has always kept his word and that what he has to say can be depended upon. "Read, mark, learn and inwardly" resolve to visit Gough's clothing store, Arcade Buildings, Peterborough.

What We Would Like to See.

One slight trace of the supplementary dose of mud placed on George street a few days ago.

A resurrection—the cow by-law raised from the dead.

The houses of Peterborough provided with numbers.

Ashburnham also provided with the electric light.

A day or two of dry weather.

The streets cleaned and a few thousand tons of mud removed.

Business brighten up.

The Oddfellows' lodge of instruction held here this fall, and a hundred or more delegates to assemble.

The man who can swear that the new buildings now under construction are for the post-office.

Lodge of Instruction.

The members of the local lodges of Oddfellows are making, with every prospect of success, an effort to have a lodge of instruction held in Peterborough in a month or so. A letter received from the Grand Master on the subject states that it is highly probable that Peterborough will be selected as the place to hold such a lodge. It is likely that a hundred or two hundred delegates from all over the province will assemble at this meeting for instruction in the mysteries of the order. The local brethren with their characteristic enterprise will, of course, give them a fitting reception. The lodge will be of double service, as in addition to increasing the knowledge and enthusiasm of the local Oddfellows, it will also greatly benefit the town bringing it prominently before residents of other parts of the country.

The Interpretation Thereof.

"Bun March"—"What a funny name for a store!" "What does it mean, and how do you pronounce it?" said a lady walking down George street to a companion. "It is pronounced bo' marshay, and it means immense bargains, such as will always be found at Mr. Carton's Bon Marche." "They do tell me—those who have tried it—that at this shop, everything required for household use can be got of first-class quality at delightfully low prices." "I'm going to try it, will you come with me?" "Yes." "When, to-morrow afternoon?" "Yes." They passed on, and the next moment a millinery store absorbed them.

Three Indian Chiefs Coming.

Rev. I. Tovell after an absence of several Sabbaths, will resume his pulpit labors next Sunday morning in the school room of the George Street Church. In the evening, the George street congregation will meet in Bradburn's Hall, when addresses will be delivered by three Indian chiefs of the North-west. Their addresses to be interpreted by Rev. J. MacDougall, who for many years has labored as a missionary in the vicinity of the Rocky Mountains.

Died From a Paralytic Stroke.

On Thursday evening shortly after six o'clock, Mrs. Catharine Shearer, who was sitting taking tea in her house, George street north, was stricken with paralysis. She was removed to her bed and medical aid was summoned, but she never recovered and expired about nine o'clock. Her funeral will take place on Sunday at two o'clock, to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

Submarine Earthquakes.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Lloyds' agent at Sante, writing in regard to the earthquake along the coast of Morea, says: From what we have been able to ascertain from captains of steamers and other craft in their waters at the time of the shock, it appeared to originate from the sea. This is not unlikely, as a steamer belonging to the Eastern Telegraph Company, which proceeded some months ago to repair the cable below the coast of Navarino, found on sounding a subsidence of soil of—if we are not mistaken—a thousand fathoms. We are further indirectly informed that the soundings on many parts of the coast differ materially from the charts of 1864-65, and suggest that an early survey will be made of all waters in the vicinity of and some distance from the coast.

German Parliamentary Obstructionists.

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—A feature of the proceedings in the Reichstag yesterday was the obstructive tactics of the Socialists similar to those adopted by the Parnell party in the English Parliament. Herr Hasenclever opposed the re-election of first president Von Wedell because the latter had expelled a Socialist workman from Magdeburg under an antiquated police regulation. Two hours were wasted in the division. Finally last year's president, vice-president and secretaries were elected. The other parties unite in condemning the tactics of the Socialists.

Imperial Parliament.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The House of Commons was in session until four o'clock this morning, considering the Supply bills. The chairman frequently called upon the Parnellite members to observe the amenities of debate. Mr. Gladstone has notified his friends that he will arrive in London at six o'clock on Sunday morning, and that he will be present in the House of Commons on Monday.

The Bulgarian Crisis.

SOFIA, Sept. 17.—The Sobranje has resolved to prolong the state of siege in Bulgaria; also to court-martial eighteen officers connected in the kidnapping of Prince Alexander, in order to restore the discipline and morale of the army. A Compliment to the Army.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—At the French army manœuvres a Russian general congratulated the commander of the 12th Army Corps upon the splendid appearance of his men, saying: "With such troops you have nothing to fear from any one."

"Imitation is the Sincerest Flattery."

If the above quotation is true, then Dr. R. V. Pierce ought to feel highly flattered, on account of the many imitators of his popular remedy, the "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," for they have scores of imitators, but never an equal, for the cure of sick and bilious headache, constipation, impure blood, kidney pains, internal fever and all bowel complaints. With a bottle of the augreat granules in the house, you can dispense with the family doctor and his often nauseous medicines. 6d61w37

A Genuine Love Story.

This story, told originally by Spurgeon, we believe, will, we are confident, strike a chord in many loving hearts:

A young clergyman and his bride were invited guests at a large party given by a wealthy parishioner. In all the freshness and elegance of her bridal wardrobe the young wife shone among the throng, distinguished by her comeliness and vivacity and rich attire; and when, during the evening, her young husband drew her aside and whispered to her that she was the most beautiful woman in all the company, and that his heart was bursting with pride and love for her, she thought herself the happiest wife in the world. Ten years later the same husband and wife were the guests at the same house, where was gathered a similar gay company. The wife of ten years ago wore the same dress she had worn on the previous occasion; and, of course, it had been altered and remade, and was old-fashioned and almost shabby. Toil and care and motherhood and pinched circumstances had taken the roses out of her cheeks and the lithe spring out of her form. She sat apart from the crowd, care-worn and preoccupied. Her small hands, roughened with coarse toil, were ungloved, for the minister's salary was painfully small. And a little apart, the ten-year husband stood and looked at his wife, and as he observed her faded dress and weary attitude a great sense of all her patient, loving faithfulness came over his heart. Looking up, she caught his earnest gaze, and noticed that his eyes were filled with tears. She rose and went to him, her questioning eyes mutely asking for an explanation of his emotion; and when he tenderly took her hand, and, placing it on his arm, led her away from the crowd, and told her how he had been thinking of her as she looked, ten years before, when she was a bride, and how much more precious she was to him now, and how much more beautiful, for all her shabby dress and roughened hands, and how he appreciated all her sacrifice and patient toil for him and their children, a great wave of happiness filled her heart, a light shone in her face that gave it more than its youthful beauty, and in all the company there was not so happy a couple as this husband and wife, their hearts and faces aglow from the flaming up of pure sentiment that transfigured and ennobled and glorified all the toils and privations they had endured.—Christian Advocate.

Life in Liberia.

A correspondent at Brewersville, Liberia, writing to the Gate City (Mo.) Press, says: This place, Brewersville, is fifteen miles from Monrovia. It is fifteen years old. It is the largest settlement in Liberia outside of Monrovia. All the people who have emigrated out here in the last ten or fifteen years have settled in this place. The people in the settlement are poor, and one isn't able to help the other in a business sense of view. There are no horses, no mules, and no oxen in the whole settlement. They have to do all the farm work with a hoe, the rake, and the ax. I have been out here now six months. People are in a suffering condition for something to eat and for clothes to wear. There isn't any doctor in this settlement; the settlement is too poor to support one. The inhabitants number 556. Calico is 25 cents a yard. A common laborer, when he can get work to do, receives 25 cents per day. Pickled pork is 25 cents per pound, shoulder meat 25 cents per pound. All the flour and meat used here is imported from England and America. Corn meal is 10 cents per quart. Common flour is $15 per barrel. This is the greatest place for sores I ever saw. There is here an insect; its name is jiger; it is very dangerous. I have seen grown people, and children, too, with their toes eaten off. Shoes are more needed here than in America. It is necessary to wear shoes all the time so as to protect your feet from these insects. The people are unable to keep shoes on their children all the time, and a good many of them have to wear sore feet all the year round. My boy's feet have been so sore he could hardly walk.

The only way the settlers have to make any money here is by raising and selling coffee. It will take a new-comer like myself from five to six years to get a coffee farm in trim for selling coffee. The public schools are in a poor condition. There is a class of people here who do not want the true condition of things written back home. They say if the people want to know how times are over here, let them come and see for themselves.

Sheriffs' and Judges' Robes.

I recently referred to the fact that an English country gentleman complained that as he looks like an ass as a sheriff he wished to be spared that indignity. I very much wish that one of our judges would show a like frankness, and boldly admit that he, owing to custom, looked like an ass robed as a judge. Between the sheriff's and the judge's costume there is not much to choose, so far as grotesqueness goes. If anything, the judge's is rather the more absurd. But then his lordship carries it off better, partly, no doubt, because he is more accustomed to it, and partly because he is paid for wearing it. I know, of course, the stock argument in favor of these disguises—the majesty of the law must be maintained. But why, I wonder, does the law (like the African chieftain in the red waistcoat) only care to be majestic by his clothing? A plainly-dressed policeman captures the criminal, a plainly dressed magistrate sends him for trial, and a plainly-dressed hangman finishes him. But at his trial he must have a sheriff with sword and ruffles, and a judge in red cloth, rabbit skin, horsehair, and black cap. Surely, it would be better to divide these "properties" among the various officers of the law employed in the transaction. Let the policeman (so much exposed to the weather) have the rabbit skin and the magistrate the red cloth. The wig alone would be sufficient to maintain the dignity of the judge, and the black cap obviously belongs to the hangman. —London Truth.

Stimulants.

The following beautiful lines were written by George D. Prentice. They first appeared in the Louisville Journal thirty years ago:

"There is a time when the pulse lies low in the bosom, and beats low in the veins; when the spirit sleeps the sleep which apparently knows no waking; sleeps in its home of clay, and the windows are shut: the doors hung with the invisible crape of Melancholy; when we wish the golden sunshine pitchy darkness and wish to fancy clouds where no clouds be. This is a state of sickness when physic may be thrown to the dogs, for we want none of it. What shall raise the spirit? What shall make the heart beat music again and the pulses throb through all the myriad thronged halls in the house of life? What shall make the sun kiss the eastern hills again for us with all his old awakening glances, and the night overflow with moonlight, love and flowers? Love itself is the greatest stimulant, the most intoxicating of all, and performs all these and, is a miracle still, and it is not at the drug store, whatever they say. The counterfeit is in the market, but the winged god is not a money-changer, we assure you.

"Men have had many things, but still they ask stimulant.

"Men try to bury the floating dead of their own souls in the wine cup, but the corpse rises. We see their faces in the bubbles. The intoxication of drink sets the world whirling again and the pulses to playing music, and the thoughts galloping, but the clock runs down sooner, and an unnatural stimulant only leaves the house it filled with the wildest revelry, more silent, more sad, more deserted.

There is only one stimulant that never intoxicates, duty. Duty puts a clear sky over every man into which the sky-lark happiness always goes singing."

The Indestructibility of Gold.

Gold may be said to be everlasting, indestructible. The pure acids have no effect upon it. Air and water are alike prohibited from working its destruction; while to baser metals they bring decay, to gold they are inocuous. Bury it through long ages, and when the rude tool of the excavator again brings it to light, while everything around it has returned to dust from which it sprang; while the delicate form it adorned has become a powder so impalpable as to be inappreciable; while the strong bone of the mighty warrior crumbles as you gaze upon it; while the trusty sword lies a mass of shale rust, the delicate tracery in gold which adorned it, or the finely-wrought tiara which encircled the lofty brow of the fair damsel, is there in its pristine beauty, perfect as when it left the workman's hands and became the joy of her fleeting moments. Yes, days, years, centuries have rolled by; mighty empires have risen and fallen; dynasties that dreamed their power to be everlasting have passed away; armies have marched, conquered and become nerveless with decrepid old age; cities teeming with population and commerce have become the dwelling-place of the owl and the bat; the very pyramids themselves, raised in the pride of power and destined to be forever, have crumbled and are crumbling, and yet the thin filament of gold has stood unchanged. —Sir Henry Vivian.

A short time ago was printed an account of the heroism shown by Maude Long of Independence, Mo., who walked three miles after midnight, on a bitter cold night, to rescue two children who had been left by a madman to die in the snow. It is pleasant to tell that the citizens of Kansas City, appreciating her pluck, have given Miss Maude a handsome watch, suitably inscribed, a diamond ring of considerable value, and over $300 in money. As for the man, S. S. Baker, whose crazy freak gave occasion for Miss Long's heroism, he is in a private asylum in Philadelphia, and the doctors say that there is very little hope of his recovery.

The Preacher and the Landlord.

When Rev. Dr. Tappen was the agent of the American Home Mission society he once made a trip through the northeastern part of Maine on horseback. It was before the days of railroads. On arriving at Mattawamkeag, where he was pleasantly entertained, he was told he had better remain over night there, as the place which he intended to make his next station was rather rough and uncomfortable, and the landlord was a rude, blasphemous man, who might not use him well. But Dr. Tappan was anxious to carry out his itinerary as he had planned it, and journeyed on. He arrived at his destination at dusk. The landlord came out, greeted him cordially, took his horse and put him up, hastened in to help entertain his reverend guest, prepared a nice warm supper for him, and was as polite as a lightning-rod agent.

Just before Dr. Tappan retired the landlord and all his family, arranged in procession according to their ages, filed into the room with much decorum, and the doctor was asked to lead them in family worship, which he cheerfully did.

The next morning after the doctor had dressed, the host, his wife, his boys, and his girls, all neatly attired, came in again, and the same request was made and granted.

After a good breakfast the doctor's nag was brought to the door, saddled and bridled, and the good man prepared to go on his way. He asked for his bill.

"Not a cent," said the landlord, cheerily.

The doctor thought this reply was strange from a landlord preceded by such an ill reputation, and said: "Why! I must pay you for my entertainment."

"You don't owe me a cent," said the innkeeper. "The fact is that the peddlers, butchers, drovers, fishmen, and all classes of people come here to stop with me, and I make it a point to take my pay in their own line whenever I can. I've done the same by you. You've paid. Good morning, sir!"

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1886.

HON. THOMAS WHITE evidently threw his whole sole into the work in Haldimand; he certainly put both feet into it when he exhibited a portrait of Riel with a rope round his neck, and sneeringly described it as the "new saint of the Roman Catholic church."

THE Conservative papers have bet blue hopes of the permaueecy of Sir John's rule. They even go so far as to discuss the probable composition of Hon. Mr. Blake's cabinet, when the general elections shall have resulted in the transference of the reins of power to his hands.

SIR JOHN in his London speech paid Hon. Alex. Mackenzie a deserved tribute. He said he "believed Mr. Mackenzie to be an honest man." With the premier's certificate of honesty in his pocket, Mr. Mackenzie is, unfortunately, unable to return the compliment, without forfeiting his credentials.

HON. MR. CHAPLEAU, in his speech at London on Thursday, asserted, in reference to the charge that the Conservatives had misgoverned the North-West, that "the North-West had been treated with great solicitude." Mr. Chapleau is perfectly correct. But, unfortunately, the "solicitude" was on behalf of Government favorites and land leeches and not on behalf of the half-breeds and settlers and the permanent benefit of the country—a "solicitude" so strong that it brought on a rebellion, sacrificed 200 lives, and gave the country a set back of a quarter of a century.

A DECISION has recently been made in England that may be of interest in Canada. The Court of Appeal has decided that post-office orders are not negotiable. The plaintiffs in a case used a bank for conversion of post-office orders that had been cashed. The Court of Appeal held that as long as receipts were admitted necessary to obtain payment upon post-office orders they could not become negotiable instruments, and that the arrangement under which the post-office waived the receipts of individual payees, and the production of advice notes in the case of orders cashed by and through bankers, and was not enough to establish a universal legal custom so as to make them negotiable.

WHILE Sir John is in London he is the guest of Hon. Mr. Carling. When the "Chieftain" is content with the hospitality of a temperance household like Mr. Carling's, it either indicates a warmth of personal regard, sufficient to overcome personal inconvenience in the way of abstinence, or a possible desire to tread in the footsteps of the reformed brewer. After all Sir John, posing as a temperance man, would not be any more ridiculous than some of the phenomenal posturing he has recently indulged in. Equally at home in an Orange lodge, at a Roman Catholic picnic, or at a Methodist conference, the premier might yet shine, if only as a "terrible example," at a temperance meeting.

SUDDEN DEATH.

On Saturday night, shortly after Joseph Lowes, jr., of the township of Emily, returned home from a visit to the township of Brock, his wife was taken suddenly ill. He immediately went for his father, the houses not being 150 feet apart. When they returned she was breathing her last. Heart disease is assigned as the cause of death. On Monday her remains were conveyed on the Midland railway to the township of Brock, her native home.

The Race for the Leger.

LONDON, Sept. 15.—The race for the St. Leger stakes to-day was won by the Duke of Westminster's Ormonde, Mr. Manton's St. Mirin being second, and Mr. Jenning's Exmoor third. There were seven starters. Archer rode the winner, which started at 7 to 1 on, 20 to 1 was laid against St. Mirin, 25 to 1 against Exmoor. St. Mirin took the lead, followed by Cercale, Exmoor, Ormonde and the others. The positions of the four leaders were continually changing until the end of the half mile was reached, when Cercale retired. Ormonde then drew to the front, followed by Exmoor and St. Mirin, and coming on won in a canter by four lengths. Exmoor was a bad third. Time 2.51 2-5. The weather was splendid, and the attendance unusually large.

An Odd but Good Story.

From the N. Y. Evening Post.

The story is "old" about Gilbert, the dramatic author, after dining as a guest, mistaking a gentleman—it is an regle for every one to be in dress suit after six o'clock over there—in a London club, for a waiter and bruquenting him to "Call me a four-wheeler," wanting a cab, not a "two-wheeler," to get home in. The other appreciating the joke, grimly replied: "All right, I'll call you anything but human!" All right, how are you four-wheeler?" It is needless to add that Gilbert, at first shocked by what he considered the man's gross impertinence, the impertinence of classifying imbibing of hoof-hays, soon discovered his mistake and apologized, making matters worse by adding that "in these times he almost hasn't the heart to dismiss such a master man." There is much truth in Gilbert's sarcasm, but as often as vice-versa the table attendants in dress suits are mistaken for guests, especially late in the evening when the formality of the opening wears away with the candles.

A Rather Neat Obituary.

(Henri Labouchere in London Truth.)

Lord Henry Lennox, who has just died, was a singular instance of a person having been by accident born a man, when nature intended him for a woman. He was by no means wanting in cleverness, he was amusing and he was a decidedly good debater, but these advantages were marred by a womanish pettiness which ruined his political career. In comparatively early life he broke the medium of communication between Mr. Disraeli and the Conservatives. But he came to the conclusion that Lord Beaconsfield had not done enough for him, and later he endeavored to resign, on the ground that he had been qualified as a director to boards of companies on which he sat, to never took an active part in politics. In this matter he was, I think, hardly used, considering the manner of M.P.'s who had done precisely the same thing. I rather liked him, and I am sorry that he has left this planet.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1886.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two spurious trusses made in York State, costing me $40. CHAPTER VIII.

MR. FLINTER AGAIN.

The season was beginning to wane at Scarborough. Harding had left the Grand hotel some time before I paid my strange visit to Great Lorton, and I knew none of the persons who were staying there. My position was not an enviable one, now that I was back again in the big house. It was bad enough to be oppressed by that sense of mystery which enveloped everything connected with the hall and with Mauleverer. It was still worse to be reminded by everything around me of those happy days when Daisy and I had been together, and when she had first learned to love me. There was the very spot in the hall of the hotel where I used to take my stand each morning, awaiting the appearance of her and her uncle on their way to the saloon. There were the seats, occupied by strangers now, where we had spent so many never-to-be-forgotten hours together; and there, quietly riding at anchor in the bay, was the beautiful yacht which I had learned to hate as one of the tangible proofs of that wealth which divided me from the niece of the millionaire. I waited with an impatience that I could hardly control for news of my darling.

It came sooner than I expected, in the shape of a letter from Dr. Branksome, enclosing one for me from Daisy herself. Need I say that I read the latter first?

"My dearest friend," she wrote, "I must send you a few words, if it were only to tell you that I am well. I must not say much, for I feel that I am doing wrong even in sending you this short message. But Dr. Brank ome has told me that he thinks I may do so, and much as I have loved my uncle I cannot yield myself completely to his will in this. Ah, you cannot tell what a change there is in him since this has happened. I cannot account for it. He is so different from what he has ever been before—so utterly unlike his own self—that it almost seems to me that something has happened to transform his whole character and to change the love he once professed for me into hate. I am trying to bear it patiently, for I owe so much to him. But sometimes it is very hard. Dr. Branksome has been my friend through it all, though even he is compelled, when my uncle is present, to hide his sympathy with us both. I don't know how it will all end, but I do want you to feel that you can trust me. I shall be true to you through everything. Please, therefore, do not believe any evil you may hear of me. I know I have my enemies, and I can't help thinking that they are your enemies also. If you hear tales about me, rest assured that if I have erred at all, it is from my love for you, and that nothing, neither life nor death, shall ever make me false to you. I cannot write more; I am ashamed to send you this; but I think I know you well enough to be sure that you will understand all that I want to say to you, even though I have not the power of saying it aright, and that you will believe in your heart of hearts that I love you above anything and everything else in this world."

I was touched and consoled by the frank and out-spoken language of my darling. It was what I should have expected from one so full of noble impulses, so little given to consider the mere conventionalities of everyday life. I felt that she must indeed love me with all her soul, or she could not have addressed me in such a strain as this.

Branksome's letter, too, brought me some consolation, though it also caused me uneasiness regarding Daisy. It was as follows:

"DEAR MR. FENTON: You will forgive me for writing to you on a subject which I have no doubt you regard as too sacred to permit of any intrusion by a stranger. But I have my self loved—once; and I trust that it is not as a stranger that you look upon one who so long stood in the place of a father to Daisy. I was grieved beyond measure, my dear friend, by the manner in which your visit to this place terminated. It was, indeed, an unexpected blow. As an older man than yourself, you will, I know, forgive me if I say that I cannot but feel that it would have been better if, before speaking to Daisy, you had taken me—or, still better, Mr. Mauleverer—into your confidence. But I acquit you entirely of any worse fault than that of having acted, as young lovers are so apt to do, upon impulse. I fear, however, that our good host takes a much darker view of your conduct. I have reasoned with him and expostulated with him warmly on the subject; but so far without effect. I tried to speak a word to you on the morning when you left us, but I had been forestalled by the steps taken to hasten your departure. I can only say that you may count on me as a friend, and that I shall try, for Daisy's sake as well as for your own, to put an end to the present distressing state of affairs. She is a bright girl, but she is a very proud and a very passionate one also; and I sometimes tremble when I think what may be the consequences of the cruel and incessant persecution to which she is just now being subjected by a man who seems to have forgotten that she is the only creature left in this world who is bound to him by the ties of consanguinity.

"I shall hope to see you before many days have passed, and then I can tell you more. You, will, I suppose, be staying at the Grand hotel. I shall find you out there before long. In the mean time, believe me, yours most sincerely, FRANCIS BRANKSOME."

Another week passed without my hearing anything directly or indirectly of the occupants of Great Lorton Hall. My mind, which had been soothed by the contents of Daisy's letter, was again becoming agitated by the fever of impatience and uncertainty. I had sent a letter—a long letter, in which my whole heart was poured out—to Daisy, addressed under cover to Dr. Branksome; but no reply had come, and I was meditating some further steps for the purpose of gaining tidings of her.

One morning, however, a servant brought me word that a person had called to see me on particular business and was waiting in the hall of the hotel. I went down and found one of the crew of the Golden Hawk awaiting my appearance. He saluted me respectfully, and placed in my hand a note. It was unsigned, and I did not know the handwriting, but it was written on a sheet of notepaper stamped with the name of the yacht. It contained only a simple message: "If you wish to see Dr. B., come on board the yacht at once."

The man waited a moment after I read the note, and then said:

"The captain's gig is on the beach, sir, if you mean to go on board."

"Who gave you this note?" I asked.

"The captain himself, sir," was the immediate reply. "And I was told that you would return with me."

"When did Dr. Branksome arrive?"

"I don't know, sir. I have not seen him. He must have come on board when I was below."

Of course I did not hesitate a moment. I hardly stopped to light a cigar before I started for the beach, walking with a brisker step and a gayer heart than I had known since I left Great Lorton—for was I not about to get news of Daisy?

It was a somewhat boisterous October day; but the wind was from the northwest, and the sea in the bay was therefore almost calm. In the offing I saw that the passing steamers were making heavy weather of it; but on shore there was nothing threatening in the appearance of the skies. Two men were waiting in the gig, and with the help of one of the local boatmen we had soon pushed off and were making our way to the yacht.

How well I remembered my former visit to her when I was in the company of Daisy! I looked eagerly as we neared the stately vessel for the friendly face of Branksome; but I looked in vain. He was evidently below, probably sheltering himself from the keen autumn air.

As I stepped on board one of the stewards came up to me and, touching his hat, said, "This way, sir, if you please."

I followed him down the gangway and passing through the dining saloon I found myself in a passage leading, as I remembered, to the chief saloon and to the lovely little boudoir which had been prepared for Daisy's special use. To my surprise it was to the latter apartment that I was conducted. It was rather dark within, but some one was awaiting me and I entered with outstretched hand.

"How kind of you—" I began, and stopped suddenly. It was not Branksome's commanding figure that I saw before me. It was the short, powerful form of Flinter.

I was more startled than I should have liked to admit; but I recovered myself as well as I could.

"I beg your pardon," I said, "I came on board to see Dr. Branksome, who has sent for me."

"Just so!" replied Flinter in a dry tone, beneath which I fancied that I detected a touch of irony.

"Will you be kind enough to tell me where I shall find him?"

He looked at me for a moment, and in the semi-gloom of the cabin, the windows of which were curtained, I detected a smile upon his hard, bad face. There was something that irritated me in his manner. I had seen that, despite the evident confidence which Mauleverer evidently reposed in him, he was not treated either by the millionaire or by Branksome himself on a footing of social equality, and I knew enough of him to be aware that he had none of the conventional claims to be regarded as a gentleman. Annoyed at his silence and his insolent bearing, I addressed him in a different tone from that which I had used at first.

ENCOURAGED by the warm approval hitherto attending our efforts to make our one of the most prominent features of our business—we again venture to present our Lady friends with our views for the ensuing Fall and Winter.

DRESS GOODS being perhaps the most serious item in the economy of every properly constituted Dry Goods establishment, we have this season devoted more than ordinary attention to that Department. During the season, the demand for self colored goods will be very great; among the most popular will be

SERGE CLOTHS, HAIR CLOTHS,
OTTOMAN CLOTHS, NIGGER HEAD Do.,
TWEED EFFECTS,
PLAIDS and COMBINATIONS, in Checks and Stripes.

An excellent variety of TRIMMINGS AND BUTTONS TO MATCH.

MISS WINTER, our Milliner, has just returned from Toronto with the newest goods in Millinery, and will be glad to see all her old friends and as many new ones as possible.

LOCAL NEWS.

Oysters! Oysters!

Choice Baltimore Oysters received daily at OSTROM'S.

A Meeting Called.

A meeting of the True Blues and Orangemen will be held in the Orange Hall, Peterborough, this evening, at 7.30. All are invited to attend.

Strange But True.

A local dentist was called on yesterday to pierce the ears of a young man and to place the rings in position. What next? If he had pulled his ears or filled them it would be more like business.

Triple A Topics.

Red and blue are the association colors. The majority of footballers wear "black and blue."

The fall sports of the association will be held on the grounds a week from Monday.

The dramatic committee have not made a selection yet. "Rough Rugby," or "Who kicked the ball" bids fair to lead in popular favor.

College Removal.

The Cobourg Sentinel Star is buoyed up with the idea that there is no immediate prospect of the removal of Victoria College to Toronto. It bases it hopes on the possibility of "delicate negotiations" as to details bringing about the miscarriage of the scheme. The Sentinel-Star argues from the standpoint of local interest; the General Conference was influenced in its decision by a regard for the interests of education and of the church.

Go to Ostrom's for your Oysters and Fish.

Grain Warehouses for Lindsay.

Mr. J. G. Macklin, engineer of the Midland division of the Grand Trunk railway, has received orders from headquarters to proceed with the erection at Lindsay, at once, of two grain warehouses, as required in the provisions of the bond under which the local railways were bonused. The warehouses, one for the county and a second for the town, will be located within the area as provided in the charter—probably at some point convenient to the Whitby line of rails.—Post.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The public are requested to bear in mind the anniversary of the Association, to take place next Friday evening in the St. Andrew's church. A very good programme has been prepared. The conference of the Association in the Midland district, to be held here on the 23rd and 24th inst., promises to be a good success. All are invited to attend the sessions, which will take place in the rooms of the Association. The young men's meeting will be held as usual in the rooms this evening at 8 o'clock. The Association will be glad to see any young men present.

Smith Town Band.

When Mr. Finch Miller, bandmaster of the Fire Brigade Band, was in Toronto this week, he purchased a set of ten instruments and two drums for a number of young men of the fourth line, Smith, who have organized a band. Mr. Miller will instruct the boys in the way they should blow. No doubt, with the fine instruments they have procured and the able teacher they have secured, they will soon be able to produce good music. In the meantime the winding notes of the cornet, the blast of the trombone, the deep notes of double bass, and the rattle of the drum will be heard all along the line.

P. A. A. A. Fall Sports.

Lovers of sport in the town and district should bear in mind that the Peterborough Athletic Association will hold their fall sports on Monday, 27th inst. A programme of 12 interesting events will be disposed of, for which valuable medals will be given. The meet of the Montreal Association occurs on the previous Saturday and it is expected that a number of those who take part in the Montreal meet will enter in the open events, while Bobcaygeon, Lindsay and other places will have representatives. The track is in fine condition and good records will be made. The public should encourage healthy sports by attending in large numbers. There is nothing encourages a man to do his utmost more than to know that he has a strong rival, that he is watched by a large number of spectators, whose approbation he will win in addition to the prize if he is successful.

The Interpretation Thereof.

"Bun March"—"What a funny name for a store!" "What does it mean, and how do you pronounce it?" said a lady walking down George street to a companion. "It is pronounced bo' marshay, and it means immense bargains, such as will always be found at Mr. Carton's Bon Marche." "They do tell me—those who have tried it—that at this shop, everything required for household use can be got of first-class quality at delightfully low prices." "I'm going to try it, will you come with me?" "Yes." "When, to-morrow afternoon?" "Yes." They passed on, and the next moment a millinery store absorbed them.

Northward, Ho!

A dark, damp dreary day—Thursday. Nevertheless as gay and jovial a party of young folks as ever left town, filled to repletion two large buses and started about 9 o'clock for Lakefield, where "change cars here" was sounded through the hazoo by the genial chaperon of the party, and boys, girls, lunch baskets, (big ones, too), and wraps were unceremoniously hustled aboard the "Cruiser" in waiting. Here the excursionists were re-inforced by about a dozen Lakefielders, and with the increased zest and enjoyment tacked on, a most pleasant sail through the numerous crooks and turns of Stoney lake and Lake Katche—Katche—something—terminated at Burleigh Falls about 1 p.m. Dinner was served at 2 p.m., but it is said that those who waited for the second table did not fare so well as the first-comers. The handsome young ladies who presided over the cuisine earned the everlasting gratitude of all, and rumor reiterates the statement that some of the aforesaid young ladies—mind, we don't say all—will shortly be permanently employed by an equal number of the aforesaid grateful young men, the contract for life service to be signed in the presence of a minister of the Gospel. Every luxury and tidbit was dispensed to the voracious pic-nicers, who afterwards strolled about in groups, of two and feasted their eyes and minds on the massive work in progress there, viz., the new Locks for the Trent Valley Canal. Embarkation was again made about 5 p. m.; Lakefield reached about 7.30 and Peterborough—home sweet home—about 10 o'clock. The drive home was cheered by the sentiment-inspiring strains of "Yankee Doodle," "Three Black Crows" etc., by the full chorus. Jokes and laughter were the order of the evening. The rain most obligingly absented itself all day and no accident or mishap of any kind occurred to mar the enjoyment of the trip. As the hilarious "Herb" put it, we had just a lovely time; so say we all—two score of weary yet happy and heart-whole lads and lasses of Peterborough.

There were Herbert and Ned,
And jovial Ted,
And "Chumbee," that handled the reins:
There was Mat, but not Pat,
And Willie who sat
Near a basket and ate the remains.

College Federation

An unsuccessful attempt was made on Friday at the General Conference to defer active work in carrying into effect the decision of the conference in favour of federation. Dr. Sutherland's amendment to that end was negatived by 84 to 75.

Fancy Flooring.

Mr. J. E. McIntyre of the Oriental, is having a fancy hardwood flooring placed in the office, dining room and bar room of the hotel. Two planks of maple and one of birch are laid, alternately, with a fine effect. Mr. Roberts is doing the work.

Market Items.

The market was particularly active this morning and was the largest for some time, produce of all kinds being offered in abundance and finding ready sale. Prices were quoted:—Butter, 18 to 20c.; eggs, 12 to 14c.; chickens, 40 to 60c.; ducks, 75c; potatoes, 60 to 70c. per bag; cabbage, 30 to 40c. per doz.; corn, 10c. per doz.; cauliflowers 5c. each; onions, beets, carrots, celery, etc., 5c. per bunch; apples, 60 to 80c. per bag; crab apples, 25c. per pail.

A Neat New Daily.

The always excellent Woodstock Sentinel-Review, has made an important upward step in the issue of a daily evening edition. The initial number did not come to hand but the subsequent numbers are excellent impressions. The type is new throughout and the matter printed, therefrom well selected and newsy, is presented in well arranged and readable form. A liberal advertising patronage is a sign of public appreciation, that argues for Woodstock's new daily the prosperous future the Examiner hopes it may enjoy.

Young People's Industrial Exhibition.

The young people of the George street Methodist Church are busily engaged in making preparations for their Industrial Exhibition, to be held in the drill shed on Monday afternoon and evening next, Sept. 21st. The entries made are numerous, and a splendid exhibit of fine arts, fancy goods, etc., by the young ladies, and useful and ornamental articles manufactured by the young men will be extensive. In connection with the exhibition the ladies intend serving a sumptuous tea from 5 to 8 o'clock. The Fire Brigade Band will enliven the proceedings with plenty of music. Admission for exhibition and tea, 25 cents; exhibition alone, 10 cents. Proceeds in aid of the organ fund.

The Gunners Return.

The members of the local division of the Durham Field Battery returned home this afternoon by special train, well bronzed and covered with glory. In the "shifting" competition the Durham Battery were successful in winning the Gzowski challenge cup, valued at $100, and $30, making the quickest time on record this year—1 minute 55 seconds. Sergeant Major Metherall, who in the absence of Capt. Sanderson, owing to illness had command of the Battery, had charge of the "shift" and was ably aided by T. Haultain and W. Metherall of town and six others.

Church Chimes.

Rev. J. W. R. Beck has returned from the Provincial Synod at Montreal, and will conduct the services in St. John's church tomorrow as usual.

Rev. F. H. Wallace, B.D., pastor of the Charlotte street church, will conduct the services in that church to-morrow.

The usual morning services of the George street church will be held in the basement on Sunday. Rev. I. Tovell will officiate. The evening services will be dispensed with, and services conducted by Rev. John McDougall, Northwest missionary, and three Indian chiefs will be held in the Opera House.

Rev. Mr. Torrance will conduct the services in St. Paul's church to-morrow.

Mr. Duff will occupy the pulpit of the Murray street Baptist church on Sunday.

A Millbrook Man in Trouble.

W. Derbyshire, of Millbrook, was arrested on Tuesday for selling goods under false pretenses. It seems that John Strainthrop, of Millbrook, some months ago purchased for Derbyshire a buggy from Porter Bros., of Peterborough, for which he gave part cash and a short date note for the remainder. The note, which was printed at the EXAMINER, stipulated that the buggy remained the property of Porter Bros. until the whole amount was paid. Derbyshire shortly after sold the buggy to Mrs. Robert Fair, of South Monaghan, for $50, informing her that he purchased it in Orono. When the note became due Messrs. Porter Bros., hearing that Mrs. Fair had bought the vehicle, collected the amount of the note from her. She immediately had Derbyshire arrested, and he was brought before Police Magistrate Dumble at Cobourg, charged with selling goods under false pretenses, and was remanded to jail for trial at the fall assizes.

IRISH OBSTRUCTION.

EXCITING SCENES IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—With the House of Commons sitting at 4 o'clock in the morning discussing the size of the cells in Irish prisons and the appointment of Protestant kitchen maids in Irish workhouses, it seems difficult to deny that obstruction has been practised. Matters went so far on Thursday that Lord Randolph Churchill protested against what he called the unprecedented and unmeasurable prolongation of the proceedings of the House. The Home Secretary also implored that a majority of the members silenced Dr. Tanner by groans and received Irishman after Irishman with derisive laughter. The discussion of the Fahey case threatened to become interminal. The excitement ran so high that the chairman constantly intervened to moderate the language.

Then came attacks on Capt. Plunkett, Special Resident Magistrate for the Cork District, whom Dr. Tanner described as occupying his leisure when not engaged in savagery with gambling, female society and German bands. Mr. Morley came to Capt. Plunkett's defence and declared that he had but done his duty. The chairman finally interrupted Mr. Marrington with the remark that he trust the the necessity of observing the usual decencies of debate. Mr. Parnell, during these scenes, as during the earlier part of the week, was conspicuous by his absence.

Nothing sufficed to shake the determination of the Government to finish Supply before taking up Mr. Parnell's bill. Lord Randolph's announcement was decisive. The bill will come on Monday if Supply were out of the ways otherwise it must take its chance. Under over a tacit agreement seems to have been reached that Mr. Parnell shall have two nights instead of one for the discussion of the bill. Mr. Gladstone's presence is now certain. He has notified his Liberal colleagues that he will arrive on Sunday morning. Nobody doubts that he intends to advocate, not, perhaps, Mr. Parnell's bill as it stands, but some measure for the relief of the tenant.

THINGS IN BULGARIA.

Russia's Reply to the Sobranje—A Demonstration in Honor of Alexander.

SOFIA, Sept. 18.—When the Russian agent here was presented with the Sobranje's telegram to the Czar praying for his friendship and protection, the agent said: "Prince Alexander's departure has removed the obstacle to good relations between Russia and Bulgaria, which was a source of great danger to the prosperity of Bulgaria, which Russia has at heart. Russia cannot admit even the idea of Prince Alexander returning to Bulgaria. This fact, therefore, is one guarantee of the happiness and internal independence which your telegram mentions. Behold the sins you enjoy among you all, and she especially desires that your Government shall be above all party spirit."

The Russians in Bulgaria deny all complicity in the seizure and deposition of Prince Alexander, but have advised moderation in the treatment of those who were implicated, in order to maintain quiet and prevent discontent from spreading. The Russians say they "consider that now the object of the plot is removed, no one can proceed against the actors in the plot."

The Sobranje has approved the bill appointing a court martial to try Maj. Gruev and other officers associated with him in the coup d'etat on the charge of treason.

The Journal de St. Petersburg says it cannot reconcile the Bulgarian address to the Czar praying for his friendship and protection with the Sobranje's reply to the speech of the Regency opening the session. "This confusion," says the Journal, "justifies Gen. Kaulbar's mission. His counsel will extricate Bulgaria from the existing crisis. The disorganization in the Sofia Assembly and among those guiding it must be checked."

After the adjournment of the Sobranje today a number of Deputies met and formulated an address to Prince Alexander describing him as one of the principal heroes of the revolution of the 18th September, 1885, and expressing the hope that he would speedily return to Bulgaria. In the evening a banquet was given in celebration of the anniversary of the Roumelian revolution. A procession, headed by priests accompanied by bands, paraded through the town, and subsequently a grand review of troops was held. The day was observed as a national holiday. At public and private gatherings everywhere toasts were drank to Prince Alexander.

Russia Threatens.

SOFIA, Sept. 19.—The Russian agent here has officially threatened to suspend relations with Bulgaria if the Government yield to the Sobranje's demand for the punishment of the authors of the revolutionary conspiracy.

ENTERED DUBLIN IN STATE.

Mixed Cheers and Groans Greet Lord and Lady Londonderry.

DUBLIN, Sept. 18.—The state entry of the Marquis of Londonderry into Dublin was made with the usual official demonstration, but was devoid of incident. The Marquis was accompanied by his wife Lady Londonderry. They were received at Westland Row by a crowd which cheered them. Both Marquis and Lady Londonderry rode thither from the station on horseback. Lady Londonderry, as a tribute to the Irish people, wore a dress of white poplin. When the couple departed from the railway station they were greeted with cheers followed by groans. The Marquis recognized the greeting by raising his hat and smiling to the crowd. The entire route from the railway station to Dublin Castle was lined with troops. Most of the buildings were decorated and the streets looked gay. The Hibernian Bank was conspicuous by its total lack of flags, bunting or decorations. The Kildare-street Club House was filled with people. In Nassau-street a banner with inscription "The Queen and the Constitution" was displayed. During the progress of the Vice Regal procession the cheers were nearly everywhere accompanied by groans.

The Vice Regal party was welcomed at the Castle by a large crowd of Loyalists, who cheered heartily. There was also a hostile crowd there which did its best to offset the welcome by cheering lustily for Parnell and "United Ireland." The hostiles attempted to follow this up as the Marquis and Lady Londonderry entered the Castle by singing "God save Ireland," but the people rallied and put a stop to this.

Eighth Wonder of the World

It is demonstrated by history that the anodyne in many of the arts, notably architecture, far excelled the present age, but it is reserved for the present decade to produce the eighth wonder of the world, i.e., Wells' World Wonder or Family Liniment, which is infallible for rheumatism, sprains, cuts, bruises, sores and all diseases requiring external application. 25c., and 50c., per bottle. All druggists. d&w

RENEWED RIOTING.

BELFAST ONCE MORE THE SCENE OF BLOODSHED.

BELFAST, Sept. 19.—There was desperate rioting on Davis-street to-day. The policemen arrested two drunken men for fighting. A mob immediately gathered around the police and threatened them with violence, and it was with the greatest difficulty that the prisoners were secured. As soon as the barrack doors were closed behind the prisoners a fearful attack was made upon the building by the mob outside. Shutters were torn down and windows were smashed with brick bats and paving stones. There were only four constables within the barracks. They fired eleven rounds, killing one man and wounding several others. A woman was also wounded and subsequently died in the hospital. The mob was scattered by reinforcements of police. Later the mob regathered in small groups, when a number of priests tried to persuade the people to return home. The disturbed district is patrolled by military and police.

Serious Disturbance at Liverpool.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 19.—Two serious riots occurred here to-day. One resulted from an encounter between Orangemen and Nationalists. The other had its origin in inflammatory speeches made at a socialists' meeting in Tonteth Park. The police experienced great difficulty in suppressing the disturbance. Many rioters were arrested.

THE TRIENNIAL CONCLAVE.

Arrangements Complete for the Reception of the Knights Templar at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 18.—All arrangements for the reception and entertainment of the Knights Templar who will attend the Triennial Conclave in this city have been completed. Quarters have been prepared for all visiting commanderies, and the Knights will suffer no inconvenience for want of room unless many come who have not notified the committee. To-day the Reception Committee of fifty from the various local commanderies will go into camp near the Union Depot, where they will be stationed until the list of the visitors arrive, giving the Knights a pleasant reception and furnishing each company with a band, which will escort them to their headquarters. Yesterday there left in a special car a delegation of Ivanhoe Commandery for Kansas City, where they will meet Sir Knight Robert E. Withers, Right Eminent Grand Master of the United States, and the California delegation, 1000 strong, and escort them to the city, arriving here to-morrow morning. The conclave opens Monday.

Robert E. Withers, the Grand Master of the Grand Encampment, will arrive Monday morning at the latest. He may reach the city to-morrow. A tender of an escort by the Grand Commandery of Virginia awaited him on his arrival in the United States, and he replied from Cheyenne, accepting it. He comes from his post in China on a three months' furlough for the special purpose of presiding during the encampment in St. Louis. The Grand Encampment will meet after the parade Tuesday afternoon. The only business transacted on that day will be the delivery of addresses of welcome by the Governor and Mayor and by Grand Commander Browne, of Missouri, the presentation of reports of grand officers and the appointment of committees. The first part of the exercises will be public. The topics for discussion will be the question of a permanent location for the Grand Encampment, proposed amendments to the constitution, and proposed amendments to the ritual.

At noon to-day the St. James Commandery of Philadelphia arrived. There have also arrived the following officers of the Grand National Encampment: Thos. S. Parvin, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., Grand Recorder; George C. Betts, of Louisville, Ky., Grand Prelate; Hugh C. McCurdy, of Corunna, Mich., Grand Captain General.

A Printer's Attempt at Suicide.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Thomas Rogers, aged 26 years, formerly a printer on the World, returned to his boarding house at 6 o'clock this morning after a night's spree and set about ending his life. His first step was to soak a box of matches in a glass of water and drink the mixture. This was of no avail. He then took a picture nail from the wall and jabbed it twice into his left breast. Very little harm resulted, and he next smashed a wine bottle and sawed at his throat with one of the fragments. While thus occupied his landlady discovered him and had him taken charge of by a policeman. Rogers had not been working for three months, having, it is said, inherited a fortune of $30,000 from some relative in England which he was to receive in instalments of $10,000 every ten years. He will recover.

Murder of a Chicago Saloonkeeper.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—At 3 o'clock this morning a police officer heard cries for assistance from a low saloon at No. 315 Clark street, kept by a man named Wm. Dwyer. The officer on entering a rear room found a disreputable woman named Minnie Ahern caressing Dwyer, who was lying on the floor, his head resting in a pool of his own blood. His skull was fractured in several places. The injured man was removed to the County Hospital, where he died an hour later. The woman was taken to the station, where she told the officers that a man named Billy Clark was one of the last persons seen about the place. Clark was arrested. The police will make more arrests to-day, and are confident of apprehending the murderer.

From St. Catharines via Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 18.—Mrs. Morris of this city has been stuffing a local reporter. Hearing of the death of her brother, Robt. Malbatt Kitton, aged 38, by drowning at St. Catharines, she went to that place to investigate. Her brother had lived at St. Catharines 10 years. At 10.30 he was alive, she says, and at 11.15 he was taken out of the mill-race. His body was still warm, but no efforts were made at resuscitation, owing, so Mrs. Morris says, to the law insisting that the coroner shall be notified of the finding of a body before any such efforts are made. At 4 o'clock Kitton was sent to the poor lot for burial, none of his friends being notified, although a letter addressed to Mrs. Morris was found on his person.

Father Fahey in Prison.

GALWAY, Ireland, Sept. 18.—Father Fahey, the Catholic priest who is undergoing six months' imprisonment here for alleged threats against a landlord for having evicted one of the priest's parishioners at Woodford, in an interview to-day with an Associated Press reporter said: "I never mentioned dynamite to Mr. Lewis. I never threatened him. I never urged the people to groan against him. I did not give bail because such a compliance would have been a tacit admission that my defence was false, and if I made a false defence I would prove myself unworthy of the priesthood."

THE REPORTERS REMAINED.

An Incident in the Trial of the Case Against the D. J. Adams.

HALIFAX, N.S., Sept. 18.—Upon the hearing in the case of the seized fishing schooner David J. Adams being resumed to-day before Commissioner McLellan the newspaper men who were subpœned yesterday as witnesses were found in their seats. Mr. Meagher, counsel for the United States, demanded that any witness in the court except the one under examination be ordered to withdraw. The Commissioner was powerless to grant the demand and Counselor Russell said the witnesses referred to had come to stay. A dispute lasting twenty minutes between Meagher and Mr. Russell followed, during which the former threatened to retire unless an adjournment was granted, but the newspaper men remained in their seats. Mr. Meagher consented to draw one of the witnesses to be examined, and Samuel D. Ellis of Victoria Beach being called swore to having sold bait to the captain of the David J. Adams. At the close of Ellis' statement the court adjourned until Monday.

SNAKES IN HIS STOMACH.

A Pennsylvanian has Fits and Vomits Three of the Garter Variety.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Sept. 18.—Three years ago John Longwell of Charleston, Tioga County, began experiencing strange sensations in his stomach as if some living thing was therein. A year ago by means of a violent emetic he vomited two living snakes, each over a foot in length. Two months later he felt a recurrence of the crawling sensation in his stomach and was taken with fits accompanied with horrible convulsions. Three weeks ago he experienced an exceptionally severe fit which nearly cost him his life. Yesterday afternoon during another fit Mr. Longwell vomited up a garter snake 18½ inches long and half an inch in diameter. His wife states that when the snake protruded four inches from the sufferer's mouth it stuck fast, but the snake was finally ejected, though not before Longwell in his agonizing convulsions had bitten it almost through in three places. The neighbors corroborate the account. It is supposed that in drinking from a pool three years ago Longwell sucked into his stomach the eggs from which the reptiles grew.

Beach Beats Gaudaur.

LONDON, September 18.—The boat race on the Thames to-day, between Wm. Beach of Australia, and Jacob Gaudaur of St. Louis, was won by Beach. The match was for $5,000 a side and the championship of the world.

Enormous crowds of people lined the banks of the river. The start was made at 4.46, the men getting away well together. Beach got a slight lead and at the start was a third of a length ahead, pulling thirty-seven strokes a minute to Gaudaur's thirty-five. At the creek Gaudaur had by a third of a length. Beach spurted at the half mile tree. He led by one-half length at the Craven cottage steps and was the same distance ahead at the crab tree.

At Hammersmith Beach was three lengths in front. His time to Hammersmith was 8.39, Gaudaur covering the distance in 9.03. At Biffins Gaudaur began to decrease his opponents lead, and at Chiswick was only half a length behind. By the time Thorneycroft was reached Gaudaur was one-half a length in front of Beach, and at the pumping station he was slightly in the lead. Beach then stopped rowing and Gaudaur obtained a lead of two lengths. At Barnes Bridge Beach again started, and going to the front won by four lengths.

Beach's time was 18 minutes and 56 seconds. It was a fearfully hard race throughout. The weather was clear and cold with the wind from the northeast. The tide was good. Before the start the betting was 2 to 1 in favor of Beach.

DEATH-BED REPENTANCE.

In his London speech, Sir John cruelly repudiates the Mail and its secondary crusade upon the French-Canadians. If he is sincere in this repudiation, it is just like him. Political ingratitude has been one of the characteristics of Sir John's career as a politician. He is accustomed to use a man for his dirty work, and then, when he is no longer useful, and becomes unduly urgent for recognition, he is dropped without ceremony, if not with insult. If his repudiation was insincere and hypocritical, it is also just like him, only a little more so. And everything points to the conclusion that he is insincere in this matter. It is highly improbable that the Mail, which depends so largely upon Government favour to get extravagant prices for printing, would imperil that chance and run counter to the wishes of its almoner, Sir John. No doubt Sir John indicated the Race and Revenge policy to the Mail, and, no doubt, the understanding exists that the Mail is to continue its dastardly work to influence and inflame one section of Canadians, while the Chieftain conciliates the insulted section by hypocritically repudiating his chief organ's attacks. If he had all along been opposed to the line the Mail has taken, why did he allow his cabinet ministers to pursue a similar policy? If he had objected, not one of them would have dared to follow a course contrary to the wishes of their chief. If Sir John Macdonald had disapproved of such a policy, would D'Alton McCarthy have dared to declare a war of extermination against French-Canadians? If he had given a hint against such a course, would the shameless Thomas White have dared to fling his now notorious insults against the French Roman Catholics by exhibiting, as he did at Cayuga, a portrait of Riel adorned with a rope, and asserting in effect that "this was the new saint of the Roman Catholic church." Not by any means. Sir John was aware of all that has been carried on in the name of "race and revenge," and silently approved of it. Only, when he sees that it has, to a certain extent, failed to produce the result intended, does he find it necessary to repudiate the chief Conservative organ—at the same time, no doubt, secretly issuing orders that the same dirty work be carried on as vigorously as ever, though under the ostensible ban of his distinguished disapproval. How like Sir John. How like his notorious act on a public platform, where with hypocritical unction he exclaimed, "Would to God I could catch him!"—when, at the same time, he was giving the public money to assist in the escape of that same Riel, whose hanging at Regina he now advances as an act of virtue of such immense magnitude that it is a full and sufficient atonement for all the political sins that have stained his crooked political career. Sir John's faint and half hearted disapproval of the Mail's course comes too late in the day to command respect. The popular faith in the sincerity of death-bed repentance is not very strong. Had Sir John at the outset of the Mail's course of attacks, uttered the same repudiation that he indulges in now, it would not have been so severe a strain to believe him honest, but when Haldimand showed him that the course he suggested was only doing injury, the deception is impossible. The antique "Artful Dodger's" coat is, figuratively speaking, not long enough to hide the cloven hoof.

THE following notice has been issued from the Department of Marine:—"No coal oil lamps shall be used between decks of passenger steamboats on which hay or other inflammable material is carried, under a penalty of $100 for each contravention of this provision; nor shall any coal oil which will not bear the test of 300 degrees Farenheit's without taking fire, be used on any passenger steamboat.

The settlements during the first three days of the week tended to restrict business on the Stock Exchange, but afterward there was much activity in every department. American railway securities were especially active, and there was a large amount of investment, prices yesterday closing very firm.

FIVE MILLION POUNDS.

By S. WENYSS REID.

"Come, sir!" I said. "I do not wish to keep Dr. Branksome waiting and I know he expects me. Have the goodness to let me see him at once."

"Oh, certainly. Come this way." He spoke still in the tone of veiled irony which irritated me so much, but he no longer stood like a statue. He placed his powerful hand lightly on my arm and led me along a passage and through an open doorway which gave access to another short passage. There was an open door at the end of it, and almost before I was aware I had passed through it and was standing in the middle of the strange apartment which the Duke of Cairngorm had caused to be prepared as a punishment cell when the yacht was built.

My first impression was that Flinter was playing some rough jest at my expense.

"What do you mean by bringing me to this place?" I asked. "Dr. Branksome is not here."

Flinter stood in the narrow doorway, which his powerful figure completely filled. "You are quite right, young man," he said. "The doctor is not here; but you'll find very comfortable quarters here until he comes—quite as good as you deserve."

"You insolent fool," I cried hotly, "let me pass!"

I was strong, and had plenty of mere physical pluck. I did not hesitate a moment as I advanced to push him on one side. But before I could lay a finger on the ruffian I found myself seized by the collar in a grip which was like that of a giant. It was all in vain that I struggled and struck out. I was flung with violence upon the floor of the cabin, and before I could regain my feet I heard the door close with a sharp snap, and I knew that I was alone in the gloomy apartment.

I found myself seized by the collar.

Almost instantaneously, however, a small trap in the door, like that which is used for the purpose of handing food to prisoners in their cells, and which for aught I knew to the contrary was intended to serve the same purpose here, was opened, and I saw Flinter's hateful eyes peering at me, while a coarse chuckle of malicious pleasure broke from his throat.

"Well," he said, after he had surveyed me for a moment, "I hope you will like your quarters. Your hot blood will have time to cool here. Make yourself comfortable, young man, and don't feel afraid of being starved. You'll find plenty of good victuals on the table in the corner."

"If this is an impudent joke," I cried, "it had better be ended at once unless you wish me to report your conduct to your master."

"Oh, yes, it is a joke," he retorted, with a brutal laugh, "and it seems to me it is a very good one, too."

"Open the door instantly, or you shall pay dearly for your shameful misbehavior."

"Pay! yes, I'll pay you in good time," he replied; and then suddenly the little trap-door closed with a click, and he was gone. I heard his retreating footsteps in the passage, and shouted to him at the top of my voice. But even as I did so I heard a heavy iron door noisily shut, and then all was silence.

I shook the door of my prison, I shouted, I stamped upon the floor; I made noise enough, as I thought, to be heard not only throughout the vessel but for a great distance on the sea. But I might as well have been crying to the winds. Either by some cunning contrivance all sounds proceeding from the cell were stifled forthwith, or those on board the Golden Hawk were taught to pay no heed to them.

Exhausted, even more by rage and indignation than by any physical exertion, I sat down at last upon the cushioned bench, which was evidently meant to serve the double purpose of a bed and a seat, and tried to collect my bewildered senses and take a calm view of my position. What was the meaning of the stratagem of which I had been made the victim? Could it be possible that it was really intended to make a prisoner of me in this violent fashion? and if so, with what object was such a crime committed?

These were the questions which I rapidly revolved in my mind. Incredible as it seemed, I was nevertheless forced to admit that I must answer in the affirmative. In broad daylight, and in an English watering place, I had been trapped and imprisoned, with as little regard for my personal rights, or for the claims of the law, as could have been shown by the worst desperadoes in the wildest parts of the earth. And what was worse, it was at once apparent to me that I was utterly helpless. The fatal folly of the Duke of Cairngorm had provided a prison [illegible] which I could hardly hope to escape unless with the connivance of [illegible] I thought with despair [illegible] had left the hotel openly, and as I now remembered bitterly, with no cheerful air that there could certainly have been nothing in my appearance to arouse the suspicions of the people there. I would be missed, of course, and probably my disappearance might be a brief wonder for the people of the house; but who could attribute it to anything more than some sudden freak? There was no one in Scarborough who took any interest in me, or who would feel called upon to make any inquiry into my whereabouts. I remembered how on that very morning I had looked out from my bedroom window and seen the Golden Hawk at anchor at the spot where she had lain ever since her arrival. Many a man would look out to-morrow morning and see the beautiful ship, as I had done, without dreaming for a moment that it was associated with such an outrage as that of which I was the victim.

But what could be the purpose of such a crime as this? Only one conclusion was possible. The letters both of Daisy and Dr. Branksome had hinted at some extraordinary change in the character of Maulaverer—something approaching, in fact, to a fit of madness. I was conscious of having offended no man but the millionaire. Nobody else had any interest in keeping me at a distance from Daisy. And it was on his yacht that I was now a captive, and in the hands of a ruffian against whom not merely my own instincts, and the strange dream I had had in the haunted chamber, but my darling's words, had warned me as a man with whom any dealings must be dangerous. I could not resist the conviction that Maulaverer, carried away by some fit of insane passion, possibly on making the discovery that letters had passed between me and his niece, had caused me to be seized in this violent fashion by the creature who was his most trusted agent.

The more I thought over the subject the more clearly convinced I became that this was the real interpretation of Flinter's conduct, and as I reflected upon it I felt that my only hope lay in the early appearance of Branksome. I was convinced now that he was not on board the yacht, and that his name had been merely used for the purpose of luring me into the cunning trap. But he had promised to see me soon. He had said he was coming to Scarborough. It was certain that business would bring him on board the Golden Hawk, and then I might hope that he would hear of the outrage which had been committed upon me and would come to my rescue.

It is needless to speak of the unutterable tedium of the first hours which I spent in my gloomy prison. When I had in some extent recovered my equanimity I made a careful inspection of the place, hoping that I might perhaps find, if not some way of escape, at all events the means of communicating with those on board the yacht.

The cabin was about nine feet square, and almost the first thing I discovered was that the walls were lined with sheet-iron. It was lighted by means of a funnel some four feet in height, which ran upwards at a sharp angle, and at the end of which was a thick circular plate of glass. It was clear, therefore, that my cell was at some distance from the side of the ship. This little window, which shed the dimmest of light into this cabin, was fixed, but the air in the place was by no means bad, and it was clear, therefore, that it was ventilated in some fashion which I could not discover.

For a moment my heart beat more quickly when I found that there was a second door to the apartment, in addition to that by which I had entered it. I opened this door and found that it led into a small bath room, provided, I presumed, for the use of the duke's sons when his grace found it necessary to subject them to the discipline of the punishment cell. This little bath room, which was plainly but comfortably fitted, lay between my prison and the side of the vessel, and it was dimly lighted from the passage by means of which entrance to the place was obtained. When I made this discovery I remembered having noticed on my first visit to the yacht that the waste of this passage also were lined with iron. It was clear to me at once that there was no escape in that direction.

Where the stone came from and who threw it is not known. The damage done will be between $40 and $60.

The Interpretation Thereof.

"Bun Marsh"—"What a funny name for a store!" "What does it mean, and how do you pronounce it?" said a lady walking down George street to a companion. "It is pronounced bo' marshay, and it means immense bargains, such as will always be found at Mr. Carton's Bon Marche." "They do tell me—those who have tried it—that at this shop, everything required for household use can be got of first-class quality at delightfully low prices." "I'm going to try it, will you come with me?" "Yes." "When, to-morrow afternoon?" "Yes." They passed on, and the next moment a millinery store absorbed them.

Willow and Wicket.

On Saturday morning a cricket match was played on the P.A.A.A. grounds between teams of Collegiate Institute pupils, one eleven being nicknamed "Tansicites," being composed of pupils who study with Dr. Tassie, while the other eleven, called the "Institutes," were selected from the remainder of the Institute pupils. The Institutes won by ten runs after an exciting game. The play on both sides was good, both at bat and in the field. The score sheets were destroyed and the match will not be recorded on the association match book.

A Brakeman's Hand Squeezed.

This morning as Thos. Lordon, a brakeman on the G.T.R., way freight between Port Hope and Toronto, and formerly a compositor in the EXAMINER staff, was engaged in coupling cars at the Bethune St., station, he failed to make the proper connection and had three of his fingers on the right hand jammed between the buffers. His ring finger was lacerated, Dr. Pidgeon attended to his injuries, which were slight, and he went on his way freight to Toronto.

More of Bellegham's Enterprise.

Mr. D. Bellegham has placed his order for a duplicate of the fine hearse which took first prize at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition. The new hearse which will be finished and delivered next spring, is a most handsome and substantial article, in an entirely new style, especially in keeping with the befitting solemnity which should mark funeral occasions. Mr. Bellegham is bound, at whatever cost, to keep the lead and to supply his customers with whatever may be demanded in the way of elegance and propriety. With two fine hearses he is now prepared to continue to retain the leading position he holds in the undertaking business.

John Perkins was brought before the bar at the Police Constable morning, charged by Chief Cooper with having been drunk on a public street on Saturday. He admitted the charge and was fined $2 and $4 costs or ten days in jail. He said it must have been more than Moxie that intoxicated him.

Monster Apples.

There may be seen in the window of Bath's confectionery shop a sample of prodigious apples of the Alexandria variety, the first bearing of a young tree, grown by Mr. Richard Stewart, of Otonabee. A look at them will convince one, as is the fact, that 73 of those apples will make a bushel.

Lacrosse.

The Ætnas and the Young Riversides engaged in a match on the Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon. The Ætnas were again victorious, winning two goals to none, after a hard struggle. The first game lasted one hour and five minutes and the second one hour.

The Ætnas have a match on with the Millbrook juniors on Saturday next.

The Young Shamrocks, who defeated the Marlbets early in the season, are anxious to arrange a match with the Ætnas for the junior championship.

Peterborough's Industrial Exhibition.

The public are requested to bear in mind that the Industrial Exhibition, under the auspices of the ladies of the George street Methodist church, will be held in the drill shed on Thursday (to-morrow) evening. The entries already made indicate that there will be a fine display of fine arts, fancy goods, etc., and also of industrial articles by the young men of the congregation. The presence of the Fire Brigade band will be an additional attraction. Refreshments will be served from 5 to 8 o'clock. Admission to exhibition and tea 25c.; to exhibition, 10 cents. The exhibition will attract a large crowd.

A Poem Wanted.

The following letter requiring a very arrange the announcement of which will be found in the usual place, is taken from the Beatrice, (Nebraska) Daily Express:—Mr. Waddington is one of the most substantial young men of that part of the county. He is a hardware merchant of Filley and postmaster of that town. The young lady is the accomplished daughter of Mr. J. B. Nicholls, and niece of Hon. W. D. Nicholls, of this city. Quite a number of friends, both from Filley and Beatrice, attended the wedding and several valuable presents were received. Mr. and Mrs. Waddington start this evening for Chicago and the east. After a few weeks they will take up their residence in Filley. Many friends wish them prosperity.

Why was the Letter Written?

In the Review and Times appears a letter from Mr. A. Hutchinson, principal of the Norwood Model School, complaining of a remark quoted by the EXAMINER from the Norwood Register in reference to the attendance at the school and adding that the attendance is "twenty." From this it may be inferred that Mr. Hutchinson thinks the attendance is more than "four" with no statistics of the general attendance at Model schools throughout the province at hand, it cannot be asserted that his definition is correct. If Mr. Hutchinson had desired to correct an erroneous impression for the sake of the good of the school, he would have sent his explanation to the paper in which the statement complained of appeared. To prevent his letter from correcting the assumed wrong impression it is, however, sent to two papers in which not one in ten of those who noticed the original item will ever see it. What was Mr. Hutchinson's object, then, in writing his letter, if it was not prompted by a desire to benefit the school?

Personal.

Prof. Deticet, who has been at the Industrial Exhibition the past ten days, has returned home, and is again ready to fill his musical engagements. He was exhibiting the Williams' pianos, and the city papers speak in high terms of his skilful performances.

At the General Conference of the Methodist Church, Mr. Geo. A. Cox was re-elected Bursar of Victoria University, and also elected a member of the Board of Governors of the Wesleyan Theological College, Montreal.

The Methodist Indian Chiefs,

Who are Making a Tour of Canada with Rev. John McDougall, Northwest Missionary, Deliver Addresses in the Opera House Sunday Night.

An unusually large audience assembled in the Opera House on Sunday evening, representing the congregation of the George street Methodist church and visitors who came to hear Rev. John McDougall, Northwest missionary, and the Cree Indian chiefs who are making a tour of Canada with him.

The platform was occupied by Rev. John McDougall, Chief Pakan, of the Wood Cree tribe, from White Fish Lake, north of the Saskatchewan; Chief Sampson, Wood Cree, from Bear's Hill, 300 miles north of Battleford; Mr. Robert Steinbeaur, son of an Indian missionary; Rev. I. Tovell, Rev. Mr. Davis, and the choir of the George street Methodist church, which under the leadership of Mr. Jaques, conducted the singing during the evening. Chief Jones, from the Rocky Mountains, chief of the Mountain Stoneys, owing to illness, was not present. The Indians were attired in the garb of the white man, the only difference being that they allowed their hair to hang loosely around their shoulders.

The services were opened by singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." After prayer and singing again, Rev. I. Tovell read the 1st chapter of Paul's epistle to the Romans.

Rev. Mr. TOVELL then introduced Rev. John McDougall, who is a son of Rev. Wm. McDougall, Northwest missionary, and who like his father has been a missionary since manhood.

REV. MR. MCDOUGALL in a happy address gave an interesting account of some of his experiences in the Northwest. He said that many years ago he found himself on the western prairies, on the banks of the Saskatchewan. It was in the buffalo season and the Indians were busily engaged in which in those days roamed the prairies in countless droves of thousands upon thousands. He described graphically how scouts were sent out in the direction the buffalo were feeding, and who by crafty manœuvring brought them into a large V-shaped pound, where they were slaughtered to provide for the wants of the tribe. The Indians showed great bravery, cunning and knowledge of the habits and instinct of these mighty animals in these hants. He noticed that previous to a hunt the medicine men with the letting of drums and much noise and ceremony prepared bags of medicine, which were said to be invincible to weapons with that the medicine bags were not required previous to a hunt, and that the solitary tree was not left standing in the centre of the ground, although he did not hurt the feelings of the Indians or insult them by alluding to their superstitions. As a case one had read, although the tree was cut down yet the roots still remained. For many years the tribal wars, the instinctive animosities between the Crees, the Blackfeet, the Pigeons, the Crowns, the Blackheads, Stoneys, etc. continued. The war-path was frequently resorted to, and the warriors returned to camp laden with strings of bloody scalps. The prospect of successfully teaching the gospel seemed very dismal. The missionaries went to work to up-root these evils. They had to preach and live the gospel. Gradually the tribal wars became less frequent, and the different tribes have now ceased to take the war-path against each other. Paganism was being eradicated from the hearts of the Indians, while the big root of the common in all savage countries, was, owing to the noble work of the wives of the missionaries, almost entirely removed, and now the mother, wife and daughter enjoyed almost the same privileges as in civilized countries. The abandoning of the aged, those practiced by all the tribes, was now unknown, not only among those who have accepted Christianity, but throughout the whole country. The barbarous habits were being laid aside, and the red man was taking to toil and engaging in other branches of pursuits, and soon he hoped the prophetic dream of a rod of all taste-de-ville would be realized.

The speaker described incidents relative to the death of a small Indian boy, which occurred shortly after he went among them, and which caused a wail of anguish to go up from all the mothers in the camp, which cry told him of the sorrow of those

WHO DIE WITHOUT HOPE.

Again he described the peaceful death of an aged chief, who, with his family, had escaped the [illegible] and who, [illegible] away surrounded by his sons, his little grandchildren and great grandchildren, while they sang "That Jesus Died for Me." Here Rev. Mr. McDougall, assisted by Chiefs Pakan and Samson, and Mr. Steinbeaur, sang the hymn in the Cree tongue. The speaker said he was certain the gospel had lost none of its power, and he had with him those who had been raised from barbarians to Christians, to life everlasting.

The missionary then called on Mr. STEINBEAUR, who during the past seven years has been studying at Victoria University, Cobourg, and who hopes to graduate next year. He sang very nicely the hymn "Tell it again," after which he gave a short address. He said he hardly knew what to say as he was not prepared. He had spent some years in this country at Victoria University, and had learned many things. He thought if the Indians had a better chance they would be much more advanced than they are now. They were so ready, he said, for instance, in drinking, which it is hard for them to resist. The Indians, he said, have a and do not take His name in vain, as he heard the whites do. He had forgotten much of his native language, but he was glad he had learned the language of the whites, that he might learn their good qualities, and by God's help might help in bringing the Indians to a higher knowledge of God. As he was highly privileged he intended to make the most of his opportunity, so that he might return to his home qualified to teach his brethren of the glories of Christianity.

A fine specimen of an Indian being over six feet high and well built.

CHIEF PAKON, followed speaking in the Cree language. Rev. Mr. McDougall translated him. He said that the audience had been from John (meaning Rev. Mr. McDougall) of how his people, hunted and fought among themselves. All he thought of when he was young, was when he would become a young man and a hunter, and he became a hunter when not hunting he had no high purposes to live for. He courted death while hunting and on the war path, thinking it would be better to die young and vigorous than to be deserted when old and weak. The change came with the missionaries, and now he had an object to live for. He had looked at the wonderful civilization of the whites, their marvellous facilities of locomotion and of lighting, most of which changes he had been told by John were brought about in his time. It was the same power which brought these changes about, the christianity of Jesus Christ, that wrought the change in him. He was glad as he felt it was the hope of his people. He was sorry he could not understand the preacher, and what he read, but he hoped his young people would learn to read that they may be able to understand these things. He was also glad to see so many come to see them.

Chief SAMSON, the older of the two, then spoke:—He said he was truly glad to be present. It was a sorrowful time last year when the tribes rebelled. At one time he loved war, but he had changed, He sought to restore peace, but he saw many who broke the peace. He was pleased when peace was restored and the rebellion put down. He had for a long time respected all tribes as the common children of God. He respected the whites for their great numbers, but much more when he saw their churches, schools, and institutions of law and order. He also respected them for their wonderful inventions. They went into the bowels of the earth for lights for their streets and buildings, and again climbed into the heavens for better light. He felt apprehensive of danger to his people from fire-water. He was glad he had never seen a missionary offer it to any of his people, and was glad and knew they were his friends. His earnest hope was that the whites would help him in protecting his people from the curse of fire-water.

Rev. Mr. Tovell announced that Mr. McDougall and the chiefs would hold a public service in the Charlotte street church on Thursday evening, when the Indians would appear in their native dress, and Mr. McDougall would give interesting information with regard to the chiefs.

The meeting was then dismissed.

"Does it give satisfaction?"

We cannot point to one instance where it did not.

"Where does it have the largest sale?"

Right in the city of Hamilton, where it is manufactured, there has been over one thousand dollars' worth sold in the last year retail, and the great majority of the sales are by one recommending it to another. For sale at 25c. and $1.00 per bottle by John McKee's Druggist. cod68w38

MR. PARNELL'S BILL.

THE MEASURE UP FOR ITS SECOND READING.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Mr. Gladstone attended this evening's session of the House of Commons. A crowd had assembled outside to see him and gave him an ovation when he came. He was received with a similar demonstration by members of the House when he appeared on the floor. Mr. Gladstone looks as if enjoying robust health.

Mr. Parnell, in moving the second reading of his Land Bill, said that the recent elections conveyed a mandate to the House of Commons that it should shew itself willing and able to provide for the wants of Ireland equally, as if it were an Irish Parliament. [Cheers]. It was useless to talk about the lateness of the session. The House was only six weeks old. The majority of the new members were young, fresh and not overworked and they did not require a holiday. A state of urgency existed with reference to the relations between landlords and tenants in Ireland.

Mr. Parnell here explained the provisions of the bill. The first clause he said, was the most important because it dealt with the most urgent subject. It enacted that any statutory tenant whose rent was fixed prior to the last day of the year 1884 might apply for an abatement in accordance with the provisions of the bill. The bill was to be a temporary measure with the exception of the second clause. It was intended to provide for what he hoped would be only a temporary emergency. It was intended to meet the depression in prices, but he could not tell now whether the depression was likely to continue. The depression commenced in 1885 and had continued unabated ever since. "There are no signs of a recovery," said Mr. Parnell. "Indeed the signs for the future are growing worse, but I only ask the House to take action with regard to the rents falling due next November, and then will be in the next session of Parliament. Until the House is able to take action on the report of the Royal Commission we will abstain entirely from prejudging the Government's proposals. But we do know that since the bulk of the judicial rents has been fixed that there has been a great depression in prices. The potato blight has spread to an alarming extent. Therefore it behooves the House to apply a temporary remedy now and not wait for the Royal Commission to report or for the Government to take action themselves, which will be impossible before November, 1887, supposing the House adjourned until the middle of February. Similar delay occurred in consideration of the Land Act of 1881 and the Arrears Act of 1882. Therefore unless the House accedes to my proposal tenants and landlords will remain in statu quo for a year. [Cheers.] Our opponents will probably urge that it will be exceedingly difficult for the Land Court to ascertain whether tenants are really unable to pay rents. But there was a similar difficulty to overcome in connection with the Arrears Act of 1882. The court satisfied itself within five months of the inability of 200,000 tenants to pay their rents. [Cheers.] Similar quickness and expedition will follow my bill and the work will probably be finished in three months.

"I propose further that the tenant shall deposit half the amount of his rent, leaving the court to determine how much of the remaining half the tenant shall pay and how much the landlord shall lose. Under the Arrears Act the tenant deposited only one-third of his rent, the landlord losing one-third and the state advancing the remaining third. The only practical difference I make is that the state shall not be a loser. In regard to the suspension of evictions my bill closely follows the lines of the Arrears Act, which act worked justly and satisfactorily for all parties. The costs of evictions frequently exceed the amount of rent due. Therefore it is necessary to suspend evictions to save tenants additional costs. [Cheers.]

"As regards the lease holders cause it will probably be objected to on the ground that it ought not to have a place in the temporary bill. But the lease holders have been waiting long enough—too long in fact, and I would not be a party to the horrible injustice of their perpetual exclusion from the benefits of the Act of 1882." (Cheers.)

The Appropriation Bill passed the second reading by a vote of 176 to 61.

WIGGINS' EARTHQUAKE.

The Seer of Ottawa Predicts Great Disturbances for the Latter Part of the Month.

OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—Concerning the great earthquake which Prof. Wiggins predicts for Sept. 29, he expresses the opinion that the earthquake proper will not be felt in Canada, but there will probably be a tremor in Quebec Province. The disturbance, he says, will not commence anywhere until 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and will not last more than a few minutes. There may be tremorings up to midnight, but they will be comparatively slight. Prof. Wiggins would not be surprised if on that day several new volcanoes should burst out in Central America and South America. The shocks, he thinks, will also affect San Francisco and the Pacific slope north of parallel 30. The disturbance will be meteorological, and will consist of a terrific storm, in fact a vast hurricane. This will be especially severe in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Eastern provinces. If any small craft, such as fishing boats, etc., are caught they will hardly escape. The storm will be preceded in Ontario, Quebec, the Maritime Provinces and New England by strong northwest winds on the 26th and 27th inst. The 28th will probably be fine—the lull that precedes the storm. The disturbance throughout will be terrific, and in his opinion cannot fail to cause widespread devastation.

MOONLIGHTERS AFTER ARMS.

Raids Committed in County Kerry and County Cork.

DUBLIN, Sept. 20. Several moonlight raids were made last night upon houses in the vicinity of Listowell, County Kerry. All of the raids were made in search of arms. The moonlighters in each case are described as well dressed, gentlemanly looking, polite men, the majority of whom carried watches, and were equipped with the newest kind of firearms.

Twenty armed men went out from Kanturk, a town in County Cork, near Mallows, in broad daylight to-day and made open raids in search of arms in farm houses not more than half a mile from the town. The raiders were successful in securing a quantity of firearms. Two arrests have been made.

A Methodist Parsonage Burglarized.

DUNNVILLE, Ont., Sept. 20.—Burglars entered the Methodist parsonage here early this morning and succeeded in securing about $200 worth of silverware, including a silver tea service presented by the Methodist Church, Guelph, to the late Mr. Cooley, and engraved with presentation plate to Miss Keeling. They obtained entrance by lifting a back window. There is no trace of the thieves.

A BIG DEFALCATION.

A PILLAR OF THE CHURCH A DEFAULTER FOR $87,000.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 20.—The announcement last evening that Wm. E. Gould, cashier of the First National Bank, was a defaulter to the extent of $87,000 created a sensation. Mr. Gould, who is a prisoner in his own house, has for many years been one of the most prominent citizens of the state. By common consent the titles of "Hon." and "Rev." have been given him, and no man enjoyed to a greater degree the confidence of the business and religious world. Some years ago he sold his country home and built a splendid mansion on State street in this city. People wondered at this, as his salary was but $4500 a year, and he had a large and expensive family to provide for, but his standing was so high in the community that no serious suspicion was excited. His wife is a daughter of Gen. Neal Dow, who is a very wealthy man, and it was commonly reported that Gen. Dow provided the money for the building of the house. Since building his house Mr. Gould has lived in more than good style. He has been very active in all benevolent and religious undertakings. He was a prime mover in the work of bringing the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions to Portland, and was one of the most active of Mr. Moody's assistants when that evangelist came here to hold a series of meetings. He was appointed by Governor Plaisted one of the commissioners to look into the management of the State Reform School, and later was identified with the civil service reform movement. He addressed for several years the National Bankers' Association, and filled, almost every Sunday, some one of the Congregational pulpits of the vicinity. As a speaker and writer he was very bright and effective, and as a preacher very successful, being especially remarkable for his great power in prayer.

A few days ago Mr. Gould went to New York on a visit. While he was gone an expert was put on his books. On his return he was asked to meet the directors of the bank in Portland. He was then confronted with the proof of his guilt. Completely broken down, it is understood that he admitted all that was charged against him; was at once arrested, and will appear before the court as soon as the affairs of the bank have been completely investigated. The defalcation will not injure the standing of the First National Bank. Mr. Gould has given up property to the value of $50,000.

LUMBER RAIDERS.

Canadians Charged With Plundering the Minnesota Forests.

OTTAWA, Sept 20.—It is alleged that for some time past Canadian lumbermen have made a business of carrying off lumber from United States territory. This has been done, it is charged, with the knowledge of the Interior Department, but no step has been taken to check it. The St. Mary's Lake district, Minnesota, has suffered most from these depredations. Millions of feet of the choicest lumber have been cut and floated down the river to Lethbridge, where it has been sawed up and sent to Manitoba and the Northwest Territories. Over 400 laborers were engaged all last winter in this work, and it is reported men are being engaged for similar work this winter.

U. S. CUSTOMS REGULATIONS.

All Coverings of Imported Goods to be Admitted Free of Duty.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—An important Customs decision has just been rendered by Assistant Attorney-General Jenks. The effect of the decision is to exempt from duty all boxes, bales and coverings of imported good except when the covers or boxes are of a material to indicate that the object of their use in this way was to evade the duty. In that case a duty of 100 per cent. ad valorem will be imposed. The mere fact that the boxes, sacks, crates or coverings of any kind might possibly be used after importation for other uses, if such use were not developed at or before the time of importation, and there was not at the time a design to evade the duty by the use as coverings will not subject such coverings to the 100 per cent ad valorem duty.

THE ODDFELLOWS AT BOSTON.

Immense Progress of the Order—Over Half a Million Members.

BOSTON, Sept. 20.—The annual session of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, I.O.O.F., opened at Oddfellow's Hall, Boston, this morning. The proceedings were secret. Grand Sire Gain's reports showed the present membership of the order to be 517,310 with a total revenue of over $4,000,000. The receipts in the benefical associations last year were $1,050,905, of which $873,-673 was paid to the families of deceased members. The reports of the Grand Secretary and Treasurer were very flattering. The available assets of the Sovereign Grand Lodge are $78,-396.

Rather More Than a Quid Pro Quo.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20. Advices from Alaska state that the captain and mate of the British schooner Thornton, which was seized for catching seals in Behring Strait, were tried by jury, found guilty and sentenced to imprisonment for thirty days and fined, the captain $500 and mate $300. The crews of the two other British schooners were to come up in a day or two. The captain of one of them disappeared, and it is supposed he committed suicide. The revenue cutter Corwin, when conveying her prizes to port, sighted five other vessels, all doubtless engaged in unlawful sealing. They escaped.

A Lost Fortune and the Missing Heir.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20. Chief of Police Paradis received a letter on Saturday from Mrs. Hannah Laiton, nee Eaton, asking for some money, amounting to several thousand pounds sterling, that had been left by her father, John Eaton, who died here thirty-three years ago. The money, she said, had been left in trust with a clergyman of the Established Church, whether of England or Scotland is not stated, for herself and brother. The clergyman wrote at the time to Mr. Jones, then mayor of Hull, England, asking him to find the heirs, which the latter succeeded in doing, and Jonathan Eaton, with the necessary papers to prove his identity, sailed for America in 1860, but the ship was lost and he was never afterwards heard of. His sister took no further steps until the present, having forgotten the name of the trustee appointed.

A Schooner Sinks Off Port Dalhousie.

PORT DALHOUSIE, Ont., Sept. 20. A small schooner was observed drifting ashore about one mile west of Port Dalhousie pier early this morning, and in a short time was seen to fill and sink in about fifteen or twenty feet of water. A small skiff was attached to the vessel, and there did not appear to be any person aboard of her. She lies in such deep water that her name cannot be seen. A water soaked, skiff and small leather covered valise, which was empty, floated ashore during the day. When first seen the schooner's mainsail was hoisted.

A British Corps Beleaguered.

RANGOON, Sept. 20. The western frontier column of the British army of occupation in Burmah has been cut off at Lalmetkih from communication with the main army by the forces under the leadership of Boshwey and other noted insurgents. Three hundred troops have been despatched to relieve the beleaguered corps.

UNHAPPY BELFAST.

CONTINUED EIGHTEEN YESTERDAY AFTERNOON AND EVENING.

BELFAST, Sept. 20.—All was quiet this morning. At noon, however, a large body of Queen's Island shipyard workmen, all Orangemen, marched ostentatiously through the streets on their way to and from dinner, as if to provoke a fight. At Carrickhill they were attacked with volleys of stones and a desperate fight ensued, which is still in progress. Many men on both sides were wounded. The police are outnumbered and powerless. Reinforcements were hurried to the locality.

Desultroy combats between the mobs and the police occurred in various parts of Belfast in the evening, but so far as known no one was fatally injured. There was much stone throwing and the police used their batons freely. One detachment of police being attacked by overwhelming numbers was obliged to flee. They were pursued by a howling mob and assailed with stones and other missiles. Finally a strong body of soldiers succeeded in rescuing the policemen. The barracks on Divis street were again stoned to night. A number of houses were wrecked by the rioters. The total number of arrests made to-day is twelve.

Reinforcements have been telegraphed for by the authorities. A hastily summoned meeting of magistrates was presided over by the Mayor to-night. Vigorous action will be taken to ensure the peace of the city.

ABUSED BY MISCREANTS.

A Young Girl Frequently Assaulted, Handcuffed and Left to Starve in the Woods.

NEMART, Neb., Sept. 20. J. H. Linds, Judge Albert Harries and Dr. Dunsmore, of this city, in company with Mr. Hare and W. H. Fernock, of White Cloud, were hunting Saturday in the Indian reservation five miles from this place. While passing through the woods they heard a groan issuing from an old dugout, and found therein a young lady perhaps 18 years old, handcuffed and chained to a log. Near by were a pail of water and some stale bread. Her clothing was nearly torn from her and she was almost dead from exposure and hunger. With sobs and groans the girl said that five weeks ago she was enticed from her home in Iowa by a young man to whom she was engaged to be married, and when about ten miles from home they were joined by three other young men. They traveled all night, and when the morning came they went into the woods and camped. During the day the young lady became suspicious and began to question her lover, who told her not to be uneasy, as he would see to her. When night came on they resumed the journey, and when morning arrived they crossed the river, traveling until 12 o'clock, when they reached the place where she was found. There, she stated, she had been kept for nearly five weeks to gratify the vile purposes of her escort. She was repeatedly assaulted by all the members of the party. The lady says her name is Mary Lathrop, and that she lives at Rhinebeck, Iowa. She also gave the names of the miscreants who assaulted her, but the gentlemen who found her will not state them at present, as a lynching party has been organized.

THE OLD GAME.

It is easy to see that a general election is not far off. Even the much neglected Trent Valley Canal scheme is being resurrected for the purpose of influencing the ridings of this district. We have received a marked copy of a Tory paper, pointing out that the inexcusable delay in the construction of the canal is caused by the Government being frightened by threats of actions for damages by parties along the route. This is a most thin excuse, but it is supposed that it will be enough to gull the electors, the Government politicians arguing that as they have been successfully hoodwinked in the past, the most transparent excuses may now be palmed off on them. The EXAMINER's report of the progress of the works at Burleigh is cited to show the rapid progress of the work. It showed nothing of the kind; on the other hand it indicated that the progress of the works was due to the push and energy of the contractor, who had pushed the work in the face of the obstructive tactics of the Government and the known hostility of the Government engineer to the work. If Tory politicians are satisfied with the progress made with the work of canal construction, they are in a condition to be grateful for mighty small mercies. The public of this district, however, are not satisfied, and it is the public interest alone that should be consulted. The Government mouth-pieces will have to pipe the song of the siren right skilfully to charm the ears of the electors of the Midland district with Trent Valley Canal promises.

CONTINENTAL politics in Europe are of so lively a kind at present that a rupture at any day is counted among the possibilities. If Russia can raise money, she will fight, and if war begins there is little doubt that England may be drawn in. If she is, she will be prepared for it. At least her seizure of the Island of Thasos in the Ægean, looks as though England were preparing for readiness for a warlike contingency. The situation and strategetic importance of this island are thus described: It is a Turkish island, but has heretofore been under the jurisdiction of the Khedive, and this fact has furnished the pretext for its occupation by the British. Thasos lies in the Ægean sea, close to the coast of Roumelia, and within less than 100 miles of the Hellespont. A great naval power in possession of it could close the Hellespont and interdict all egress from the Sea of Marmora and Black sea, or could protect the landing of troops in Roumelia for a flank march on Constantinople. Should Russia decide to make the Bulgarian matter a pretext for war, any attempt on her part to advance on Constantinople could be checkmated by Austria throwing an army in Roumelia, while the presence of a naval detachment in the Ægean sea would conjunctively form an obstacle the Russians would find it impossible to overcome.

On the occasion of his previous visit he declared his "hands were clean," although he had just handled "another ten thousand;" and he "wished to God he could catch him," although he had paid the man of whom he spoke to leave the country. On the occasion of his present visit he should be invited to do public penance for the unblushing falsehood and impiety of which he was then guilty.

Live and Learn!
THE LONGER YOU'RE IN BUSINESS THE MORE YOU LEARN.
THIS is a maxim which may be wisely applied to municipal and business matters as well. I would respectfully call attention to the fact that I have just returned from the wholesale markets where I have purchased my well assorted stock of
BOOTS AND SHOES
For the Fall and Winter Trade.
I would specially call attention to my Boys' and Mens' Balmorals, warranted to keep out wet and snow; Ladies' and Childrens' Boots and Shoes, Rubbers, Overshoes, etc. Altogether the best and cheapest stock of boots and shoes ever placed on the local market. Everything guaranteed first-class. Give me a call at my shop, corner of Johnson and Sherbrooke Sts, and you will save money thereby.
All of my stock has been made by hand. None of it has been sewed by machinery to rip and give out after a few weeks wear.
Repairing neatly and promptly executed at cheap rates.
I wish to return thanks to those who so kindly bestowed their patronage on me since commencing business one year ago, and I trust by giving good value to merit a continuance of the same

IMPORTANT AUCTION SALE
—OF—
RIVERDALE PARK
BETTER KNOWN AS
Crawford's Grove, Monaghan.
I have received instructions from ALFRED CRAWFORD, ESQ., to sell by Public Auction
On Wednesday, Sept. the 29th,
that very eligible property known as "Riverdale Park," situated on the banks of the Otonabee River, formerly well known as Crawford's Grove, and situated in the Township of North Monaghan and containing 72 acres. The property will be offered en bloc, and if not thus sold, will be offered in parcels or park lots as laid out in a plan by Mr. Rannoy, which can be seen at any time.
This property is only two miles from the business centre of the Town of Peterborough. It can be laid out either for a summer park, picnic grounds or summer residence resort, its situation being admirably adapted for these purposes. An excellent opportunity is here opened for building summer cottages. Business men in town can domicile their families at the park, attend to their business by the day, and spend the evenings with their families—thus enjoying the delights of country life without neglecting business. No more beautiful park lots could be obtained than those contained in this property. The soil is composed of a sharp rich loam top, with clay bottom, possessing excellent virtues for garden purposes. Its proximity to the Otonabee River affords ample opportunity for pleasure or boating, camping, fishing and other recreations.
THE HOMESTEAD
which adjoins the above property to the north, will also be offered at the same time. It is composed of about 12 acres of excellent land, on which there is a good Brick Dwelling House, outbuildings and water privileges. It has a road on two sides, and the river on its front. It may be sold en bloc, or in three parcels—extending from the road to the river.
TERMS.—Ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid down at the time of sale, and sufficient to make one-third in ten days thereafter, when title deeds will be prepared, and a further sum, together with the above, sufficient to make one-half and interest, to be paid in one year from day of sale; the balance in three equal annual instalments, with interest at six per cent per annum.
☞Further particulars and conditions will be made known at time of sale, or may be had on application to Mr. A. P. Poussette or Mr. A. Crawford, Proprietor.
Sale to take place on the premises and to commence at two o'clock p.m., sharp.
A sketch of the property may be seen in the windows of Messrs. John McClelland, A. L. Davis, and Rush Bros.

FIVE MILLION POUNDS.

By T. WEMYSS REID.

Everything appeared to be scrupulously clean: nor could it be said that—allowing for deficiency of light—my quarters would have been at all bad if I had occupied them voluntarily. I had seen many an officer's cabin in our big ironclads which was not to be compared to this either in spaciousness or in the convenience of its furnishing. For when my eyes had become accustomed to the prevailing twilight gloom, I had ascertained that very fair provision had been made for the comfort of the unlucky wight who was destined to occupy the place. The couch which occupied one side of the room was capacious enough to form a commodious bed, and though the cushion was no doubt hard, it was not harder than many on which I had slept voluntarily in the past. A small chest of drawers, above which hung a glass in which, when I looked into it, I saw nothing but a ghostly blur of white—the indistinguishable reflection of my face—stood near the door; while at the opposite end was a folding stool and the table to which Flinter had drawn my attention.

He had not deceived me in one respect. There was, as he had said, an abundant supply of "good victuals" on this table. It was covered with a white tablecloth, and I could see a loaf of bread, a dish on which were neatly arranged a number of slices of cold beef, a bottle of claret, another of water, together with salt and other ordinary accessories of the table. It was at least evident that my captors had no thought of starving me. Nay, I made a discovery that positively caused me for a moment to think less bitterly even of the ruffian Flinter. On a small shelf above the table there was a well-filled box of cigars—Larranagas of the finest brand.

Clearly, then, though I was a prisoner, there was no intention of subjecting me to any ill-treatment beyond that which was needful to keep me in close confinement. This conviction finally satisfied me that I had been correct in my conclusion as to the real reason of my abduction. I was the captive of the millionaire; but I was also his guest, and he had not forgotten a some, at least, of the laws of hospitality in his treatment of me.

I sat down upon my bench after this long and careful survey of my prison and again tried to think steadily, calmly and clearly of my situation. My investigation had satisfied me that there was no means of escape from within and little if any chance of being able to communicate with those persons on the yacht—if such there were—who were not privy to my abduction. I was struck by the almost entire absence of sounds from without, and was more than ever convinced that some special means had been taken for the purpose of procuring the isolation of the cell. No sound of tramping feet on deck, no cries from the sailors, no whistle of wind in the rigging reached my ears. I might have been at the bottom of a coal mine so far as any knowledge, either by sight or sound, of what was passing in the outer world was concerned.

How long I had remained buried in gloomy thought, wondering how and when this strange adventure was to end, and what good purpose Maulverer really hoped to serve by treating me in this unwise fashion, I cannot say. Suddenly, however, I heard a sound which made me start to my feet, trembling from head to foot with a new excitement. I was fond of the sea, and had made many a voyage in my father's company. I did not need, therefore, to be told what was the meaning of the noise which now penetrated even the dreary silence of my cell. It was that deep, muffled throb which marks the first revolution of the engine on board a steamer.

I listened with all my senses on the alert, and very quickly I found that my ears had not deceived me. Slowly at first, and then with increasing speed, the dull throbbing of the engines was continued, and almost simultaneously I heard the rattle of the capstan, and knew that the anchor was being weighed. I hardly dared to allow my own mind to grasp the real significance of the sounds. I stood there, almost breathless, my ear fixed to the door of my cell, during minutes which seemed hours. But only too soon there was the fullest confirmation of my fears. To the throb of the engine was now added the harsher grinding of the shaft of the screw, while very soon other evidences convinced me that we were putting out to sea.

Once more I raised my voice in loud cries. It had been terrible before, when I knew exactly where I was, and when I could at least feel that we were lying at anchor in an English bay. But now, when I found that we were steaming away across the waves, in a direction which I was absolutely unable to determine, bound, it might be, for some port where civilized laws had no effect, and when I remembered, too, that I was absolutely in the power of a ruffian whom I believed to be capable of any crime, fresh terrors seized upon my imagination. I exhausted myself utterly in vain attempts to exact the attention of the crew.

Soon, indeed, I realized the fact that if I had not been able to make them hear before, there was not the faintest chance of my doing so now. The yacht had passed beyond the shelter of the Castle cliff and was breasting the waves, which ever and anon broke upon its quivering sides with a roar that must have drowned all other sounds. The motion of the vessel increased so much that if I had not been an exceptionally good sailor I should soon have been placed hors de combat; and my past experience of the sea enabled me even in my gloomy prison house to perceive that we were laboring through a heavy gale from the nor'west.

CHAPTER IX.

A STRANGE NIGHT.

I looked at my watch. To my surprise I found that it was only one o'clock in the afternoon. I had heard the church clocks striking ten when I first stood on the deck of the yacht. My imprisonment, which seemed to have lasted for an age, had actually so far continued for rather less than three hours. The panic—for I can call it nothing else, though it is with shame that I make the confession—into which I had been thrown when I first knew that we were putting out to sea subsided with a suddenness that surprised even myself. Perhaps it was the calm of despair that took possession of my breast. At all events I succeeded for the moment in driving all agitating ideas out of my mind. I assumed the airs of a philosopher. I could not help myself, it was certain; and why, therefore, should I continue to exhaust my strength in fruitless attempts to baffle my fate? For the present, at least, no bodily harm was intended to me. It would be wiser, therefore, to accept the situation and await events.

Full of this new composure, I began to take notice of the fact that I was hungry, and that food was at my elbow. I turned to the table and observed there for the first time that which I ought to have seen before. Guards had been put upon the table before the food was to have been placed on it, so that even the bottles were kept in their places despite the heavy rolling of the vessel.

I satisfied my hunger, and then—why, then I remembered the cigar box. I remembered, too, that I had in my pocket a box of wax matches. In another minute I was lying on the couch, in as easy a position as it was possible to maintain under the motion of the vessel, enjoying one of the very best cigars I had ever smoked.

I shall not inflict upon my readers all the phases of the long, deep reverie in which I indulged while one cigar after another vanished in smoke. At times I awoke as from a dream to a sense of the extraordinary and alarming position in which I found myself, and then I rose and rushing to the door shook it violently, to see whether by any accident it might have been opened as I lay in silence on my couch. But for the most part I maintained the composure which fell upon me after I knew that we were fairly out at sea, and allowed my fancy to run riot in those imaginary meetings with my darling which form the solace of all absent lovers.

By and by the gloom of my room grew deeper and I knew that night was stealing on. I struck a match and looked at my watch. It was five o'clock. These four hours had passed more quickly, and despite the gale which the ship was encountering, far more comfortably than the three hours that had elapsed between my capture and the commencement of our voyage. I was thinking somewhat wofully of the long hours of darkness which now lay before me, when noiselessly a flood of silvery light filled the cabin. Startled by its sudden appearance, I looked up, only to discover that an electric light was shining above my head in its pear-shaped glass. It was only when this happened and when I felt all the comfort of being at last able to survey my abode at ease—for the artificial light was far brighter than the natural one had been—that I realized the striking appearance with which I had regarded the prospect of a night spent in absolute darkness in such a place.

"If I only had a book now," I said to myself, "and—why yes, I should really enjoy a cup of tea. Surely the millionaire would not begrudge me that if he knew how much I should relish it!"

Hardly had the words passed my lips than I heard the click of a key, and then I saw that the little trap in the door had been opened and that Flinter was regarding me with a sardonic smile upon his ugly face. All authorities on the subject are agreed as to the surprising effect which solitary confinement has in taming a man's spirits. I found now that the authorities were right. Instead of making a wild dash at the spot where the ill-omened countenance of my captor was visible, I sat still and merely indulged myself with a silent stare of disdain in return for his grin of derision.

He sniffed audibly, inhaling the fumes of tobacco with which my little room was filled.

Undoubted Security.

The British Empire Mutual Life, Policy Holders, will be pleased to know that it has deposited in the hands of the Government, of the Dominion of Canada, $160 of assets for every $100 of liabilities. An insurer who would demand any better security than this would be dissatisfied with endorsation of the Bank of England.

Police Court.

Patrick Sullivan and John Daly were arraigned before Police Magistrate Dumble at the police court this morning, the former, who had been remanded to jail for one week on a charge of drunk and disorderly, and the latter charged with being drunk in a public place. Both were discharged. A suspicious looking valise which Daly carried was found to contain two innocent, empty whiskey flasks.

Accident to a Child.

On Sunday morning, just before the morning services, a little daughter of Mr. M. J. Snyder, who resides above Lovell's harness shop, Lind-say, fell out of the second storey window to the sidewalk below, striking on head, shoulder and side. She had been balancing herself on the sill watching the Salvation Army, and while in that position stretched out her hand to catch a rain drop, lost her balance and fell. Dr. Kempt, who was only a few feet from the scene of accident, hurried to the spot. The child was insensible, but soon came to and is likely to recover.

Fenelon Falls Inventors.

The Fenelon Falls Gazette devotes considerable space to the merits of the inventions of its several inventive geniuses. The first is Mr. John C. Craig, who has invented and patented an excellent door lock, called Craig's Combined Lock and Latch. Other inventions by local men are a self-feeding and band cutting attachment to threshing machines, and a machine for stock-taking in dry goods stores, both invented and patented by Mr. Charles Sandford; an improved cabinet for wrapping paper and paper bags, invented and patented by Mr. Joseph Pritchard; and a fire engine at which Mr. Craig has been working for some time past, and which he will very soon have patented.

Real Estate Change.

Mr. Wm. Fair, of Cavan, latterly of Hamilton township, purchased last evening from the Burnham estate, the "Collins farm," situated in North Monaghan, about two miles from the market square. The farm contains 192 acres, all of which is cleared. It is a fine farmstead, with only a trifling amount of acreage (on the front) that is not ready for the plow, and which a little stumping will make arable. Mr. Fair takes possession on the first of November, and let the contract this morning for repairing the house and furnishing shutters and double windows and verandah. The price paid for the farm —$9,000—is considered to be rather reasonable. Mr. Fair is a first-rate farmer, with a successful predilection for fine stock. He will be a valued addition to the solid yeomanry in the vicinity of the town.

By the Laying On of Hands.

Rev. F. Rudkins Becomes a Priest of the Roman Catholic Church—Imposing Ordination Ceremony by His Grace, Archbishop of Toronto.

A large congregation assembled in St. Peter's Cathedral this morning at eight o'clock, to witness the ceremony and engage in the services pertaining to the ordination of Patrick Joseph Rudkins, to the Priesthood of the Church, by His Grace Archbishop Lynch, of Toronto, which ceremony is one of the most solemn and impressive of the Catholic Church. His Grace the Archbishop of Toronto, who ordained the candidate, celebrated Mass clothed in full pontificals—Almice, Alb, Cinctare, Cross, Tunic, Dalmatic, Maniple, Stole and Chasuble, emblamatic of the sacred power which, in obedience to Divine commission, he confers upon the supplicant for ordination. His Grace was assisted in the ceremony by Vicar-General Laurent, of Lindsay, as Arch-Deacon; Rev. Father Casey, of Campbellford, as Deacon; Rev. Father McEvoy, of Fenelon Falls, as Sub-Deacon; Rev. Father O'Brien, of the Cathedral, Master of Ceremonies; Rev. Father Hand, of Toronto, as Assistant Priest; also Rev. Father Conway, Rev. Father O'Connell, of Douro; Rev. Father Kelly, Emmamore; Rev. Father McCloskey, Victoria Road; Rev. Father Maguire, Lindsay; Rev. Father Brown, Port Hope; Rev. Father Fayolle, of the Cathedral, and Rev. Father Conolly, of Emily.

His Grace, accompanied by the attendant clergy and the candidate for ordination, walked in procession up the centre aisle of the church and took their places in front of the altar. The candidate for ordination having been duly examined concerning his conduct and morals, his knowledge of the sacred Scriptures, theology, etc., was arrayed in the vestments of a deacon. His Grace the Archbishop proceeded with the mass as far as the Tract, when having taken his seat in front of the altar, the solemn of the church were proceeded with. The candidate for Holy Orders was presented to the Archbishop, the assistants attesting of his worthiness to fill the sublime office of priest.

His Grace addressed the assembled clergy and people, charging them if they had anything to say against his promotion, to let him, before God and the good of the people, come forward and speak. After a short pause he addressed the candidate for ordination, charging him to be mindful that he receive it worthily and to perform in a manner worthy of praise the duties of his office, concluding with these words: Therefore, most beloved son, whom the voice of your brethren has chosen to be our assistant, preserve chastity, unstained, and lead a holy life. Ponder seriously upon the sacredness of the duties which you will perform, practice what you inculcate, and while you celebrate the mystery of our Lord's death, endeavour to mortify in your own body all inclinations toward vice and concupiscence. Let your doctrine be as spiritual medicine for the people of God, and let the order of your life be the joy of the church of Christ, that you may build up, as well by example as by precept, the house of God, which is his family; so that neither we who ordain you nor you who are ordained, may incur the wrath of the Most High, but rather deserve to be remunerated by Him, which may He grant by His holy grace.

Here the Candidate prostrated himself before the altar, and the "Litany of the Saint's was chanted," when the Archbishop blessed him thrice.

THE IMPOSITION OF HANDS

was then performed by the Archbishop and the clergy in Stole, by placing their hands upon the head of the candidate, after which the Archbishop invoked the divine blessing upon him. His Grace then invested the candidate with the Chasuble, and after prayer anointed his hand with Holy Oil, and presented him with a chalice containing wine and water and gave him the power to sacrifice to God, to celebrate Mass for the living as for the dead, in the name of the Lord. The Priest repeated the Mass after His Grace. The Archbishop administered communion to the newly ordained Priest, who, standing before the altar, made a profession of his faith by reciting the creed.

His Grace, after admonishing him, pronounced a blessing over him.

At the conclusion of the ceremony Rev. Father Rudkins received the congratulations of the clergy and people present. A large number of the congregation walked forward and received the blessing of the Priest.

The choir gave their valuable assistance during the services.

REV. PATRICK JOSEPH RUDKINS,

second son of Mr. Patrick Rudkins, was born in Peterborough in 1864, and has since that, with slight interruption, resided in town. Since boyhood his object in life was to become a priest, and his daily walk was accordingly of a high character. He was a general favorite amongst his friends, and is well known in town as a most exemplary young man. He received his primary education in the Peterborough Separate School, and afterwards studied Latin with Mr. F. J. Lynch, who taught a night school in Peterborough at that time. In 1881, when he was 17 years of age, he went to St. Michael's College where he took up a course of study preparatory to entering the Priesthood. His career was a brilliant one, he taking a scholarship at the conclusion of his first years course, and graduating with honors in June 1883. In September 1883 he went to the Grand Seminary, Montreal, where he has since pursued his studies in Theology. During this term he was in turn appointed by Bishop Fabre, to the offices of Tousure, minor Orders, and recently the sacred orders of Sub-Deacon. Last week he went to Toronto where the degree of Deacon was conferred upon him by His Grace, the Archbishop of Toronto.

Complimentary Supper.

On Monday evening a number of friends of Mr. Daniel Ryan, who for some months has been employed with the Peterborough Lock Works Company, assembled at the American hotel to give him a complimentary supper on the eve of his departure for Oshawa. The company, after doing justice to a sumptuous supper provided by mine host, Halpin, enjoyed an hour or so in toasting Mr. Ryan, and in singing, speechifying, etc. Mr. Ryan is a young man of sterling good qualities, and though he has only been in town two or three months, a large number of friends regret his departure.

Dead Beside the Track.

This morning the dead body of an unknown man was discovered by C. P. R. train hands, lying alongside the track, a mile east of Norwood. No further information is obtainable. A coroner from town was telegraphed for, and if the circumstances warrant it, an inquest will be held.

Belleghem's New Buildings and Extended Business.

Ready for a Vigorous Campaign—Complete Manufacturing Facilities and Extended Warerooms.

During the time that Mr. D. Belleghem has been conducting the furniture business in Peterborough his watch-word has been progress, and yearly his trade and facilities have shown remarkable improvement. This summer the expansion of his business has made it necessary to greatly enlarge his premises and manufacturing facilities. This has been done by an addition to his factory premises in rear of his warerooms. He has covered his lot to its fullest extent northward. The extension to his workshops is a new building of solid brick, 28 x 40. This, which is continuous with the former structure, makes his factory of the size of 78 feet by 90 feet, three stories in height.

On the first floor of this is the engine room and boiler space and the drying kilns, heated by the exhaust steam. A splendid new Corliss engine of 30 horse power, made by Cowan & Co., Galt, is the perfection of mechanical elegance and excellence, and is fully equal to running the extensive woodworking machinery on the second floor of the factory building, including all the most modern and improved machinery required in the trade.

The third floor of the factory is used for the upholstering and finishing departments of furniture manufacturing. In the upholstering a specialty is made, and parties leaving orders for upholstering may rely upon securing the very best work which skilled workmen and first-class materials can conjointly produce.

Not only had Mr. Belleghem's manufacturing business outgrown his facilities, but his had become too limited for his trade. The large floor space of 7500 square feet contained in the three flooring of his main building, proving inadequate the addition of another story to his residence adjoining gave 1500 additional square feet.

This new space will be devoted exclusively to the undertaking department of his business and there will be found a most complete and elegant a stock of casket robes and every other funeral requisite.

Now the wareroom floor space, consists of over 9000 square feet. The first and second floors will be devoted to the display of finished furniture of high art design, of all kinds, including drawing room, parlour, bedroom and dressing room suites, of every range of price. The immense stock thus displayed gives unlimited chance for selection.

The third floor of the warerooms building will be devoted chiefly to surplus stock, that is when the public will allow Belleghem to have any surplus stock. For so active has been the demand for some time past, that it has been exceedingly difficult in the matter of stock to fulfil the law of supply and demand.

The recent improvements made will add completeness to Mr. Belleghem's commercial and manufacturing facilities. In the matter of ordered work especially will the improvement be felt. In the recent past he has felt the embarrassment arising from inability to fulfil his engagements for ordered work with as much promptitude as he wished. But this state of things is past now. With a factory doubled in size, with increased machinery and a large staff of workmen, he can guarantee, with confidence, the prompt execution of any and every contract for ordered work submitted to him.

In all respects, Belleghem is now more fully than ever equipped for doing the furniture trade of the district. He has won the confidence of the public. He has been a liberal user of printers' ink, and his advertising has been the more effectual because he has kept his promises in respect of the assertions made in reference to his goods. He still continues the same policy, and now, with increased facilities, the public may continue their patronage with increased confidence.

Nearly a Drowning Accident.

Yesterday afternoon while the children of the West Ward School were enjoying their recess, Gussie and Fred Mathias, daughter and son of the late Mrs. Toker, and Ida Hill, adopted daughter of Mrs. E. C. Hill, went to Whites dam to sail on a raft, on which numbers of the pupils of the school have been accustomed to float over the surface of the pond. By some means or other the children were precipitated into the water at a point where it was about six feet deep. Several of the children who saw the accident informed Mr. McCreary who hurried to the rescue. Fred Mathias got ashore in safety, and Gussie Mathias managed to regain his position on the raft, and with great presence of mind paddled it toward the spot where Ida Hill went down and made several efforts to grasp her companion. Mr. McCreary plunged into the water and succeeding in rescuing both girls, one of whom, Ida Hill, was in an unconscious condition, she having been under water several times. All were taken home. Little Miss Matthias and her brother are doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances, but Ida Hill is yet very low.

NOONDAY RIOTING.

THE POLICE AT BELFAST BETWEEN TWO FIRES.

BELFAST, Sept. 21.—Desultory rioting accompanied by firing occurred throughout the night. During the night two policemen were severely wounded. A number of citizens also were wounded, but how many is not officially known, because the friends of many of them carried them away. Twenty arrests were made during the night. The Catholics evince a more bitter spirit against the police and soldiers. The appearance of a single constable in one of the troubled districts last night was greeted with a volley of stones. The aspect of affairs this morning is threatening and more fighting is expected.

Rioting was renewed at dinner time at the Junction of Northumberland-street and the False-road by the Catholic mill hands stoning the police on duty to keep the Orangemen of Quinn's Island shipyard from coming in contact with mill hands. The stoning was so heavy and skillful that the police had to retreat as far as Shankhill. Here they were reinforced and they drove the mob back, capturing a number on the way. While this battle was going on another mob in a different locality attacked with stones the Black Watch regiment of Welshmen, although the soldiers were fully armed and in fighting array. The troops, with fixed bayonets, charged in double quick time on the mob and drove them from the scene, wounding a great number of the rioters and arresting two. Still another mob got into the light in the tram car stable, and surging out into the street threw a passing car from the track and overturned it. The car was at the time filled with passengers. The mob that overturned this car evidently had not intended to do it. They were fighting purely religiously, but the locality was infested with rowdies drawn thither by the riot, and when these loafers saw the car upside down and filled with people they fusiladed with stones. The terror-stricken passengers crowded close under the seats and shielded themselves as best they could with the floor mats and seat cushions. Several were hurt. Their situation was dreadful until the military rescued them and escorted them to a place of safety.

The funeral cortege of a man named Boyle while returning from the cemetery to-day was attacked by a mob, who assailed the mourners with stones. The military charged on the mob and arrested a score of the rioters. In the melee the colonel in command of the troops was badly hurt. At midnight the city was quiet.

TRIENNIAL CONCLAVE.

The Knights Templar Procession at St. Louis Stopped by Rain.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 21.—The twenth-third triennial conclave of the Knights Templar of America opened its session to-day. The city was handsomely decorated. Heavy rain began at 8 o'clock and while the divisions were forming for parade the rain storm became still more violent and the parade had to be abandoned. Twenty thousand men broke ranks and dispersed very greatly disappointed. The stiff gale which accompanied the rain storm made sad havoc with the decorations. The sessions of the conclave began at 12.30.

The report of Grand Master Withers, after reciting routine proceedings, refers to the questions at issue with the Great Priory of Canada, which was finally referred to a special committee appointed to-day. Following the report of Grand Master Withers, General Rooms of New York, Deputy and Acting Grand Master, submitted a report of his stewardship, extending from May 12, 1885, up to the present time. The report discusses the Canada question mentioned in Grand Master Withers' report, and insists upon it that the Scotch encampments ante-date the Sovereign Grand Priory, and that they are, therefore, not bound to be governed by it. He recommends that the present encampment make no effort to try to bring about a settlement of that question.

BULGARIA'S BOLDNESS.

Russia Practically Told That There is a Limit to Her Presumption.

SOFIA, Sept. 21.—The Bulgarian Government, replying to Russia's note, says that the trial of the revolutionary conspirators has been delayed until the arrival of Gen. Kaulbars. The Government cannot stop the course of justice. It has no fear that the trial will jeopardize the peace of the country, which notes such as Russia presented might do. If the Russian agent desires to know the progress of the trial he can obtain the desired information in the same way as the agents of other powers.

The committee appointed to examine into and report upon the circumstances of the recent coup d'etat have concluded their investigations. They pronounce MM. Karaveloff, Mitkoff and Zinkoff jointly criminally responsible for the affair, and recommend that all three be suspended from Parliamentary immunity. The Sobranje at its next meeting will decide what further steps, if any, shall be taken against the three declared conspirators.

Got the Ground Hog but Lost His Hand.

BUSHVILLE, Pa., Sept. 18. The rodent teeth of a woodchuck are very long and very sharp, and when they close on anything, the nose of a dog for instance, they lock together in a peculiar manner. William Jobes of this place was out hunting woodchucks yesterday. He shot one as it sat sunning itself at the mouth of its burrow. The shot tumbled the animal over. Jobes picked up what he supposed was his dead game, but the woodchuck was not yet dead. It grabbed the hunter by the hand and sent its teeth into it until they met and locked. Jobes tried to get the woodchuck loose but could not and the animal died in that position, making the lock still more closely set. Jobes was obliged to walk three miles before he came to a house where the jaws of the animal were cut and the hand released. The hand was frightfully lacerated and swollen, and it will have to be amputated at the wrist.

Charleston Still Shocking.

CHARLESTON, S.C., Sept. 21.—Three shocks of earthquake occurred in Charleston last night and early this morning. The shock at 5.39 a.m. was quite sharp and caused houses to rattle uncomfortably. There was no general alarm, but a good many persons ran out of their houses into the streets and remained there. At Summerville there were three shocks between 4.25 and 4.30.

Twin Girls Joined Together.

WALNUT HILL, Ark., Sept. 21.—Twin girls were born Aug. 31 to one John Williams and wife, living near this place. They were grown together from the sternum downward a distance of six inches. They weighed eleven pounds. The integument passed uninterruptedly from one to the other. With this exception they were very natural. One lived only an hour, and the other twenty-four. The mother's weight is 250 pounds.

IRISH BILL BEATEN.

THE GOVERNMENT SUSTAINED BY NINETY-FIVE MAJORITY.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Lord Randolph Churchill in the House of Commons this afternoon, replying to questions said that in the event of trouble arising in Bulgaria which, however, he did not apprehend, the British Government would act constitutionally and advise the Crown to act as in their opinion would be best calculated to protect the interests of the Empire.

Mr. John Morley resumed the debate on the second reading of the Parnell Land Bill. He thought, he said, that Mr. Parnell in his speech last night had proved his case in regard to the fall in prices of Irish farm products. Mr. Morley contended that the bill provided better machinery and a better method of answering the Government's own question as to the necessity of relieving the Irish country in some form than would the appointment of any Royal Commission. He also believed that the landlords of Ireland, and not for the first time in their history, were making a grievous mistake in allowing the bill to be rejected. [Irish cheers.]

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Chief Secretary for Ireland, stated that the Government commission to inquire into the working of the Land Act of 1881 would consist of Earl Cowper, chairman; Earl Milltown, Sir James Caird, Judge O'Hagan and George Fottrell.

Mr. Morley, continuing, said if it was true that the inability of the tenants to pay rent was due to the excessive use of whisky, or subscriptions to the league, it would be easy to insert an amendment requiring the tenant to show a satisfactory cause of his inability to pay rent, rendering dishonesty impossible. The vicious land system in Ireland prevented tenants from reaping the fruits of their industry. He would vote for Mr. Parnell's bill because he believed it would create a smooth and calm interval between the sessions, and enable Parliament to consider the Irish question generally.

Mr. Chaplin, Conservative, opposed the bill. He taunted Messrs. Gladstone and Morley with again using the argument of fear. The Parnell bill was the most impudent proposal ever submitted to Parliament.

Lord Hartington regretted that he was unable to support Mr. Gladstone's conclusions. He said there was little doubt that the time had arrived for a full inquiry into the agrarian question in Ireland and the Government were about to institute such an inquiry. Yet, pending this investigation, Mr. Gladstone was prepared to take action on Mr. Parnell's bill in a way in which only last August he (Mr. Gladstone) argued would be unfair. [Cheers.] The existing judicial rents were fixed during a period of great depression and it had not yet been proved that the land courts had failed to make due allowance for the state of things that had arisen since that time. Parliament would incur a great responsibility if it neglected the Government's proposals for the preservation of order, as such action would encourage socialist and communistic ideas in the interest of a certain class of persons. [Cheers.] The late Government, he continued, had not ventured to suggest temporary relief measures for Ireland. Its whole action had been entirely opposed to the idea that judicial rents were not properly fixed. Lord Hartington failed to see that any case had been made out which would justify interference with judicial rents. The bill did not deserve the assent of the House. It offered a temptation to tenants to withhold half their rents and debarred landlords from recovering their rightful dues. It was without precedent, and totally dissimilar to previous bills which embodied that bad principle. Since 1880 the position of the tenant had enormously improved and he now possessed every protection against eviction or harsh action on the part of the landlord.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach said he thought there was a certain want of reality about the discussion. He was puzzled to account for the silence of the Parnellites and contended that they could not believe that the case for the bill had been made out. He declared that the bill, if passed, would not be received in the south and west of Ireland as a temporary measure. It would permanently upset the settlement effected by the Land Act of 1881. Nothing had been said about the fall of prices until the rejection of the Home Rule Bill. Prices were rising at the present moment. The statistics regarding evictions were misleading. The increase in the number of evictions was no proof of the inability of the tenants to pay their rents. He believed that the total number of evictions in 1885 did not exceed three in two thousand tenants. There was scope for an inquiry into the whole matter. Upon the announcement of the result of the Royal Commission's inquiry the Government would submit proposals to the House during the next session. The position of affairs in Ireland was such that the Government might be obliged to ask Parliament to deal with the question earlier than usual. [Cheers.] But the Government would not buy peace by doing injustice or by blackmail. In conclusion, he said the discussion of Mr. Parnell's proposals was an act of gross injustice to Irish landlords. Sir Wm. Vernon Harcourt said he thought the House and country would notice the alarming tone of defiance and menace with which the Chief Secretary for Ireland embarked on his mission of peace. Lord Hartington, continued the speaker, was alone to-night, like the last rose of summer. [Laughter.] Where were his companions? Where was Mr. Chamberlain? The House had heard one Birmingham member (Mr. Matthews), where were the others? Upon this great and critical question what was the voice of Birmingham? Why had she spoken with only one voice, and that through a Tory minister? [Cheers, and counter cheers.] The Liberal union did not seem to be much of a Liberal union after all. The Liberal party would follow its old policy and do what it could to avert the great dangers which the policy of the Government threatened.

Mr. Parnell's Land Bill was rejected by a vote of 297 to 202.

Opinions of the Press.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The Daily News fears that Sir Michael Hicks-Beach's speech in the House of Commons last night portends an early summoning of Parliament to pass a coercion bill. Parliament will be prorogued on Friday.

The Daily Telegraph thinks that to compel the Ministers to come to Parliament for a new Crimes Act would at present suit the Parnellites' book less than that of any other party in the kingdom.

Pleuro-Pneumonia in a Distillery.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—Schufeldt's distillery was quarantined yesterday to prevent the spread of pleuro-pneumonia among cattle. There are 865 cows fed in this distillery, and seven pronounced cases of the disease. A rigid inspection of all the distilleries will be kept up. Three thousand cattle are now under quarantine.

It now looks as if it would be necessary to slaughter the 3000 cattle at the distilleries. Such animals as are found untainted with the disease can be disposed of for beef and those touched in the slightest degree will be sent at once to the rendering establishment.

BEACH'S VIC

The Australian Tells How He Got There on Saturday Last.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Champion Beach was found on Sunday looking somewhat worse than he did when he left his boat Saturday, though he said he didn't feel a bit the worse for his hard pull. He said:

"I feel all right now, but I had a stiff fight. I never rowed a faster race in my life, and as for hard work, why, it was the hardest race to win that I was ever engaged in. I tell you, frankly, I don't want to row another like it."

"How do you account for breaking up twice in the race, after rowing the race you did with Teemer?"

"Simply because Gaudaur rowed me harder than anyone else has ever done."

"Then you weren't shamming?"

"No, by Jove, I was winded; pretty badly the first time and very badly the second time. But when I caught my wind and found that I could go on I rowed for all that was in me and went in to win. You may take my word for it that I don't want another race like that. It rowed me out of wind as no other race ever did before. Gaudaur is a far better man than Teemer. He is the best man and the gamest puller I ever met."

"Were you at all out of condition before the race?"

"I was never in better condition in my life. The pace nearly killed me, and twice I thought I had lost the race."

"Would you like to row Gaudaur another race?"

"I will row Gaudaur or any one else that comes to Australia, but when I have finished with Ross I won't row any more in England. Even a match with Hanlan, if such a thing were possible, wouldn't tempt me."

Later I met Hanen, Gaudaur's trainer, who said:

"We sail from Liverpool on Tuesday in the steamer Scythia. I agree with Mr. St. John that Gaudaur could beat Beach three miles with a turn on an American lake, and I think under different circumstances from those of yesterday he can beat him on running water. Gaudaur's defeat was owing to the fact that he had too little time to prepare for the race. If he could have had another fortnight for training the tables would have been turned. He came down in weight too suddenly, and the atmosphere being unsuited to him he couldn't stand it. If Hanlan is in his old form the race between him and Gaudaur will be very close. When Beach stopped rowing the second time on Saturday he was on the point of giving up, but his pilot, Tom Green, urged him on, saying there were signs that Gaudaur was nearly done."

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1886.

ACTION CALLED FOR.

Owing to the fact that the mouth of the Otonabee river is almost completely blocked with slabs, sawdust, and other refuse, the steamers Golden-Eye and Whistlewing of the Calcutt line have been compelled to tie up, and now lie in idleness at their wharves. This is a very serious loss to the owner of these crafts, and a serious inconvenience to the public. The period of the fall exhibitions is on, in which the steamers would reap a rich harvest, and the public would gladly avail themselves of the travelling facilities afforded by these crafts. This state of things should not be allowed. In all well regulated Canadian communities nothing but the formation of ice puts a stop to the season of navigation, and that a line of steamers should, through obstructions such as those noted, be compelled to supend navigation operations at least two months before ice, is exceedingly vexatious to the public and detrimental to the interests of steamboat owners. Steps should at once be taken by the Government to remedy this evil. An appropriation should be made, sufficiently liberal to admit of the river being dredged, so as to make it navigable. It does not certainly speak very strongly in favor of the interest of the Dominion Government in the Trent Valley Navigation scheme, that, instead of opening up new sections to contract, they should allow formerly navigable waters to become obstructed and closed to navigation. The duty of the Government is plain. Immediate action must be taken. Private rights and public interests cannot be allowed to be sacrificed to Governmental neglect. As far as local interests are concerned, the urgency would warrant the appropriation, by Order-in-Council, of a sufficient amount to do the dredging required.

Sir John and the Methodists.

How the Premier's Visit Appears to an Eastern Conservative Methodist.

TO THE METHODISTS OF CANADA.

I notice by recent despatches that Sir J. Macdonald addressed the Conference at Toronto recently.

Perhaps a few thought it was an honor to the Conference; I beg to give it as my opinion that the Conference humiliated itself. If I am told that Sir John Macdonald is a great man, I reply that I know, and almost everyone believes, him to be as unprincipled, as dishonest, and as evil as he is great. As a matter of courtesy, a worldly assembly may stultify itself in that way, but not the church of the Living God.

We all know the "tricks" of this man through all his history, and this was one of his last very thin tricks to hold the slipping reins of power. What did Sir John Macdonald want prowling about the General Conference of the Methodist Church? Nothing but to get votes!

The old trickster! Did he talk of the "Indians and missions" in the presence of Rev. John MacDougall, whom his lieutenant, the Hon. Thos. White, and the man he placed as leader in his absence, Sir Hector Langevin, maligned and slandered on the floor of the House of Commons last session? But I do not wonder at his impudence; it is characteristic. Did he apologize to our missionary? Not a bit of it. But I suppose the Conference swallowed his words. Not all. And our people will no more swallow him.

How about the "temperance question?" All our Conferences requested this man to sustain the Scott Act in its entirety. And he, and all his Ministers save two, and all his followers save 34, went against it, and in favor of "Small's amendment." Did he apologize or explain?

Will the General Conference speak out on this and other vital questions touching the morals of the country as the General Assembly did, such as the Seduction Law, emasculated by the Senate, and sneeringly kicked out of the House in the session of 1885 by this same "visitor" at the conference? Will they speak on the "Sabbath Question," so insultingly treated by Mr. Chapleau? I think they will, notwithstanding that Sir John Macdonald sneaked in and got a hearing. He will get no votes, and, they are all he wants, of the Methodist.

Does the Conference know that only last winter one of their own disabled brethren, who had sought to eke out a living by writing at Ottawa, was put out of a snug place, which he had dearly earned, and his place given to a friend of one of the threatening bolters from Quebec? And, when besought for justice, Sir John Macdonald, who prowls about and gets a chance to canvas the General Conference of the Methodist church, only insulted this Methodist minister.

But the Methodists of Canada—1,000,000 people and 200,000 voters, and to whom we have much to say anon—will remember all these things at the next general election.

If anyone wants to know me, the editor of the Globe will forward any communication, and I will show that I know whereof I affirm, and that I have been a Conservative for 50 years.

OPENING OF THE PROVINCIAL.

A Busy Day at Guelph—The Association More Fortunate Than in 1883.

GUELPH, Sept. 22.—This was the opening day of the 41st Provincial Exhibition. The attendance was large for a beginning. At present it is impossible to give the number of entries, but there is no doubt whatever that they will be considerably larger than when the Provincial was held here in 1883. In addition to the accommodation then provided for cattle, it was found necessary to erect seventy stalls more, and it is doubtful if these will be enough. Everything will be in readiness to-morrow. As far as exhibits are concerned the exhibition will be one of the best that has been held by the association for a long time, and should the weather prove favorable it will be equally so financially.

Yesterday morning a heavy rain fell, which looked bad for the success of the exhibition with reference to numbers, but this morning the weather cleared up. It was rather threatening this afternoon. By evening everything on the grounds was in good shape. To-morrow the judges on all classes but live stock will commence their duties. The fair will last till Friday evening.

Hon. Thomas White Suing the "Post."

An action for $10,000 damages has been entered in the Superior Court by the Hon. Thos. White against Mr. J. P. Whelan, on account of an article published in the Post, some time ago, and alleged to contain libellous statements.

Use the Old and Reliable.

Catarrh destroys the sense of smell, taste and hearing, rapidly becomes offensive, and often culminates in Consumption and insanity. No matter what stage the disease has advanced to, Dr. Sage's Catharrh Remedy will certainly cure it. This preparation is the only sure cure for this malady in the market yet has many indicators. Others may help; it never does. Your druggists sell it. 6d61w38

Rothschilds Opinion.

A National Evil.

There is no question but that Dyspepsia is the national disease of our country, and when complicated with diseases of the Liver and Kidneys is the cause of untold misery. Burdock Blood Bitters will almost invariably cure the worst case known. 7w36

Of Vital Importance

It is just as important that the human body should have pure blood, as that a tree or plant should have to say nourish and invigorate its growth. Nearly all our bodily ills arise from unhealthy blood. Burdock Blood Bitters purifies this fountain of life, and regulates all the vital organs to a healthy action. 2w38

A Word of Explanation.

The liver secrets bile to move the bowles; the kidneys secrete urine to carry off uric acid, which would poison the blood; the stomach secretes gastric juice to digest or dissolve the food, etc. Burdock Blood Bitters acts upon these organs and purifies the blood by cleansing all the secretions of the system. 2w38

—OF—
RIVERDALE PARK
BETTER KNOWN AS
Crawford's Grove, Monaghan.

I have received instructions from ALFRED CRAWFORD, ESQ., to sell by Public Auction

On Wednesday, Sept. the 29th,

that very eligible property known as "Riverdale Park," situated on the banks of the Otonabee River, formerly well known as Crawford's Grove, and situated in the Township of North Monaghan and containing 73 acres. This property will be offered en bloc, and if not thus sold, will be offered in parcels or park lots as laid out in a plan by Mr. Ranney, which can be seen at any time.

This property is only two miles from the business centre of the Town of Peterborough. It can be laid out either for a summer park, pic-nic grounds or summer residence resort, its situation being admirably adapted for these purposes. An excellent opportunity is here offered for building summer cottages. Business men in town can domicile their families at the park, attend to their business by the day, and spend the evenings with their families—thus enjoying the delights of country life without neglecting business. No more beautiful park lots could be obtained than those contained in this property. The soil is composed of a sharp rich loam top, with clay bottom, possessing excellent virtues for garden purposes. Its proximity to the Otonabee River affords ample opportunity for pleasure or boating, camping, fishing and other recreations.

which adjoins the above property to the north, will also be offered at the same time. It is composed of about 13 acres of excellent land, on which there is a good Brick Dwelling House, outbuildings and water privileges. It has a road on two sides, and the river on its front. It may be sold en bloc, or in three parcels—extending from the road to the river.

TERMS.—Ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid down at the time of sale, and sufficient to make one-third in ten days thereafter, when title deeds will be prepared, and a further sum, together with the above, sufficient to make one-half and interest, to be paid in one year from day of sale; the balance in three equal annual instalments, with interest at six per cent per annum.

☞ Further particulars and conditions will be made known at time of sale, or may be had on application to Mr. A. P. Poussette or Mr. A. Crawford, Proprietor.

Sale to take place on the premises and to commence at two o'clock p.m., sharp.

"Enjoying yourself pretty well, it seems to me. You do right. No good in kicking when you can only hurt yourself by it. Be civil and quiet and you won't be kept so long perhaps as you suppose where you are now. I came to see if you would like some dinner."

"Dinner!" I said. "I thought the meat you left for me was intended for my dinner; and I really found it very good." Seeing that I had given up for the present the thought of trying violence, I felt it better to keep up in his presence the air of philosophic coolness which I had adopted for my own comfort.

"No; lunch," he replied, contentiously. "You'll have good victuals here if you only behave yourself. If you give me your promise to keep quiet, I'll bring you your dinner as soon as it is ready."

I hesitated for a moment, troubled by the thought of keeping any terms with such a ruffian, but then I somewhat sullenly gave him the promise he asked. He immediately disappeared.

In about half an hour he returned, and, throwing open the door, entered with a tray, which he balanced as the ship rolled as cleverly as a steward on board a Cunard liner could have done. In a surprisingly short space of time he had cleared away the remains of my morning meal, and had laid upon the table a dinner such as few captives, I venture to say, are indulged with.

"Ship's rolling too much for me to bring you any soup; but there's fish and cutlets and partridge, cheese and celery, and a pint of champagne. Life as good a dinner, I bet, as you would have got in Bearborough."

"Very good, indeed, I am sure. It is of no use, I suppose, asking you, Mr. Flinter, why I am here;" he shook his head; "but at least you might tell me where I am going."

"No use asking questions," he responded, shortly. "Because why: I never answer 'em. So that's plain. But if you keep quiet, as I've told you already, you shall be as well served with food and drink as if you were the old man himself. Now is there anything more you want?"

"I should like a book to read."

"A book! Oh, yes; if that is all, you shall soon have a book. Bless me, I'll bring you an armful the next time I come, if only it will keep you quiet."

He left me to partake of my dinner in solitude. I did justice to it, and despite my unpleasant situation and my dislike, not to say dread, of the ruffian who was responsible for my imprisonment, I felt almost cheerful when he presently returned, carrying nearly a dozen volumes in his arms, in addition to some blankets for my use during the night.

"There's books for you!" he said, tumbling them in a pile on the chest of drawers. "Make what you can of them; they're nothing in my line."

And right eagerly did I avail myself of his invitation to do so when I was once more left alone. It was true that I was disappointed with Mr. Flinter's choice in literary matters. One of his volumes was a list of the Royal Yacht Squadron, two more were works relating to the art of navigation, a fourth was nothing more than a series of tables of logarithms, a fifth was an odd volume of that venerable work, "Russell's History of Modern Europe;" then there was a well-thumbed copy of "Buchan's Domestic Medicine," a dictionary, a copy of Thomas Moore's poems, and, last of all in the pile, Guy and Ferrier's "Forensic Medicine."

It was this book which, though it was at the bottom of the heap, attracted me first. It did so partly because it was the only work which had a modern appearance in the collection, and partly because my own medical studies had given me an interest in it. The rest of the books were old and battered. I could not imagine how they had been introduced into such a palace as the Golden Hawk. The copy of "Forensic Medicine" was in good preservation, and was evidently the latest edition of that standard work.

I took it into my hands and turned to the title page. It was the edition, I saw, of 1878. The binding was quite new, and the pages were clean. The book apparently had hardly been opened. I was holding it lightly in my hand while I speculated as to how such a volume chanced to have come here, when I found that it had opened, almost, as it seemed to me, of its own accord, at a particular page. I knew in a moment what had happened. When the volume was first bought it had evidently been opened at this page, and the reader, whoever he might be, wishing to keep it open there, had bent the stiff new back in such a way as to make something like a spring of it—a spring which, when the volume was held in a certain way, caused it always to open at one particular place. Any of my readers who cares to destroy the outward appearance of a new book may by a simple experiment satisfy himself of the possibility of doing this.

What was the subject which the person, who had apparently looked at no other part of the volume, had been studying?

I glanced carelessly down at the printed page, and the first word I saw was "Strychnia." Strychnia, poison! Wild thoughts shot instantaneously through my brain. I saw that the chapter which some one had been studying with the closest care—for the pages were well thumbed—was that in which the whole subject of poisoning by means of strychnia, the symptoms, the dose, the fatal period, and the post mortem appearances are treated with masterly precision.

What did it mean? Let my reader place himself in my position, a prisoner absolutely at the mercy of a man whom I honestly believed to be capable of any crime, if he wished to understand the dark and terrible fancies which forthwith took possession of my brain. Who could have bought this book merely in order to study the subject of poisoning by strychnia with an innocent intention? That was the first question I asked myself. Once more I remembered the awful words of Gregson. Was it possible that murder was really about to be done at Great Lorton Hall? Nay, as the man whom I knew to be the only one likely to commit such a crime was on board the Golden Hawk at this moment, might it not be the case that the crime had already been committed, and that while he was flying from justice he had carried me with him to prevent my being of any service to Daisy or her uncle? And if there had been murder, who was the victim? Was it the millionaire? Or was it—could it be—my darling?

I sat dazed and helpless for a time under the horror of this new train of thought. But I was now face to face with a problem which demanded the full use of all my faculties. If I were to deal with it to any useful purpose, I must treat it with all the coolness and deliberation of which I was capable. Gently closing the book, I flung my cigar aside, and going to the bath room bathed my head in the cool, refreshing water of which there was apparently an unlimited supply. Then I came back to my seat and carefully tried an experiment which had occurred to me.

Laying the closed book on its back on the palm of my hand I allowed it again to fall open at its own will. Once more it opened at page 592, and again I read that first sentence of the page, which describes how "The patient complains of a choking sensation, and of thirst and dryness of the throat; but the effort to drink often occasions rigid spasms of the muscles of the jaw. Sometimes there is foaming at the mouth, and the froth may be tinged with blood," etc., etc.

I repeated the experiment in another manner; the result was the same. I tried it again and again, and always the volume opened at the same page. Yes, it was quite clear to me now that the owner of this book had bought it for the simple purpose of studying the subject of poisoning by means of strychnia. All the pages of this volume, it is true, were cut open, but it was only at this part of it that there were any of those unmistakable signs which showed that it had been read and studied with care again and again.

I read the whole chapter through with attention, and it says something, I think, for my command over my own nerves that I did not forthwith fancy that I was myself suffering from that "feeling of suffocation" which is described as the earliest symptom after the poison has been swallowed. For I could not drive out of my mind the possibility that this accidental discovery might have the deepest personal interest for myself. If I had fallen into the hands of a murderer, what assurance had I that he might not try his frightful arts upon me? The thought was one that it was difficult to face with composure. I began to realise what is the lot of the captive who lies in peril of his life, and who is powerless to defend himself against the unknown doom which may be hanging over him.

Terrible was the long night through which I now passed. The gale had evidently risen to a great height; and the motion of the vessel was such as to be distressing even to the most experienced of sailors. In place of the dead silence of the morning my prison cell was now filled with that indescribable tumult of sound that marks the progress of a battle between a good vessel and a raging sea. I could hear the shriek of the wind and the roar of the waves, while, even above these sounds rose that constant groaning and creaking of the straining timbers which showed how hardly the ship was beset by the storm. I could feel too the fury of the blows which each successive wave delivered against the side of the yacht. A storm at sea is an awful thing to the landsman at the best of times. Let my reader try if he can conceive what this storm was to me—held like a rat in a trap in the middle of the laboring vessel.

Yet despite my fears and the tumult all around me, I slept, and my sleep was strangely free from those hideous dreams of which I had been apprehensive. When I awoke at last the bright light of the electric lamp had disappeared, and some faint rays from the outer sky were entering my cabin through the funnel which served the purpose of a window. I looked at my watch and discovered that it was nine o'clock. To my great joy, too, I found that the sea had fallen, and that the yacht was making comparatively steady progress through the waters.

It is no part of my purpose to inflict the whole story of my imprisonment upon the reader. Nothing, indeed, could be more monotonous—or more terrible in its monotony—than the manner in which my days were passed. Thrice during this second day I was visited by Flinter, bringing food. I hardly spoke to him, and he made no attempt to open a conversation with me. I was still absorbed in an attempt to put together the various pieces of that strange puzzle, the first bit of which that had been put into my hands was my meeting with Daisy and Gregson at the York railway station, and the last the discovery of the passage on strychnia in the work on forensic medicine. That there was some strange unity of significance in all that had happened to me since I first saw my darling was a conviction that was slowly forcing itself upon my mind. Never before in my peaceful life had I been even remotely associated with anything in the nature of a mystery, but now for some weeks I had been literally dwelling in the midst of mysteries. Hour after hour passed while I tried to hit upon some key which should make the whole strange and jumbled story plain. But I labored in vain. There was only one point of which in my heart of hearts I was as certain as of my own existence. That was that, come what might, nothing could ever be revealed which would cast a shadow of shame upon the name of the girl whom I loved.

Undoubted Security.

The British Empire Mutual Life, Policy Holders, will be pleased to know that it has deposited in the hands of the Government, of the Dominion of Canada, $160 of assets for every $100 of liabilities. Nearly a Big Blaze.

When the engineer of the Peterborough Central Iron Works went to work this morning, he was surprised at finding the flooring in front of the boiler furnace on fire, a hole about two feet across having been burnt. He extinguished the fire with little difficulty. It is supposed to have resulted from a spark from the furnace. Had it blazed up in the night, an extensive and costly blaze would have been the result.

The Dead Man Identified.

The body of the man found alongside of the C. P. R. track, half a mile west of Havelock, on Tuesday morning, was identified as that of George Clancy, of Cobourg, a brakeman on the C. P. R. Coroner Dr. Bell went down to Norwood yesterday afternoon, but as every indication pointed out that Clancy met his death by accidentally falling from the train, no inquest was held.

Market Items.

On the market this morning only a moderate quantity of produce was offered, and sold slowly. Prices were about the same as Saturday, and were quoted :—Butter 18 to 20c.; eggs, 12 to 14c.; chickens, 40 to 60c.; ducks, per brace, 75c.; potatoes, 60c. per bag; tomatoes, 80c. per bushel; cabbages, 30 to 50c. per dozen; corn, 10c. per doz.; apples, 60 to 80c. per bag; crab apples, 20c. per peck; pears, 40c. per peck.

Aid from Seaforth.

By a report in the London Advertiser of the proceedings of a convention of temperance workers held in Seaforth, it is seen that "the sum of $20 was voted to the Peterborough Scott Act Association to assist in defraying the expenses of an appeal against Judge Galt's decision." The decision referred to is doubtless that of Mr. Justice Galt in in the case of Daly Bros., in which it will be recollected that he decided that a defendant in a case of breach of the Scott Act was not a compellable witness—not compelled to give evidence which might incriminate himself.

Y. M. C. A. Conference.

The programme for Thursday afternoon will be as follows: "The Importance of Personal Work," paper by W. McCulloch, Toronto; "Evangelistic Meetings for Young Men Only," opened by T. J. Wilkie, Toronto; "Ladies' Work in Our Associations," paper by G. A. Kuhring, Ottawa.

County Judge's Criminal Court.

On Wednesday, two cases came before His Honor Judge Weller, at the sittings of this court without a jury. The first charge, that of Queen vs. Nelson Parks, charging the defendant with shooting, with intent, was adjourned for a week to enable defendant to procure witnesses and prepare for his defence. The second case was Queen vs. Tutin Newall (of Norwood), charged with larceny of a two year's colt from Samuel Newhall, of Asphodel. After hearing evidence for the prosecution, His Honor found the defendant "not guilty," and he was accordingly discharged. He had been in jail for a week. Mr. E. H. D. Hall, on behalf of Mr. H. E. Wood, appeared for the Crown, and Mr. W. H. Moore defended the accused.

Young People's Industrial.

A Splendid Exhibition of Fancy, Useful, Ornamental and Curious Articles, Made by the Young People of the George Street Methodist Church, under the Management of the Ladies Aid Society.

The Industrial Exhibition under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the George Street, Methodist Church, which has been engaging the attention of the young people for weeks past, was held in the drill shed on Tuesday afternoon and evening, and the most sanguine expectations of the promoters were more than realized in the success attending the affair. The exhibit which consisted of useful and ornamental articles in ladies fancy work, fine arts, mechanical work, etc., all the productions of the young people of the church, and curious articles, etc., gathered by some of their members was an exceeding fine one and reflected great credit upon the young people, for their enterprise, ingenuity and skill.

About five o'clock in the afternoon the exhibition was opened, and immediately visitors began to assemble eager to see what was to be seen and to partake of the excellent tea provided by the ladies. In the centre of the shed the articles on exhibition were artistically arranged on a monster table, with an extensive upright centre-board for advantageously showing pictures, fancy articles, etc. Along the western side of the building tea tables were arranged, loaded with edibles, while from the orderly rooms ascended the savory odor of coffee and tea, under construction. Again in the most conspicuous places, fruit, flower and candy tables, presided over by good-looking girls, had great attractions for the male visitors.

From six o'clock till ten a gay sight was presented. Scores of hungry people continually refreshed themselves at the tables, while hundreds of others walked around the building viewing the many interesting objects displayed, or occasionally in small groups promenaded around to the sweet music of the Fire Brigade band.

To describe all the exhibits worthy of mention would take columns, and the reader, if he or she did not visit the exhibition, is referred to the subjoined prize list for an idea of what they missed by not attending the exhibition. The following is the prize list:—

SPECIALS.

Among the curiosities were shown some ancient articles, which, though they did not take prizes, were accorded considerable attention. Among these were a Chinese testament and Zulu bracelets, the latter taken from a Zulu chief during the Zulu war, by Mr. R. Cornish, of Lindsay; also a collection of southern reptiles in alcohol, shown by Mr. J. Nugent. A cushion and tidy made by a gentleman were also among the curiosities.

A patch-work quilt made by Miss Allen, containing 12,755 pieces, was of great interest to the ladies, as was also an ancient quilt made 80 years ago by a girl of 14 years old, and other quilts, crazy and otherwise, of from 9,000 to 4,000 pieces.

The exact amount of the proceeds is not yet known, but it is expected that over $100 will be added to the organ fund.

The "British Empire" Still in the Ascendant.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

SIR,—In reply to a communication marked "advertisement" in your paper of the 9th Sept., inst., signed by one, F. S. Grist, with the comprehensive heading of the "British Empire Overhauled," (a fancied prelude to its downfall) in which he attempts to explain an advertisement of the company I represent here, published in the ordinary way, giving the results of profits, etc., believed by us to be correct and fair.

This gentleman's "opening address" is prefaced by a sneering reference to this office as being a "small life company." However small the British Empire may be in comparison to the larger figures of its American competitor, its assets invested in Canadian securities are, and always will be, larger than those of the Mutual Life of New York. Its funds are invested in Canadian bonds and debentures, and on mortgages in the same way that any other Canadian company would invest in Canada, while the deposit and reserve placed in the hands of the Canadian Government by the Mutual Life can only consist of American securities. This, I think, is the main point to be taken into consideration by Canadian insurers. The British Empire invests the whole of its earnings for the Canadian branch in this country, as well as large sums from England, whilst the Mutual Life's object is to take every dollar that it can possibly get out of the country. With regard to the language used by Mr. Grist, it is not worthy of notice from such a source, as the reputation of the British Empire is too well known to be injured by such hasty and uncalled for remarks, as are in Mr. Grist's letter. Nothing in our advertisement was put in or omitted in order to mislead the public, but the attempt to mislead them may safely be laid to the charge of Mr. Grist and not to the figures of the British Empire. The Standard Life does not pay a larger cash dividend than the British Empire; I am glad to be able to give this information to a man who has evidently much to learn.

I would also draw his attention to the fact that our last bonus paid, equalled 22½ per cent. on premiums paid on the life plan, and 15 per cent. on the endowment plans, not 21 per cent. and 14 per cent., as stated by Mr. Grist. With regard to the Mutual Life policy, he evidently does not know what he is talking about, and has got entirely mixed in both that and the two he mentions of the British Empire. Policy No. 51,775 (in the British Empire) which he quotes, is on a life, age 34, not 45, the annual premium per $1,000 being $24.40, not $35.44 as he states, and on this policy no bonus has been given at all, as it was only issued in 1885, whereas he asserts that the cash dividend was $7.50 and bonus addition $17.25. This self-evidently false statement may be taken as a standard of the reliability of Mr. Grist's subsequent assertions. If, in quoting policy No. 51,775, he has made a mistake for 50,775, he is again wrong, as the age at issue of this policy is 31 and the premium per $1,000 $28.31, and the cash and reversionary bonuses, as stated in our advertisement, are quite correct. The writer's ignorance is once more shown by his statement, "The reader should understand that in all the life companies the older the insured is, and the more premiums paid, the larger the dividend should be." This is not the case, as there are numerous methods of distributing bonuses, which would take too much space to explain in a newspaper correspondence.

With regard to Mr. Grist's language, it would probably lead to very unpleasant results to himself and to the welfare of his business, were it not for a feeling that his mis-statements and language are due more to ignorance than malice. Probably the firm hold which the British Empire has in this locality may be distressing to Mr. Grist, but he will find in the pursuance of his insurance business, that temperate language will always command more respect from the public, and from his competitors, than rash newspaper statements for which there is not the slightest foundation.

Neither the British Empire nor its agent at Peterborough, has any quarrel with the Mutual Life, and their attack over the signature of their agent here, was quite uncalled for. Being a new comer to Peterborough, he is evidently desirous of attracting attention to himself and his company. We would direct attention to the PROGRESS in the profits of the Mutual Life. Here is one example of this retrograde "progress":—

Policy No. 189,324. Age 35. Ordinary Life —$3000. Issued March 8th, 1873.
Premium $151.90.

1883, bonus $481.00; cash value,..$198 20.
1885, bonus $194.00; cash value,...$85.40.

We can submit figures showing the falling off in the dividends of the Mutual Life to be over 50 per cent. in the last eleven years.

In the six years, 1880 to 1885, the Mutual Life's dividend averaged 22.7 per cent.

We shall give another illustration. Take three periods of six years each:—

	Per cent. of profits earned to premiums received for insurance.	Amount to each $1,000 insured one year or more.
1st, 1868—1873.	34.2	$20.67
2nd, 1874—1879	27.8	13.43
3rd, 1880—1885	22.7	9.27

The Mutual Life's dividends have fallen off annually since 1886, and are now (1886) lower than ever. Can the same be said of the British Empire with any figures to back it up? I think not.

We have plenty more illustrations to show the progress (backward) in the profits of the Old Mutual Life, but we are not desirous of prolonging any newspaper discussion as the demands of our business do not permit of our wasting time advertising every new agent who seeks to gain notice by disparaging the standing of a respectable rival Company, and so far as this office is concerned, the matter which is only entered into on our part in self defence, must be considered as ended.

Yours &c.,
F. E. HENDERSON,
General Agent British Empire Mutual Life Insurance Company Peterborough.

The Cheese Market.

The Last Market of the Season—September and October Cheese Sold at 11c. and 10 7-16.

The regular fortnightly market of the Peterborough and Victoria Cheese Board was held on Tuesday afternoon in the Old Music Hall here. Owing to an arrangement previously agreed upon, the whole of the cheese which will be made this season was offered, and no sales were made by the majority of the factories, so further markets will be held this season, and the cheese now unsold will have to be disposed of by private sale. The following table will show the amount boarded, the first column representing that already made, while the second represents the whole estimated make of September, and the third the estimated make of October.

The buyers present were Messrs. W. Clurton, W. H. Clurton, B. Green, W. H. Wrighton, town; H. Cook, Belleville; J. D. Flavelle, Lindsay; D. G. McBain, Lancaster, and W. Dingwal, Lancaster.

The Liverpool market was quoted 48s.; Utica, 10 to 10½c.

Bidding was slow and the market lasted nearly three hours. After considerable discussion it was decided that buyers should give guarantee of 10 per cent. of the contract price, to be placed in a bank at the joint credit of buyer and seller, to insure fulfillment of contract. Several of the buyers were not prepared to advance 10 per cent., but the difficulty was overcome by Mr. W. Clurton generously offering to advance to them the sums required.

Mr. W. Clurton, offered 11c for a selection of 1000 boxes and took the make of Warminister, Warsaw, Bobcaygeon, Myrtle, Trewerne, and South Dummer factories for the two months. Mr. Green, for Mr. Dingwal bought at the same figure the makes of Keene, Lakefield, North Smith, and Otonabee union factories for both months. Mr. Green for Mr. McBain, bought the make of Lakehurst, Central, Normanhurst and Fairdale factories, at 10½c.

The other factories held for an increase, and the market was closed for the season.

Personal.

Sir Richard Cartwright arrived in Peterborough last evening on his return from British Columbia. While in town he was the guest of Mr. J. R. Stratton, of the EXAMINER, and during the morning many of his friends and admirers took advantage of the occasion to meet with him. His visit was a purely personal one. In the afternoon he went to Lakefield to call upon his sons, who are attending Mr. Shelbrake's private preparatory school near that village. He will leave town this evening by the 7.53 (C. P. R.) express for Kingston.

Attention!

We would call attention to the offer made by Joseph Griffin that during the next thirty days he will sell the whole of his summer stock of boots and shoes at cost. A few lines will actually be sold below cost. Look at the following quotations:—

For He is a Pre-tea-tant.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Mr. Gladstone publishes a letter again denying persistently the repeated report that he is about to join the Catholic Church. He says: "The statement that I intend to become a Roman Catholic is a revival of a miserable falsehood, repeated from time to time, without a shadow of evidence for basis, and is unworthy of notice until it assumes a character very different from merely calumnious invention."

Italy and the Jesuits.

ROME, Sept. 21.—The Italian Government is much annoyed at the new attitude of the Pope towards the Jesuits and his restoration of their privileges. It has decided to intervene and rigidly enforce all laws against the order. The effect will be to complete the expulsion of the Jesuits from Italian territory.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1886.

END OF THE SESSION.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT TO BE PROROGUED ON SATURDAY.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—In the House of Commons to-night before the third reading of the Appropriation Bill, Charles E. Lewis (Conservative) moved an official inquiry into the conduct of the magistracy and police of Londonderry on July 5, when he said the police wantonly attacked respectable citizens on the occasion of the declaration of the poll, causing a saturnalia of violence.

Mr. Morley said the whole case rested upon the evidence of a letter from the Bishop of Londonderry and the personal testimony of Mr. Lewis. But Mr. Lewis, the speaker added, was too much excited to render testimony of great or decisive value. A mere trumpery affair had never been brought before the House. [Cheers].

Mr. Saxton said he thought if an inquiry were granted Mr. Lewis ought to be put in the dock, as he had shaken his fist as a magistrate and called him a rascal and a scoundrel.

Mr. Lewis' motion was about to be negatived when the Parnellites demanded a division and the motion was rejected by a vote of 237 to 1. The announcement of the figures was received with loud laughter. Mr. Patrick O'Shea formed the minority.

Mr. Dillon (Parnellite) urged the release of Father Fahy, the imprisoned Woodford priest, who, said Mr. Dillon, had refused to give bail because he thought that would amount to an admission of misconduct on his part.

Mr. Holmes, Attorney-General of Ireland, justified the action taken in the case. He said he had no power to interfere after the magistrate had given his decision.

Mr. Sexton said he opined that Father Fahey would prove the most inconvenient prisoner the Government ever had.

Mr. Tanner (Parnellite) followed. After being twice called to order because of irrelevant remarks he was ordered to cease speaking, whereupon he left the chamber shouting: "This House is no place for an Irishman. I am disgusted with it."

Mr. Cremer (Radical) drew attention to the fact that the foreign affairs of the Government would be left for some months unchecked by Parliament. He was, therefore, anxious in regard to what might be done by the Government: He deprecated intervention in Bulgaria.

Lord Randolph Churchill said he did not think a majority of the House or of the people would endorse Mr. Cremer. A discussion of that sort now must be of a very academic character. He deprecated a premature discussion of the Bulgarian question. The situation in Bulgaria, he said, might at any moment become critical. A crisis might be precipitated if the subject were prematurely discussed.

Sir Wilfred Lawson (Radical) said he was not quite satisfied with Lord Randolph's answer. He asked the Government to declare that it would not care if the Russians got Constantinople.

Mr. Labouchere complained that Parliament had no voice in regard to liabilities and obligations incurred by the country.

The Appropriations Bill was finally adopted and the House adjourned until Saturday, when it will be prorogued.

A BOARD OF TRADE SCANDAL.

W. P. Dickenson Charged with the Appropriation of 100,000 Bushels of Wheat.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—An inkling of one of the greatest scandals the Board of Trade has experienced since the famous lard case leaked out to-day.

The main points are that W. P. Dickenson, who was confidential man for McGeoch, Everingham & Co., during the big lard deal which resulted in their failure, then confidential man for their successors, Crittenden & Harvey, and still later for W. R. Harvey & Co., has filed with the directors charges of swindling against W. R. Harvey and Frank Crittenden. The latter as receiver for the firm of W. R. Harvey & Co. has filed counter charges against Dickenson of dishonest practices. Each asked that the others be expelled from the board. Harvey & Co. failed Aug. 4, and Crittenden, a former partner of the firm, was appointed receiver to settle up the firm's affairs. In looking over the books Crittenden found over 100,000 bushels of wheat charged to the account of two or three of the firm's largest customers, whose business Dickenson was in the habit of looking after. They denied that they had given Dickenson orders to purchase the stuff. He was brought before the receiver, and, it is said, confessed in the presence of four witnesses that he had made the trades for himself and charged them to the customers' account. Dickenson was asked to surrender his membership to partly liquidate his indebtedness, but this he refused to do.

A SENSATIONAL APPOINTMENT.

The Pall Mall Gazette on the Composition of the Land Commission.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The Pall Mall Gazette says the appointment by the Government of Mr. George Fottrell as a member of the Royal Commission to inquire into the workings of the Irish Land Act of 1881, has caused a sensation. He resigned the post of solicitor for the land commission, the Gazette declares, on the ground of the commission's alleged partiality towards the interest of the tenants; the paper adds, "his suppressed pamphlet entitled 'How to become the owner of your farm,' attracted attention after the Land Act was passed." "The appointment of Mr. Fottrell and Sir James Caird on this commission," the Gazette says, "was a bold step for the Government to take."

NO RUSSIAN FOR THEM.

A German Audience Declines to Listen to a Muscovite Song.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—At a concert hall in Leipzig to-day a Russian lady sang a Russian couplet. The audience hissed and shouted that they did not want any Russian song. The lady then sang in German and was applauded. This incident illustrates the anti-Russian feeling among the people.

The Common Enemy.

VIENNA, Sept. 22.—The Pesther-Lloyd declares that Germany covered herself with disgrace by stooping to please Russia at the expense of shielding the Bulgarian plotters. The paper charges Germany with failing to try to arrange for joint action with England against "the common enemy."

The G. O. M. at Chester.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Upon his arrival at Chester Mr. Gladstone received an ovation. Among the crowd awaiting to greet him was a deputation of three from Dublin representing the Nationalists of that city.

Copper Rose Suddenly Found.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—Copper mines, which are said to be the most wonderful in the world, have been discovered near Sudbury Junction, Ont. The copper rises, which is situated a few miles from Sudbury depot, is four miles in length, 1500 feet wide and 200 feet deep. The percentage of pure copper is very large, and no richer ore has as yet been found. Operations have been commenced to work the mines to its fullest capacity.

ERIN'S AGITATORS.

LORD SALISBURY COMES DOWN ON THEM HEAVILY.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The County Conservative Club was opened at St. Albans to-day, with a large and distinguished attendance. Lord Salisbury was loudly cheered. In the course of a speech he said it was necessary for the Conservatives to organise and labor untiringly to maintain the advantage they had already won. The division yesterday showed a remarkable record. Every Conservative had either voted or paired, and there was not a single absentee.

"Let me tell you," continued Lord Salisbury, "the conditions of discouragement are very serious. Prisoners condemned to labor know nothing like the misery and discomfort a member of the House of Commons undergoes through a nightly 'Irish obstruction.' The Irish obstructionists have greatly changed in character. Formerly they meant to secure and perhaps they were not to be blamed for their efforts to obtain a long discussion, a complete threshing and sifting of the subject. They carry their opposition to the utmost possible length today, and this opposition in skilful hands is something totally different from their former methods. It is an instrument of torture to compel a majority government by mere physical suffering to concede this or that, whatever the obstructionists set their hearts on, and the majority must sit and listen not to argument or exortations but to elaborate efforts to waste time, which are made merely for the purpose of keeping the majority up night after night in the hope that from sheer fatigue they will concede something which they know public duty compels them to refuse. [Cries of "Shame."] If a representative Government is to continue, he said, this instrument of torture cannot be permitted to survive. [Loud cheers.] It will paralyze all legislation and bring discredit upon the oldest instrument of freedom in world.

"I desire," Lord Salisbury continued, "to repudiate the words, which Mr. Gladstone kindly put into my mouth on Monday. Mr. Gladstone is a master of misquotation—[Cheers and Laughter]—but I do not believe that he was ever so brilliant or successful before. Mr. Gladstone charged me with stating that there were cases where judicial rents could not be paid. Mr. Gladstone based his arguments and justified his course thereon, but the charge is absolutely unfounded. I said nothing of the kind. [Cheers.] I never said that the exchequer should pay the difference between judicial and just rents. Courtesy alone prevents me from contradicting those statements in sufficiently strong language.

The proposal to multiply small freeholds in Ireland originated with John Bright, who parted from Mr. Gladstone this year, but the proposal was never a party question. I myself and many other Conservatives have supported it for twenty years. It is the true policy of statesmen. In a sound system of peasant proprietary lies the future social salvation of Ireland. [Cheers.] The change may be slow and gradual, but our policy is to establish it."

In conclusion Lord Salisbury said: "Remember, gentlemen, we are engagaged in a great struggle to preserve the unity of the Empire, which is our paramount object. Do not relax your efforts to hand the Empire down to posterity uninjured." [Prolonged cheers.]

THREE MEN MURDERED.

Diabolical Conduct of a Florida Miner—A Maniac's Amusements.

KEY WEST, Fla., Sept. 22.—In the charcoal camp on Pine Key, near Key West, a man named Cooper visited one named Donaldson, when the latter requested the return of a knife which had been borrowed. Cooper threw it on the floor, saying "there it is." Donaldson picked it up and walked about twenty feet when, without warning, Cooper shot him in the back, and ran up, saying, "You ain't dead yet; I'll finish you." Donaldson begged for his life, and Cooper left, saying, "lie there and suffer and die." Cooper then reloaded his double-barrelled gun with buckshot and went to the camp of Bain and Hunter. Bain was cooking in front of his tent, when, without warning, he was shot, his intestines being torn out. Bain exclaimed: "Why did you shoot me; did I ever harm you?" Cooper answered: "No, I only shot you to please myself!" The fellow then went to the front of the tent, when Hunter, who was inside, attempted to run, but was shot through the heart. A man named Cary, who was out in a boat, heard the shots and came ashore, when Cooper ran him into the woods. Cary reached the camp of some other men, returned with them and brought the dead and wounded men to Key West. Cooper left in a small boat. A reward of $300 is offered for his capture.

'TWAS HIS WIFE.

A Man Fatally Shoots His Better-Half, Thinking Her a Burglar.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 22.—On Whittemore ranche, near Gorden, early yesterday morning, H. B. Whittemore, while in bed shot his wife twice, thinking she was a burglar. One ball entered the left side of her neck and the other her right shoulder, coming out below the right shoulder blade. Whittemore says: "When we retired I had $400, which I had in my drawers. Just before I went to sleep I remember my wife said she could not wear the new flannels she had on and would have to change them. About one o'clock I was suddenly awakened by a noise in the room and saw a dark form between me and the window. I immediately thought of my money and thought burglars were in the house. I raised myself in bed and fired. The figure came straight toward me and I fired again. We then clinched and I discovered it was my wife, who had got up to change her flannels." Mrs. Whittemore, in whose presence this story was told, was asked if it was correct. She nodded assent and attempted to speak but could not, although she made most piteous attempts to do so. The husband is almost crazed with grief over the affair. Mrs. Whittemore cannot recover.

THE ODDFELLOWS AT BOSTON.

Fifteen Thousand Men in Line—Excitement in the Streets.

BOSTON, Sept. 22.—The Oddfellow's parade here to-day was thoroughly successful. It is estimated that between 10,000 and 12,000 men were in line, and the procession was two hours in passing a given point. The procession passed in review before the Grand Sire of the Grand Lodge at Oddfellows' Hall, before Mayor O'Brien at the City Hall, Governor Robinson at the State House and Lieut.-Governor Ames on Arlington-street. The streets through which the procession passed were densely packed with people, and it was with great difficulty that the police kept the passage clear. The line was dismissed shortly after 6 o'clock, and the streets presented a lively appearance to-night as various out of town bodies were marching to the stations to return home.

So far as known no accidents occurred. The only sad incident, as reported, is the sudden death of Chas. O. Carrier of Newburyport, who dropped dead on Washington street from over exertion. He was affected with heart disease.

The only coolness that should come between two fond hearts is ice-cream.

CONCLAVE AT ST. LOUIS.

A Hundred Thousand People at the Templars Demonstration.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 22.—The Knights Templar held their parade and drills to-day. The commandery drills lasted until nearly 4 o'clock. At 2 o'clock Leader Gilmore began mustering the various bands of music, which were to participate in the grand concert, but it was after 3.30 before they began the march to the stand they were to occupy. They were arranged so that the different kinds of instruments were brought together and the crazy quilt appearance of the intermingled uniforms was decidedly unique. Throughout the afternoon crowds of people had been arriving in all sorts of vehicles and on foot, and when the concert began a conservative estimate of the number of auditors would place it at 75,000, though it was estimated as high as 150,000.

When Gilmore appeared at the front of the large collection of musicians he was greeted with most enthusiastic applause. Among the numbers on the program were these:

Opening gallop, for cornets by 183 cornetists with accompaniment by the united bands.

"Columbia," by united bands with artillery accompaniment.

"Pilgrims' Chorus"—Lombardi, by 150 trombones, tenor, horns, baritones and euphoniums, accompanied by the united bands.

Selection—By the 13th Batt. Band of Hamilton, Ont., alone, under the direction of Mr. Robinson.

Grand scene from "Il Trovatore," introducing the "anvil chorus," performed by the united bands and the drum corps with the accompaniment of fifty anvils played upon by the Rainwater Rifles of the St. Louis artillery.

"Old Hundredth," by all the musical force combined.

During the afternoon the weather became extremely close and hot and six people were overcome by the heat, but in no case are serious results anticipated.

To-night the second illumination of the city occurred, continuing from 8 o'clock until midnight. The Flambeau Battalion gave a parade and exhibition on the most prominent thoroughfares of the west end.

To-morrow a grand parade will follow the plans made for the parade interrupted on Tuesday. To-morrow night will occur the trades procession and another parade of the Flambeau Club.

Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 22.—Two thousand members of the Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, one of the highest orders of Masonry, are in attendance upon the Knights Templar Conclave. The order is of Arabic origin, and as the Arabic year ended to-night at 12 o'clock the services at that hour partook of unusual interest. Two hundred candidates, principally from this city, were initiated. The ceremonies were conducted under the auspices of Medinah Temple of Chicago, assisted by the Imperial potentate, Samuel Briggs of Cleveland, Ohio. All of the paraphernalia, costumes and jewels belonging to Chicago were utilized as well as those of the local temple in conferring the order upon the candidates. The elaborate costumes, rich jewels, mystic emblems and rites rendered the services most impressive. Previous to the ceremonies the shriners, as they call themselves, formed in procession at the Southern Hotel and paraded the principal down town streets, each temple being accompanied by a band. The costumes and uniforms were of many varieties, the only article worn in common being the red fez.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22.—At a meeting of the Cabinet held yesterday one of the most important issues in connection with the working of the Canada Temperance Act was decided. Heretofore all fines and penalties imposed for infractions of the act have been held to belong to the Dominion Treasury. This has been a ground of complaint in some quarters and has now been removed. Hereafter, in accordance with an order-in-council passed yesterday, all such penalties will go to the county or city in which the conviction takes place.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1886.

END OF THE SESSION.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT TO BE PROROGUED ON SATURDAY.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—In the House of Commons to-night before the third reading of the Appropriation Bill, Charles R. Lewis (Conservative) moved an official inquiry into the conduct of the magistracy and police of Londonderry on July 5, when he said the police wantonly attacked respectable citizens on the occasion of the declaration of the poll, causing a saturnalia of violence.

Mr. Morley said the whole case rested upon the evidence of a letter from the Bishop of Londonderry and the personal testimony of Mr. Lewis. But Mr. Lewis, the speaker added, was too much excited to render testimony of great or decisive value. A mere trumpery affair had never been brought before the House. [Cheers].

Mr. Sexton said he thought if an inquiry were granted Mr. Lewis ought to be put in the dock, as he had shaken his fist at a magistrate and called him a rascal and a scoundrel.

Mr. Lewis' motion was about to be negatived when the Parnellites demanded a division and the motion was rejected by a vote of 237 to 1. The announcement of the figures was received with loud laughter. Mr. Patrick O'Shea formed the minority.

Mr. Dillon (Parnellite) urged the release of Father Fahy, the imprisoned Woodford priest, who, said Mr. Dillon, had refused to give bail because he thought that would amount to an admission of misconduct on his part.

Mr. Holmes, Attorney-General of Ireland, justified the action taken in the case. He said he had no power to interfere after the magistrate had given his decision.

Mr. Sexton said he opined that Father Fahey would prove the most inconvenient prisoner the Government ever had.

Mr. Tanner (Parnellite) followed. After being twice called to order because of irrelevant remarks he was ordered to cease speaking, whereupon he left the chamber shouting: "This House is no place for an Irishman. I am disgusted with it."

Mr. Cremer (Radical) drew attention to the fact that the foreign affairs of the Government would be left for some months unchecked by Parliament. He was, therefore, anxious in regard to what might be done by the Government. He deprecated intervention in Bulgaria.

Lord Randolph Churchill said he did not think a majority of the House or of the people would endorse Mr. Cremer. A discussion of that sort now must be of a very academic character. He deprecated a premature discussion of the Bulgarian question. The situation in Bulgaria, he said, might at any moment become critical. A crisis might be precipitated if the subject were prematurely discussed.

Sir Wilfred Lawson (Radical) said he was not quite satisfied with Lord Randolph's answer. He asked the Government to declare that it would not care if the Russians got Constantinople.

Mr. Labouchere complained that Parliament had no voice in regard to liabilities and obligations incurred by the country.

The Appropriations Bill was finally adopted and the House adjourned until Saturday, when it will be prorogued.

A BOARD OF TRADE SCANDAL.

W. P. Dickenson Charged with the Appropriation of 100,000 Bushels of Wheat.

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—An inkling of one of the greatest scandals the Board of Trade has experienced since the famous lard case leaked out to-day.

The main points are that W. P. Dickenson, who was confidential man for McGeoch, Everingham & Co., during the big lard deal which resulted in their failure, then confidential man for their successors, Crittenden & Harvey, and still later for W. R. Harvey & Co., has filed with the directors charges of swindling against W. R. Harvey and Frank Crittenden. The latter as receiver for the firm of W. R. Harvey & Co. has filed counter charges against Dickenson of dishonest practices. Each asked that the others be expelled from the board. Harvey & Co. failed Aug. 4, and Crittenden, a former partner of the firm, was appointed receiver to settle up the firm's affairs. In looking over the books Crittenden found over 100,000 bushels of wheat charged to the account of two or three of the firm's largest customers, whose business Dickenson was in the habit of looking after. They denied that they had given Dickenson orders to purchase the stuff. He was brought before the receiver, and, it is said, confessed in the presence of four witnesses that he had made the trades for himself and charged them to the customers' account. Dickenson was asked to surrender his membership to partly liquidate his indebtedness, but this he refused to do.

A SENSATIONAL APPOINTMENT.

The Pall Mall Gazette on the Composition of the Land Commission.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The Pall Mall Gazette says the appointment by the Government of Mr. George Fottrell as a member of the Royal Commission to inquire into the workings of the Irish Land Act of 1881, has caused a sensation. He resigned the post of solicitor for the land commission, the Gazette declares, on the ground of the commission's alleged partiality towards the interest of the tenants; the paper adds, "his suppressed pamphlet entitled 'How to become the owner of your farm,' attracted attention after the Land Act was passed." "The appointment of Mr. Fottrell and Sir James Caird on this commission," the Gazette says, "was a bold step for the Government to take."

NO RUSSIAN FOR THEM.

A German Audience Declines to Listen to a Muscovite Song.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—At a concert hall in Leipzig to-day a Russian lady sang a Russian couplet. The audience hissed and shouted that they did not want any Russian song. The lady then sang in German and was applauded. This incident illustrates the anti-Russian feeling among the people.

The Common Enemy.

VIENNA, Sept. 22.—The Pesther-Lloyd declares that Germany covered herself with disgrace by stooping to please Russia at the expense of shielding the Bulgarian plotters. The paper charges Germany with failing to try to arrange for joint action with England against "the common enemy."

The G. O. M. at Chester.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Upon his arrival at Chester Mr. Gladstone received an ovation. Among the crowd awaiting to greet him was a deputation of three from Dublin representing the Nationalists of that city.

Copper Near Sudbury Junct.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—Copper mines, which are said to be the most wonderful in the world, have been discovered near Sudbury Junction, Ont. The copper mine, which is situated a few miles from Sudbury depot, is four miles in length, 1500 feet wide and 200 feet deep. The percentage of pure copper is very large, and no richer ore has as yet been found. Operations have been commenced to work the mines to its fullest capacity.

ERIN'S AGITATORS.

LORD SALISBURY COMES DOWN ON THEM HEAVILY.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The County Conservative Club was opened at St. Albans to-day, with a large and distinguished attendance. Lord Salisbury was loudly cheered. In the course of a speech he said it was necessary for the Conservatives to organize and labor untiringly to maintain the advantage they had already won. The division yesterday showed a remarkable record. Every Conservative had either voted or paired, and there was not a single absentee.

"Let me tell you," continued Lord Salisbury, "the conditions of discouragement are very serious. Prisoners condemned to labor know nothing like the misery and discomfort a member of the House of Commons undergoes through a nightly 'Irish obstruction.' The Irish obstructionists have greatly changed in character. Formerly they meant to secure and perhaps they were not to be blamed for their efforts to obtain a long discussion, a complete threshing and sifting of the subject. They carry their opposition to the utmost possible length today, and this opposition in skilful hands is something totally different from their former methods. It is an instrument of torture to compel a majority government by mere physical suffering to concede this or that, whatever the obstructionists set their hearts on, and the majority must sit and listen not to argument or exortations but to elaborate efforts to waste time, which are made merely for the purpose of keeping the majority up night after night in the hope that from sheer fatigue they will concede something which they know public duty compels them to refuse. [Cries of "Shame."] If a representative Government is to continue, he said, this instrument of torture cannot be permitted to survive. [Loud cheers.] It will paralyze all legislation and bring discredit upon the oldest instrument of freedom in world.

"I desire," Lord Salisbury continued, "to repudiate the words, which Mr. Gladstone kindly put into my mouth on Monday. Mr. Gladstone is a master of misquotation—[Cheers and Laughter]—but I do not believe that he was ever so brilliant or successful before. Mr. Gladstone charged me with stating that there were cases where judicial rents could not be paid. Mr. Gladstone based his arguments and justified his course thereon, but the charge is absolutely unfounded. I said nothing of the kind. [Cheers.] I never said that the exchequer should pay the difference between judicial and just rents. Courtesy alone prevents me from contradicting those statements in sufficiently strong language.

The proposal to multiply small freeholds in Ireland originated with John Bright, who parted from Mr. Gladstone this year, but the proposal was never a party question. I myself and many other Conservatives have supported it for twenty years. It is the true policy of statesmen. In a sound system of peasant proprietary lies the future social salvation of Ireland. [Cheers.] The change may be slow and gradual, but our policy is to establish it."

In conclusion Lord Salisbury said: "Remember, gentlemen, we are engaged in a great struggle to preserve the unity of the Empire, which is our paramount object. Do not relax your efforts to hand the Empire down to posterity uninjured." [Prolonged cheers.]

THREE MEN MURDERED.

Diabolical Conduct of a Florida Miner—A Maniac's Amusements.

KEY WEST, Fla., Sept. 22.—In the charcoal camp on Pine Key, near Key West, a man named Cooper visited one named Donaldson, when the latter requested the return of a knife which had been borrowed. Cooper threw it on the floor, saying "there it is." Donaldson picked it up and walked about twenty feet when, without warning, Cooper shot him in the back, and ran up, saying, "You ain't dead yet; I'll finish you." Donaldson begged for his life, and Cooper left, saying, "lie there and suffer and die." Cooper then reloaded his double-barrelled gun with buckshot and went to the camp of Bain and Hunter. Bain was cooking in front of his tent, when, without warning, he was shot, his intestines being torn out. Bain exclaimed: "Why did you shoot me; did I ever harm you?" Cooper answered: "No, I only shot you to please myself!" The fellow then went to the front of the tent, when Hunter, who was inside, attempted to run, but was shot through the heart. A man named Cary, who was out in a boat, heard the shots and came ashore, when Cooper ran him into the woods. Cary reached the camp of some other men, returned with them and brought the dead and wounded men to Key West. Cooper left in a small boat. A reward of $300 is offered for his capture.

'TWAS HIS WIFE.

A Man Fatally Shoots His Better-Half, Thinking Her a Burglar.

DENVER, Col., Sept. 22.—On Whittemore ranche, near Gorden, early yesterday morning, H. B. Whittemore, while in bed shot his wife twice, thinking she was a burglar. One ball entered the left side of her neck and the other her right shoulder, coming out below the right shoulder blade. Whittemore says: "When we retired I had $400, which I had in my drawers. Just before I went to sleep I remember my wife said she could not wear the new flannels she had on and would have to change them. About one o'clock I was suddenly awakened by a noise in the room and saw a dark form between me and the window. I immediately thought of my money and thought burglars were in the house. I raised myself in bed and fired. The figure came straight toward me and I fired again. We then clinched and I discovered it was my wife, who had got up to change her flannels." Mrs. Whittemore, in whose presence this story was told, was asked if it was correct. She nodded assent and attempted to speak but could not, although she made most piteous attempts to do so. The husband is almost crazed with grief over the affair. Mrs. Whittemore cannot recover.

THE ODDFELLOWS AT BOSTON.

Fifteen Thousand Men in Line—Excitement in the Streets.

BOSTON, Sept. 22.—The Oddfellow's parade here to-day was thoroughly successful. It is estimated that between 10,000 and 15,000 men were in line, and the procession was two hours in passing a given point. The procession passed in review before the Grand Sire of the Grand Lodge at Oddfellows' Hall, before Mayor O'Brien at the City Hall, Governor Robinson at the State House and Lieut.-Governor Ames on Arlington-street. The streets through which the procession passed were densely packed with people, and it was with great difficulty that the police kept the passage clear. The line was dismissed shortly after 6 o'clock, and the streets presented a lively appearance to-night as various out of town bodies were marching to the stations to return home.

So far as known no accidents occurred. The only sad incident, as reported, is the sudden death of Chas. O. Carrier of Newburyport, who dropped dead on Washington street from over exertion. He was affected with heart disease.

The only coolness that should come between two fond hearts is ice-cream.

CONCLAVE AT ST. LOUIS.

A Hundred Thousand People at the Templars' Demonstration.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 22.—The Knights Templar held their parade and drills to-day. The commandery drills lasted until nearly 4 o'clock. At 2 o'clock Leader Gilmore began mustering the various bands of music, which were to participate in the grand concert, but it was after 3.30 before they began the march to the stand they were to occupy. They were arranged so that the different kinds of instruments were brought together and the crazy quilt appearance of the intermingled uniforms was decidedly unique. Throughout the afternoon crowds of people had been arriving in all sorts of vehicles and on foot, and when the concert began a conservative estimate of the number of auditors would place it at 75,000, though it was estimated as high as 150,000.

When Gilmore appeared at the front of the large collection of musicians he was greeted with most enthusiastic applause. Among the numbers on the program were these:

Quartet, guitar, for cornets by 183 cornetists with accompaniment by the massed bands.

"Columbia," by united bands with artillery accompaniment.

"Pilgrims' Chorus"—Lombardi, by 130 trombones, tenor, horns, baritones and euphoniums, accompanied by the united bands.

Selection—By the 13th Batt. Band of Hamilton, Ont., alone, under the direction of Mr. Robinson.

Grand scene from "Il Trovatore," introducing the "anvil chorus," performed by the united bands and the drum corps with the accompaniment of fifty anvils played upon by the Rainwater Rifles of the St. Louis artillery.

"Old Hundredth," by all the musical force combined.

During the afternoon the weather became extremely close and hot and six people were overcome by the heat, but in no case are serious results anticipated.

To-night the second illumination of the city occurred, continuing from 8 o'clock until midnight. The Flambeau Battalion gave a parade and exhibition on the most prominent thoroughfares of the west end.

To-morrow a grand parade will follow the plans made for the parade interrupted on Tuesday. To-morrow night will occur the trades procession and another parade of the Flambeau Club.

Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 22.—Two thousand members of the Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, one of the highest orders of Masonry, are in attendance upon the Knights Templar Conclave. The order is of Arabic origin, and as the Arabic year ended to-night at 12 o'clock the services at that hour partook of unusual interest. Two hundred candidates, principally from this city, were initiated. The ceremonies were conducted under the auspices of Medinah Temple of Chicago, assisted by the imperial potentate, Samuel Briggs of Cleveland, Ohio. All of the paraphernalia, costumes and jewels belonging to Chicago were utilized as well as those of the local temple in conferring the order upon the candidates. The elaborate costumes, rich jewels, mystic emblems and rites rendered the services most impressive. Previous to the ceremonies the shriners, as they call themselves, formed in procession at the Southern Hotel and paraded the principal down town streets, each temple being accompanied by a band. The costumes and uniforms were of many varieties, the only article worn in common being the red fez.

OTTAWA, Sept. 22.—At a meeting of the Cabinet held yesterday one of the most important issues in connection with the working of the Canada Temperance Act was decided. Heretofore all fines and penalties imposed for infractions of the act have been held to belong to the Dominion Treasury. This has been a ground of complaint in some quarters and has now been removed. Hereafter, in accordance with an order-in-council passed yesterday, all such penalties will go to the county or city in which the conviction takes place.

MORE TROUBLE.

Once more circumstance make it imperative upon us to allude to the peculiar conduct of the Government engineer in charge of Trent Valley Canal construction in his dealing with the water supply. In this case for some occult reason, known only to the engineer himself—that is, if he condescends to supply even himself with reasons for his peculiar conduct in this respect—he has again been tampering with the water supply of the system. By the arbitrary shutting off the water at Buckhorn, evil effects of a very annoying nature, and resulting in positive loss to more than one interest, are brought about. The water has been reduced to so low a level that it seriously affects the running of the mills and factories along the Dickson race. Especially are the saw mills of the Dickson Estate Company inconvenienced. Indeed, so great is the annoyance and obstruction to operations caused by insufficient water supply, that Mr. T. G. Haslitt, manager of the company, seriously contemplates closing down the works and suspending operations, with a large cut of logs in sight, and with the work of the season only fairly entered upon. If he is compelled to take this course—and a very little more reduction of the volume of water will force it upon him—the results will be serious. About seventy-five hands will be thrown out of employment, involving the curtailment of the bread supply of the two or three hundred persons dependent upon their labor. The injury to building operations by the inability of the mills to fill contracts for lumber and timber, are too obvious to need dwelling upon. The numerous other factories dependent upon water for a motive power are affected in a similar ratio and untold inconvenience and annoyance, are caused by the arbitrary action of one individual, who, "dressed in a little brief authority, plays his fantastic tricks" apparently from mere caprice. For, those who know, state that the ends he seeks might be arrived at without such vexatious tampering with the water supply. It would not be quite so bad if he were to apprise those concerned of his intentions to derange their business. In that case some provision might be made to meet the emergency. But he is above such paltry considerations; his will is a law unto him, justifying the most arbitrary actions. If the instance above cited were the only one, it might be overlooked. But last winter the Dickson Company were put to great expense to ward off serious damage to property caused by the lowering of the water and the falling of the ice. This season also the navigation of Clear and Stony lakes and the river were interfered with to the damage of navigation interests. It is time that a stop should be put to this apparently systematic annoyance. There is not much hope, however, that it will be done. The Dominion Government seems to be bound to make the Trent Valley navigation scheme, and all connected with it, as unpopular as possible, in the hope, no doubt, that the public will become at last disgusted and cease clamoring for the construction of the canal. To accomplish this they have trifled with the work in a most inexcusable manner, and they not only retain the services of an engineer, openly hostile to the work, but one who seems to accompany the work he is compelled to unwillingly perform, with as much annoyance and disturbance of private interests as possible. The people concerned have borne this state of things with great patience, but they will not endure it much longer. A stop must be put to it in some way or other. Important private interests cannot be allowed to be sacrificed to satisfy the mere caprice of an arbitrary individual, the servant of a Government, which seems to ignore private and neglect public interests.

It has been decided, says the Toronto Mail, by the Dominion Cabinet that all Scott Act fines shall go to the cities and towns where they are levied, to be used for the purposes of the Act. The Scott Act is a Dominion Act; it is only natural that the Government of the Dominion should see to its enforcement. The above decision indicates a disposition on the part of the Government to awaken to a sense of its responsibility in the matter.

The Government has hit upon an ingenious device for securing the personal safety of members of the Dominion Senate. The chamber will be lighted with the incandescent electric light. A light like this will deter the "resurrectionists" from making inroads upon the morgue.

Gen. Butterfield's Marriage.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Gen. Butterfield was married to-day to Mrs. James at St. Margaret's, Westminster. The Bishop of Bedford conducted the service assisted by Canon Farrar. John Henry Puleston, M.P., acted as master of the ceremonies. Many distinguished persons were present at the wedding breakfast. Count De Paris telegraphed hearty congratulations and sent a handsome present.

The Revolt in Madrid.

MADRID, Sept. 21.—All the officers implicated in yesterday's attempt at revolution have been condemned to death. A band of rebels at Ocana, in the Province of Toledo, killed their commanding officer and then returned to their allegiance and prayed for mercy. The common soldiers who took part in the uprising generally repent their folly and blame their officers for leading them astray. The soldiers everywhere are yielding to the authorities. In the Province of Toledo two bands of rebels, however, still hold out.

Apparently Good Grounds for Seizure.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22. The Post's Washington special says that the fact will be brought out in the libel suits to be brought against the British sealing vessels that seal skins captured showed that the seals had been killed by clubbing them on land. It is consequently considered quite probable by the state and treasury department officials that no remonstrance will be offered by the British Government to the confiscation of the vessels.

Martin Irons' Arrest.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 22.—Martin Irons was interviewed to-day in regard to his arrest in Kansas City for drunkenness. He stated that he was not drunk at the time at all. He was arrested by an officer who arrested him for vagrancy, but upon an explanation that charge was withdrawn and he was maliciously arrested for drunkenness. He says it was a pure up scheme to bring himself and the Knights of Labor into disrepute

A Fiendish Act.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—Three weeks ago a boy named Robert Lewis, residing at South Falls, Ont., was carrying a pail of water into a building in course of erection, when one of the workmen threw some lime at him which entered his eyes. Since then he has been totally blind and suffering great agony. He was brought to the General Hospital here for treatment to-night.

Fatally Shot by a Boy of 10.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 18.—The inquest on the death of the boy George Bruce, aged 4, shot by George Lewis, aged 10, in London South on September 10, resulted in the following verdict: "That George Elwood Bruce came to his death by a wound caused by a bullet fired from a pistol in the hand of George Lewis, and that the act was not premeditated, but censurable and unjustifiable."

Tory Nominations for South Perth.

MITCHELL, Sept. 22.—The Conservative Convention, held at Fullerton Corners to-day, was the largest ever held in South Perth, every municipality being represented. H. Fred Sharp, of St. Mary's, received the nomination for the Commons, and J. C. Bull, of Mitchell, for the Local Legislature.

FIVE MILLION POUNDS.

By T. WEMYSS REID.

Day after day went by in dreamy repose and undisturbed quiet, and I began to despair of ever again being plucked from my hateful prison house. It was more than a week since we had left Scarborough. Where we now were I could not form the faintest conception. I knew that we had once stopped for an hour or more, and I guessed from the perfect stillness of the vessel that we had entered some harbor. I was conscious, too, of the fact that it was now much colder than it had been when we left England, and I had been thankful for the additional rugs with which my father had supplied me. But Flinter evaded all my attempts to elicit from him any information as to our whereabouts. Nor would he give me the faintest hint of when I might hope to be released from my captivity.

Ten days of an imprisonment, so close as mine was, began to tell not merely upon my spirits but upon my physical health. My appetite failed utterly, and I hardly touched the delicacies with which Flinter, to do him justice, kept my table abundantly supplied. I found myself daily growing weaker, and the victim of an apathy which was altogether alien to my nature. In plain English, I was cowed and broken by the treatment to which I had been subjected. I no longer even spoke to Flinter on his periodical visits to my cell.

It was when I was in the midst of one of my worst fits of dejection that the event which I had so ardently longed for took place. I was aroused one morning, shortly before noon, by the noisy opening of the great iron door which barred the entrance to the passage leading to my place of confinement, and for the first time since I had entered the accursed hole I heard the sound of voices outside. They were speaking in quick, excited and even angry tones.

Before I had time to realize what was occurring, the door of my room was thrown open, and, to my intense amazement, I saw Dr. Branksome standing before me.

"My God!" he cried, in an agitated voice, while he advanced and took my hand, "he has not been lying, as I hoped might be the case! And you have been here—a prisoner—ever since we sailed! Thank monstrous Ob, if I had only known! But come—come at once, my poor fellow, and let me give you back your liberty!"

"Ah, doctor," I cried, in a tone the feebleness of which startled even myself, "how I have longed for you! I knew that you would save me if you could."

"My dear fellow, don't exhaust yourself," he said, still visibly agitated. He placed his arm round my waist, and drawing me gently out of that black prison in which I had endured so much, led me into the main saloon of the yacht. The flood of light and fresh air made my eyes; the sound of human voices after that long spell of silence made all my nerves quiver.

There was a mist before my sight, a buzzing in my ears, and a sensation of choking in my throat.

But Branksome was as skillful as he was gentle and sympathetic.

"Lie down here," said as he spoke he laid me on one of the soft couches of the saloon. "Good God! how you have suffered! Here, take this," and he almost forced a restorative of some sort down my throat. There was some one standing beside him whom I now recognized as Fordyke. He had a look of deep pity on his face—nay, it was almost one of horror and incredulity. I saw the same expression on the face of the captain of the yacht, and of a steward, who were also in the saloon. They seemed quite overcome at the contemplation of the crime of which I had been the victim. I cast my eyes round the beautiful apartment, and to my relief saw that the hateful Flinter was not among those present.

Very quickly I recovered my strength and composure so far as to be able to give Branksome and the solicitor an account of all that had happened to me since I received the note inviting me to go on board the yacht.

"That note—have you got it?" said Branksome, eagerly. He was manifestly resolved to know the whole truth regarding my abduction. I handed it to him.

"Ah, it is Flinter's handwriting. But, captain, how came it that you never mentioned until this morning that Mr. Fenton had been on board the yacht on the morning that we sailed?" He turned with a haughty look upon the captain, a plain, matter-of-fact seaman with a somewhat blocked face. More than ever was I impressed by the sense of power which seemed to distinguish Branksome in all that he said and did.

"Why, sir," returned the seaman in manifest embarrassment, "I was told that the gentleman had left the ship in one of the shore boats, besides—well; to tell the whole truth upon my honor, sir, Mr. Flinter said I was not to mention anything about it to you. He said as how this gentleman was no longer friends with the master and that you would be displeased if you knew he had been aboard."

"Phew!" cried Branksome, impatiently. "I could almost believe that the whole of you were in a conspiracy against Mr. Fenton and against me also. The chief steward knew that Flinter was supplying food to Mr Fenton, and never said a word to me, simply because he had allowed himself to believe that the poor fellow was ill, and that for some reason of his own he did not wish his presence on board the ship to be known. Why, great heavens! he might have been here a prisoner forever, so far as any of the ship's officers were concerned. I never heard of such stupidity. If I had not accidentally mentioned Mr. Fenton's name to you, captain, half an hour ago, and if you had not in consequence asked if I was speaking of the gentleman who came aboard the day we sailed, God knows how long this outrage might have continued."

Dr. Branksome spoke with warmth and indignation. The firm mouth was averily compressed, and his eyes gave confidence to all he said. I felt that I had found a protector and a champion. At a sign from him the captain and steward left the saloon and I found my self alone with the doctor and Fordyke.

"I have hardly recovered from the shock caused by the discovery of your condition," said the former. "Indeed I had no thought when I heard of your being in confederate even instantly to relieve you. I have not, therefore, had time as yet to get the whole truth out of Flinter as to his extraordinary and abominable behavior. Of course I shall do so, and you may depend upon my calling him sternly to account for an outrage which the brutish him within the pale of the decent law. That is so, I think, Mr. Fordyke?"

"Decidedly!" replied the lawyer. "I should say that there never was a clearer case of abduction in this world. Mr. Fenton, if he chooses to prosecute, may undoubtedly send Mr. Flinter to jail for a couple of years at least."

"May I ask," continued Branksome, "whether you are able to account of yourself in any way for this outbreak of proclivities?"

He looked eagerly at me, and gratefully awaited my reply with interest.

"I have formed a theory," I said, "but I do not know that I ought to mention it in the presence of a third person."

"Oh, pooh! consider Fordyke as taking on the same footing as ourselves. So far as you are concerned, he knows everything."

There was no mistaking the emphasis with which the last word was spoken.

"Then I shall tell you exactly what it is that I have thought during my long and weary confinement. I believe that Mr. Manslaughter to dignify it by a milder name—I have ventured to pay my addresses to his niece, and anxious to get me, for a time, at least, out of her way, has arranged this outrage with Flinter."

Branksome looked puzzled for a moment. It was evident that the idea was one that had not occurred to him before. He shook his head slowly.

"I cannot believe that the affair has been brought about in the way you describe. My poor friend Manslaughter is, I know, in a very curious state of mind at present, and he might do desperate things in one of those fits of desperate passion which have visited him recently, and which, I think, are connected with some obscure disease of the brain. But I should be slow to suppose that he could ever stoop to that which is neither more nor less than actual crime. You have never yourself seen any reason to suppose that he would be guilty of such conduct"

"I! Certainly not. In all my personal relations with Mr. Manslaughter, up to the moment when he wrote the note in which he dismissed me from his house, I have had every reason to feel that he was one of the kindest of men. But you know that both you and—and—Daisy have thought him greatly changed of late."

"True, true!" said it is possible that, after all, he may have forgotten himself in the way you supposed; though I still think you are mistaken."

"As for Flinter," I continued, "mark my words, doctor! that man is a villain who is capable of anything. I should not care to trust my life in his hands, and if you are wise you will cease all connection with him as soon as possible."

"I don't wonder at your expression," replied Branksome, "but at the same time I can hardly think so badly of Flinter as you naturally do. However, I shall examine him at once, and make him reveal the whole truth, whatever it may be."

He was going to leave the saloon for the purpose of seeing the man from whom I had suffered so much, when I stopped him.

"Forgive me!" I said, "but I am quite in the dark as to where we are. The yacht has been at sea now for ten days, but for all I know to the contrary we may still be within a mile of Scarborough."

"No, we have not been standing still," he replied, with a smile. "We are at this moment nearing the town of Bodo, on the coast of Norway. You have been carried away up into the Arctic regions during your painful sojourn in the duke's punishment cell."

He hurriedly left the saloon where Fordyke remained with me. The lawyer explained that the trip to Bodo was a business one, connected with one of the numerous European investments of Manleverer. At the same time he strongly advised me to take legal proceedings against Flint r. "There is not a jury in England but would give you swinging damages," he declared; and I quite agreed with him that the damages were due to me.

But even as we were talking of this Branksome returned. He was pale and his face wore an expression of the utmost gravity.

"My friend," he said, "I grieve to have to say that you were right in your suspicions. Benjamin Flinter has proved to me by documentary evidence that in treating you in this infamous fashion he was nothing more than the agent, the tool of our revered friend Manleverer. Alas! it is incomprehensible that a man whose whole life was once so full of goodness should have resorted to lawlessness like this. There is only one explanation of it."

He tapped his forehead significantly as he uttered the last words.

Police Court.

His Worship Mayor Stevenson occupied the bench at the police court this morning. Patrick Ryan was brought before the bar charged by P. C. Adams with having been drunk in a public place. Patrick admitted the charge, and pleaded that Moxie was the cause of his trouble. He was fined $2 and $4 costs.

New Plumage.

P. C. Pidgeon appeared on his beat this morning clothed in his new uniform of the regulation build, style, cut and finish, fresh from the shop of Dolan & Co. At the police station he said, as he looked in the glass, it's plain to the veriest dunce, that every beauty will feel it her duty, to yield to my new suit at once. The policeman's suit is a very handsome one.

For Want of Water.

The steamer Golden-Eye has ceased to make her daily trips between Peterborough, Idyl Wild Harwood, etc., owing to the lowness of the water in the river, and is laid up at her wharf. The deficit in the water supply is attributed to unjudicious regulation of the waters above and to waste, caused by repairs being made at the locks. Commodore Calcutt hopes to be able to run the steamer during the exhibition week.

Y. M. C. A. Conference.

The programme for to-night's session, which will be held in the Y. M. C. A. hall, will consist of a song service for half an hour and discussion of the following topics: "The duties and responsibilities of committees" and "How can we promote personal purity among young men?" All Christian workers have a cordial invitation from the Association to attend. Sessions will also be held to-morrow morning at 9.30, and to-morrow afternoon at 2.30.

Serious Accident.

On Wednesday as Miss Clark, of Omemee, was driving to Peterborough, and when nearing the town, the horse which she was driving became frightened at a flock of sheep and shied to the side of the road, throwing from the vehicle. The young lady fell on her arm, fracturing it and dislocating her wrist. She managed to prevent the horse from running away, and getting into the buggy, drove to Dr. Kincaid's office, where she had her injuries attended to.

The Industrial Judges.

In our report of the Young People's Industrial exhibition yesterday, owing to not having been informed, we omitted to give the judges, who were:—Fine arts—Mr. N. Ramer. Men and boys' work and curiosities—Mr. Geo. E. Williams and Mr. B. Gardiner. Ladies' and children's work—Mrs. John Sowerin and Mrs. Caldwell, of Lakefield. Culinary—Mrs. McDougall and Mrs. John McKee. Flowers—Miss Maggie Edmison.

Mr. Jas. Craig made and supplied gratis the candles sold at the refreshment tables of the exhibition.

Peterborough Central Exhibition.

The attention of the public, particularly of the farming community is called to the annual exhibition of the Peterborough Central Exhibition, which will be held in the Association grounds on Oct. 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th. The sum of $2500 will be distributed in prizes and this liberal list will doubtless attract a splendid exhibit of cattle, horses, and sheep. In horses there will be five classes, not including special prize competitions; in cattle, six classes, and in sheep, six classes. There are thirty-seven classes altogether, and with the new and commodious exhibition building, and the pains taken to insure the success of the exhibition, it is certain that the Peterborough Central will be the best exhibition ever given in this district, and one which will well repay a visit whether profit, instruction or amusement is considered. Don't forget the Central Exhibition on Oct. 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th.

The New Exhibition Buildings.

The South Wing of the Building Proposed to be Erected—Almost Completed and Ready for the Coming Carnival.

The new Exhibition Building of the Peterborough Central Agricultural Society, which has been under construction for the past two months, is now almost completed, and Mr. W. Lasher, who has the contract in hand, hopes to have the work finished this week at the latest. The structure though only the south wing of the building which the society proposes to erect, next year probably, presents a fine appearance, and no doubt on October, 5th 6th 7th and 8th will be the scene of the grandest, exhibition ever held in this district. The building including lean-tos, covers 69x84 feet, and in the centre is 46 feet high, being 24 feet to the eaves. One-third of the first story is of glass, rows of windows ranging along each side; while the second story will be two-thirds glass, a la crystal palace.

It is intended that access to and egress from the building will be easy and there are four main entrances, with circular fan lights above, pediments having been made in the wings to admit of fan lights over doors facing the east and west; also four side entrance doors in the lean-tos.

The second story consists of a gallery eleven feet wide running around the main portion of the building, an opening of 26 x 16 feet being left, which is surrrounded by heavy diagonal balusters. The ventilation is provided by means of two cupola ventilators in the top of the building, 10 x 6 feet and 5 feet high, and also by means of the windows, of which every other one swings on a pivot.

The building, which is floored throughout, is of the most solid and substantial nature, all the timbers and materials being of the best. It has in its construction 48 posts and 144 braces.

The painting of the exterior of the building was completed yesterday. It is a dark drab, the windows frames and such markings being of a darker shade than the body.

From every point the edifice presents a handsome appearance, and the society and contractors are to be congratulated on the excellence of the work.

Presbytery of Peterborough.

Rev. Mr. Sutherland was chosen Moderator. Three of the students who had been laboring in the mission fields during the summer, delivered the exercises previously assigned them. The discourses were all heartily sustained.

Steps were taken to re-unite Oak Hill with Garden Hill and Knoxville.

Very interesting reports were received from the different mission fields within the bounds. The Presbytery was cheered to hear that as many as twelve names at one station, and nine at another, had been added to the communion rolls. The Apsley and Clydesdale field and the Minden and Kinmount field have shown marked progress during the year.

The next meeting of the Presbytery was appointed to be held in Port Hope on the second Tuesday of January, in the Mill street church, at 10 o'clock, a.m.

Mr. Leslie, of the Whitby Presbytery, and Mr. Watt, the present supply at Warsaw, being present, were invited to sit with the Presbytery.

A strong deputation appeared, asking the Presbytery to use further effort to induce Mr. Howard to re-consider his declination of the call to Warsaw. This the Presbytery consented to do, and the clerk was instructed accordingly.

A committee was appointed to visit Bethany in the interest of that station.

Clydesdale and Apsley were erected into congregations under the superintendence of sessions. Mr. Carmichael was appointed as Moderator of these sessions.—Com.

Social at St. John's.

An interesting musical and social entertainment, under the auspices of St. John's Church, was held in the school room on Wednesday evening. There was a good attendance and a very pleasant evening was spent. Dr. Burnham presided, and filled the position well. The musical programme was opened by Mr. H. A. Hammond, who gave a capital song. Miss Wrighton and Miss Clurton contributed a charming piano duet. Mr. Hutchins, lately of Brockville, made his debut before a local audience, giving a stirring solo. His rich and well-trained baritone voice was much admired. Miss Gray gave a pretty piano solo in her usual good style. Mrs. Seward and Mrs. Hutchins contributed a beautiful vocal duet, and Miss Errett sang nicely a pretty solo. Mr. Chas. Brown contributed a comic reading, and by request Miss Wrighton and Miss Clurton gave a second piano duet. At the conclusion of the musical entertainment, a sumptuous tea, provided by the ladies, was indulged in. It was largely patronized and evidently appreciated. The proceeds of the entertainment will be devoted to the organ fund of the church.

The public come to throng our store because they know they can get goods at less than they were bought for from the wholesale dealer. It is a curious fact, but none the less true! The New Grand Trunk Station.

The Grand Trunk authorities have a large number of men at work in Montreal preparing for laying the foundation of the new station on the present site. It is expected that before the winter sets in severely the building will be well forward. The cost is estimated at over $400,000, the city contributing $100,000 of the amount.

The Peterborough Gun Club

Holds Its First Annual Meeting. Elects Officers for the Ensuing Year, and Orders Another Thousand Blackbirds.

The big guns of the Peterborough Gun Club assembled in the room over E. J. Hartley's music store, on Wednesday evening, on the occasion of the first annual meeting of the club. There were present, Secretary H. W. Kent and Messrs. H. Calcutt, C. H. Geale, H. Neil, W. English and Capt. Cooper. The secretary reported that the finances of the club were satisfactory, that it had a membership of thirty-six shootists all told, and that 2,000 blackbirds (clay) had been killed during the year. The following officers were then elected for the ensuing year:—

PRESIDENT.—His Honor, Judge Weller.
1ST VICE-PRESIDENT.—Mr. R. Tivey.
2ND VICE-PRESIDENT.—Mr. H. Calcutt.
SECRETARY-TREASURER. — Mr. H. W. Kent.
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.—Messrs. H. Neil, C. H. Geale, D. Cameron, J. D. Collins and E. J. Hartley.

It was decided that a match between between Ashburnham and Peterborough members of the club should be shot on Monday afternoon next, for the oysters if desired, and the secretary was instructed to order another thousand birds. Votes of thanks were passed in favor of the worthy secretary and the press, and the meeting ended.

The Other View.

The Review takes the credit to itself that the advertisement of Mr. R. S. Rogers, calling for labourers, secured the required number by one insertion. It omitted to state that this result was arrived at by inserting the advertisement in the DAILY EXAMINER, whose large advertising patronage testifies to the estimation in which it is held by the public as an advertising medium. Not only "in the long run," but now it pays to advertise in the EXAMINER. They all do it, and if they continue we shall be forced to enlarge the DAILY EXAMINER, as we have been compelled to do twice in its less than two years' existence, on account of the pressure of advertisements.

The "Mutuals" Controversy.

We have received, too late for this issue, a letter in reply to the communication which appeared yesterday in the EXAMINER on the matter in controversy between the British Empire and New York Mutual insurance companies. It will appear to-morrow. In reference to Mr. Grieb's first letter, policy "No. 51,775" should have read "50,775." This typographical error was corrected for the two subsequent issues.

Central Exhibition.

Intelligence has been received that His Honor, Hon. John Beverley Robinson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, will be in Peterborough on Wednesday, October 6th, and will formally open the Peterborough Central Exhibition, at two o'clock in the afternoon. His Honor, who is much pleased at the opportunity of visiting Peterborough and renewing old associations, will arrive in town on the evening of Oct. 5th.

Building a Bowling Alley.

Mr. W. Kennealy has commenced work preparatory to building an extensive addition and bowling alley to his hotel premises, on George and Brock streets. The addition will be two stories high and of brick, and will extend back from the main building 89 feet. The first flat will be used as a bowling alley and the second story for bedrooms.

Dentistry.

Mr. R. F. Morrow, dentist, gold medalist and honor graduate of the Royal College of Dental Surgeons, Toronto, successor to Mr. J. B. Pentland, has been very successful in the practice of his profession, in all branches, since his establishment in town. Mr. Morrow is evidently recognised as an expert at the profession by his colleagues, who have appointed him honorary vice-president of the Students' Association of the R.C.D.S.

St. Luke's Harvest Festival.

The harvest festival and entertainment in connection with St. Luke's church will be held in the school room of the church to-morrow evening. Tea will be served from 5 o'clock till 7. During the afternoon a sale of fancy and useful articles will be held in the school room. St. Luke's annual festival is always a success, and that of to-morrow evening, no doubt, will be a very happy entertainment.

Indian Chiefs at the Charlotte Street Methodist Church.

Rev. John McDougall, North-West missionary, and chiefs Sameon, Jona and Pakan will hold a public service in the Charlotte street church this evening. The chiefs will appear in their native garb, and will give interesting accounts of stirring incidents in connection with their history, which will be interpreted and enlarged on by Rev. Mr. McDougall.

Saved Army Indian.

Gwah-tahe-lum-khe-ah, or Buffalo Boy, a Saved Army soldier, who was captured by the Kiowans Indians when three years old, and had an experience of 15 years' captivity, will relate the thrilling incidents of his life, in the Saved Army hall on Friday evening.

Low Water.

Owing to the water being held back at Buckhorn by the Government Engineer, the water in the river is very low. A large area of the bottom of Spalding's bay is exposed to view, breathing forth malaria at every pore

Ten-Days Excursion.

Parties going on the ten-day excursion to Detroit, Port Huron, Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee and Grand Rapids, should take the Grand Trunk railway, the great through line to these points.

Contrary, as Usual.

Simkins and his young wife had just completed their first quarrel. "I wish I was dead," she sobbed. "I wish I was, too," he blubbered. "Then I don't wish I was," and the war continued.

For the Fall and Winter Trade.

I would specially call attention, to my Boys' and Mens' Balmorals, warranted to keep out wet and snow; Ladies' and Childrens' Boots and Shoes, Rubbers, Overshoes, etc. Altogether the best and cheapest stock of boots and shoes ever placed on the local market. Repairing neatly and promptly executed at cheap rates.

I wish to return thanks to those who so kindly bestowed their patronage on me since commencing business one year ago, and I trust by giving good value to merit a continuance of the same

A GALLANT ARRAY.

PARADE OF THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR AT ST. LOUIS, MO.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 23.—At the Knights Templar grand encampment meeting yesterday the regrets of the Charleston, S.C., Commandery No. 1 were read and the attention of the Committee on Finance was called to the deplorable condition of their brethern in that city. A report of the Committee on Jurisprudence regarding certain amendments was read and put upon the minutes. The amendment to strike out of the vow of office the words "and code of statutes" was lost. The proposition to change the qualifications for membership in the Order of Knighthood was tabled. The amendment to change the clause of the constitution empowering Grand Encampment to designate time and place of next encampment by substituting "the encampment shall be held in the City of Washington, D.C., in the month of December, at such time in said month as the Grand Master may direct," was voted down by a large majority, as was also the proposition to abolish parades, and make the grand encampments purely business proceedings.

Notwithstanding the lateness of the day and the effect of the announcement on Tuesday that the parade was permanently abandoned, but few changes of the original program were made necessary by the postponement. All the members of the commandery in the chief staffs were on hand, and substitutes for division officers were only required in two or three instances. The rank and file comprised less Knights than would have formed in line had the parade occurred when first advertised, but nearly every commandery was represented. Some slight additions had been made to the already profuse decorations and those damaged by the bad weather of Tuesday had been restored. The participants in the parade were prompt in their movements and began to report at their rendezvous at an early hour. All the streets in the lower portion of the city were fairly alive with moving battalions accompanied by bands of music.

At the meeting of the Grand Encampment to-day Sir Knight Charles Roome, of New York City, was elected Most Eminent Grand Master, and Sir Knight John J. P. S. Gobin, of Lebanon, Pa., was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the former's promotion. Robt. E. Withers, Most Eminent Grand Master, was present, but his health permitted him to simply surrender the insignia of office without making a retiring speech.

The passing of the procession interrupted proceedings of the Grand Encampment. After the election of a Deputy Grand Master and upon reassembling an adjournment was taken till 3 o'clock. At the afternoon session Sir Knight Hugh McCurdy of Corunna, Mich., was made Grand Generalissimo, Sir Knight Warren L. Thomas of Louisville, Grand Capt. General; Sir Knight R. R. Lloyd of San Francisco, Senior Warden; Sir Knight H. B. Stoddard of Texas, Junior Warden; Sir Knight H. W. Lyons of Connecticut, Grand Treasurer, and Sir Knight W. P. Isaacs of Wisconsin, Grand Recorder. The appointive officer will be announced to-morrow by Grand Master Roome elect. To-night the knights divided their time by watching the trades display and attending receptions held by the various commanderies. The Grand Encampment at its afternoon session appropriated $2000 in aid of the knights who suffered by earthquake in Charleston.

The procession was fully three and a half miles in length, and even the most enthusiastic officers in charge of the arrangements were surprised at its magnitude. The parade passed without notable incidents and no casualties were reported.

CUTTING RATES ON FREIGHT.

A Reduction of $1.50 on a Hundredweight From Chicago to New York.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—The express companies having offices in this city are engaged in a cut-rate war of considerable magnitude. It began three weeks ago. The rate between New York and Chicago is now $1 on 100 pounds, which is a cut of $1.50 from the old rate. There are five companies doing business between here and New York: the Adams, United States, American, Baltimore and Ohio, and Erie. The latter company came into the field last June, much to the dissatisfaction of the older companies. The only people who are benifited by the cut are the merchants of this city. Rates were never so low, and they are shipping a large amount of goods from New York.

WIGGINS' PROPHECY.

A Panic Among the Negroes—A Professor at Washington Warns the People.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Advices from various parts of the South show that the negroes are terribly alarmed by Wiggins' prophecy of an earthquake on Sept. 29. The whites severely condemn Wiggins and declare that great harm is likely to result from his predictions. A panic among the negroes is disastrous to industry and may cause exils of many kind.

Prof. McGee of Washington says no attention should be paid to Wiggins' "absurd and unscientific" prophecy of an earthquake.

The Sovereign Lodge, I.O.O.F.

BOSTON, Sept. 23.—Sovereign Grand Lodge, I.O.O.F., convened here this morning. Past Grand Sire Stokes offered a resolution permitting lodges to omit their weekly meetings when they occur on legal and generally recognized holidays—Adopted. The lodge refused to make any change in the law regarding dismissal certificates, and refused to adopt a receipt card to be used in place of the card now in use. The Legislative Committee recommended that a special committee be appointed to prepare, and report at next session a badge to be worn in state grand lodges and lodges and encampments. After a lengthy discussion the matter was re-committed with instructions to confine changes to Grand Lodges and Grand Encampments. The committee on the removal of the headquarters of the Sovereign Grand Lodge from Baltimore made an elaborate report.

The Grand Lodge will go into secret session on Friday to consider the report of the Committee on Revision of the Ritual of Degree of Rebecca.

Move Aid the Charlestons.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The committee of arrangements for the reception of Justin McCarthy, M.P., the Irish parliamentary representative and author, of which Mr. Patrick Ford is chairman, has decided to devote the proceeds of 2nd first demonstration at the Academy of Music, Monday evening, Sept. 4, to the relief of the afflicted people of Charleston. The subject of the lecture will be "The Cause of Ireland." Mayor Grace will preside.

Cattle's Services Ended.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—The State Live Stock Commission had a long meeting with closed doors this afternoon and evening and discussed the disposition of the cattle affected with pleuro-pneumonia in Chicago distilleries. It was agreed that the only safe thing to do would be to destroy all the animals that had been exposed. Orders were adopted.

Interest increasing in Five Million Pounds

AN INDUSTRIOUS LABOUR PREACHER.

He Brutal Treatment he Compels His Children to Earn a Living for Him.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—The case of Edward Steale, a well-known local preacher, prosecuted by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children for inhuman brutality to his two little boys, attracts considerable attention in London. Steale is the minister of an Islington church, and also preaches in the open air on Sunday in Hyde Park. He is noted in religious circles for the extraordinary fervor of the prayers, which invariably cause a plentiful supply of tears to flow down his cheeks. On Sunday, after his Hyde Park sermon and prayer, several of his hearers allege he went home and beat his two sons, 8 and 11 years old, until their faces and bodies were masses of bleeding bruises, using on them a knotted rope an inch in diameter, and all because the boys who were out all day and late in the evening failed to sell the required number of religious tracts. He obtained them for gratuitous distribution, but it was proved that he made most of his living by forcing his boys to sell them on the plea that their father was ill and unable to work. The boys testified that they had been beaten five times in one week with a knotted rope. They usually spent Sunday in a dark room, only bread and water being given them. Steale's daughter testified that he threatened to "cut all their throats," "would hang them," etc. The neighbors proved that he had been forced to leave his previous lodgings because of cruelty to his children; also that although he is a carpenter, and had been offered 30 shillings a week, he refused work. He got his whole living from the religious collections and what money he could beat out of the boys who frequently spent the night in the streets, being afraid to go home. In defence Steale wept and whined that he was only obeying the Scripture injunction about sparing the rod and spoiling the child. The Magistrate showed the utmost indignation, but was unable to give Steale more than six months and send the boys, who appeared bright and intelligent, to an industrial school.

A BISHOP'S ADMONITION.

An Address From the Catholic Bishop of Armagh.

DUBLIN, Sept. 23.—The Most Rev. Bartholomew Woodcock, D.D., Roman Catholic Bishop of Armagh and Clonmacnois, has issued an address to the people and the clergy of his diocess. The bishop laments the present spiritual and temporal wants of his people and the sufferings and oppression of the poor. He also speaks with pain of the prevalence and growth of secret societies so frequently condemned by the church, and expresses fears for the peace and future of Ireland. "God alone," the address declares, "can scatter these clouds and quell the tempest. Meanwhile we exhort our oppressed people to be still patient, while using every lawful means to protect themselves and their own, and we warn their oppressors of the account they must render to God."

The bishop then conjures all to observe the golden law of charity, but warns the people against the "revolutionary principles of secret societies." "If," he adds, "the day of natural freedom seems to approach, the people's sins may cause its advent to be deferred. Every crime will not only be used as an argument by Ireland's enemies for refusing to accord her her rights, but will also render the people unworthy of God's help."

A TREATY WITH THE STATES.

A Proposed Arrangement That Will Settle Various Matters in Dispute.

OTTAWA, Sept. 23.—It is stated that a commercial treaty has been drawn up between the English and United States Governments, relative to Canada, and that it is now being submitted to the Canadian Government for suggestions as to details. The treaty provides for an amicable settlement of the fishery dispute and also reciprocal trade relations with the two countries. A cabinet meeting was held on Tuesday, when the new treaty was laid before the ministers for consideration. Another meeting was held to-day.

THE EGYPTIAN PROTECTORATE.

Nubar Pasha's Mission to London Likely to Have Ill-Success.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Nubar Pasha, who was specially summoned to London, had a conference to-day with Lord Salisbury to effect a settlement of the Egyptian questions, which are becoming more pressing on account of the renewal of the crisis in Eastern Europe. The basis of the settlement will probably be the continuation of the de facto British protectorate over Egypt by the normal British army of occupation, as even a draft upon the British troops in Egypt in order to be provisionally maintained by specially raised Egyptian troops with British officers; the British position and obligations toward Turkey to be upheld in accordance with the Cypress treaty of alliance.

AUSTRIA AND BULGARIA.

An Interesting Interpellation in the Hungarian Chambers.

PESTH, Sept. 23.—In the Hungarian Chamber of Deputies to-day Count Apponyi interpellated the Government concerning the attitude of Austro-Hungary on the Bulgarian question. He declared that Austrian interests did not admit of any one-sided extension of the influence of any particular power in the Balkans, and said he wished to know whether Austrian interests permitted Russia through a special commissioner (Gen. Kaulbars) to interfere in the internal or even in the judicial affairs of Bulgaria. "It is evident," added Count Apponyi, "that Germany supports Russia. Has there been any consequent change in the Austro-German alliance?"

ARRESTED FOR BIGAMY.

Edward Solomon's Unexplainable Return Gets Him Into Trouble.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Edward Solomon, the composer, and husband of Lillian Russell, was arrested in London to-day on a charge of bigamy, preferred by his first wife, Lilly Grey, who avers that he was never legally separated from her. He was remanded for trial, but being subsequently accepted in two sureties of $500 each. He is charged with marrying Helen Leonard of New Jersey while his wife Jane Solomons, formerly James, was still living. The plaintiff's mother testified that her daughter married Solomon in 1872, and was deserted by him in 1875.

Death on the Crossing Saves.

LEAMINGTON, Ont., Sept. 23.—This evening about 7 o'clock Mr. J. B. Schofield of the firm of Morton & Schofield, barristers, of this town, dropped dead while playing croquet in the Scots House yard. Deceased had just struck his ball when he was observed to stagger and fall.

The receipts at the bazaar in aid of St. Peter's Cathedral, Montreal, already amount to over $25,000. At the request of the organizers of the bazaar, Father Lacombe took the necessary steps with the Government at Ottawa and the Northwest authorities, and Crowfoot, Chief of the Blackfoot Indians, will arrive at Montreal on Monday next.

Umpire Powers was mobbed by the crowd at Detroit on Wednesday for making unpopular rulings in the Chicago-Detroit game and for calling the game when there appeared to be light enough to have finished it. He was hurried into a carriage and driven away, but the carriage was nearly ruined by stones and eggs. Burns and Kelly of the Chicagos also had a tussle with the mob and received some severe bruises. Powers' unpopularity is due to his treatment of Dunlap in a recent game when he fined the latter $70.

The Galatea was ruled out of the race for the Citizens' cup at Newport, R.I., for striking the buoy and the race given to the Mayflower. If no English yacht challenges for the America's cup next year several United States boats will go over there. The owner of the Puritan has announced that he will go and Commodore Hovey says he will take the schooner Pocumtuc. There is also some talk of the schooner Ottawa being taken over. Lieut. Henn on his return to New York said: "It was too bad about that Newport race, wasn't it? Nothing but flukes all the way round, and the Galatea sailed six miles further than the Mayflower in the drift. We shall make the race with the Mayflower just as soon as we get a good whole-sail wind."

A syndicate of Russian and perm bankers have subscribed 400,000 roubles to carry out a scheme, sanctioned by the Sultan, for a network of railways to connect the Black Sea with the Persian Gulf, under the direction of the Austrian engineer Dremel.

The Pope has appointed a special commission of cardinals to examine and report upon the divorce laws of different countries with a view to enable the Pontiff to suitably instruct the bishops of the Catholic Church throughout the world on the subject of divorce.

Jas. A. Wilson of Philadelphia, the absconding treasurer of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal Company, who embezzled $300,000, has been seen at Chatham, Ont. He said he intended to go to Windsor and remain there until the directors of the company would guarantee him immunity from prosecution if he returned to Philadelphia.

At Rockville, Pa., Monday night, Frank Hall, aged 18, ate 9 pounds and a plate of ice cream in less than one hour and a half minutes. He then offered to wager that he could eat three large apple cakes in three minutes and a half. This was promptly accepted and the cakes brought on. The contestant had finished two cakes when he dropped dead.

Clyde Yacht Race.

GLASGOW, Sept. 23. Clyde yachting circles are excited over the challenge issued by James Ball of the Royal Clyde Yacht Club for an international race for the America's Cup next September. If the challenge be accepted the Clyde yachtsmen will construct a boat especially for the race. Her tonnage will be similar to the Mayflower's. She will be Clydebuilt, Clyde built, and will carry a Clyde designed rudder. A committee of the Clyde Yacht Club has raised a guarantee fund of £40,000. A yacht will be built of the model of any selected American vessel provided the latter's length be given.

District Conference

Of the Young Men's Christian Association, Held in the Local Association Rooms.

The district conference of the Young Men's Christian Association, which has been engaging the attention of the local Association for weeks past, opened in the Association rooms here on Thursday afternoon, at 4.30 o'clock. There were present: Mr. G. J. Wilkie, of Toronto, representing the International Committee; Mr. Wm. McCulloch, secretary of Toronto Association, and W. Emerson, Toronto; Rev. D. McTavish, W. J. King, secretary; S. Smyth and R. M. Anderson, Lindsay; W. Craig, Port Hope, and a number of members of the local branch.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

Mr. McCulloch, of Toronto, was elected to the chair, and W. J. King appointed conventional secretary. A paper prepared by G. A. Kuhring, of Ottawa, on "Ladies' Work in the Association," was read by Mr. W. W. Johnston, out of which profitable discussions arose, Messrs. McCulloch and Wilkie aiding greatly. Mr. King reported as to the working of the Lindsay Association, and received many valuable suggestions and much encouragement from the veteran "young men."

THURSDAY EVENING.

The evening session was opened in the usual manner, Mr. W. Craig, of Port Hope, reading a portion of Holy Scripture. Dr. McTavish, of Lindsay, was elected to the chair. A song service occupied the first fifteen minutes, after which Mr. McCulloch read an excellent paper on "Personal Work," exorting members of the association to engage actively in this course, and traced vividly the effects of one man's personal efforts; then proved by means of figures what would result from the persistent efforts of a few personal workers. "Duties and Responsibilities of Committees," an essay by Mr. W. Emerson, Toronto, was read by the author, a young and enthusiastic committeeman, graphically laying out the duties of committees and showing how to counter-act the work of the Christians' adversaries. The conference then discussed the subject generally, views being exchanged liberally. The meeting then adjourned to meet at 9.30 Friday morning.

The Northwest Indian Chief's

And Rev. Mr. McDougall Hold a Public Service in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church.

The public service held in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church on Wednesday evening, addressed by Rev. Mr. McDougall, missionary and the converted Northwest Indian Chiefs was largely attended, the edifice being crowded to the doors. The missionary party, Rev. B. B. Keefer, and Rev. F. H. Wallace, occupied the pulpit platform, the latter gentleman presiding.

Rev. F. H. Wallace introduced Mr. McDougall, who gave an interesting description of his missionary work among the Northwest Indians. Large numbers of savages, he said, were being converted by means of the missionaries. The Indians in the district in which he and his colleagues labored, were prevented from rebelling through the efforts of the christian workers.

Chief Sampson, who was dressed in the picturesque garb of his tribe, the Mountain Cree, his lower limbs and feet clad in buckskin, while around his body was carelessly thrown a bright colored blanket, and on his head rested the feathered headdress denoting a chief of distinction. The chief, who said he came to this province to learn and not to teach, gave a short address and was followed by Mr. Steinhaur, the son of an Indian missionary, who is attending Victoria University, sang a pretty solo. Rev. B. B. Keefer gave a short address relating to the Indian missionary, and introduced the stately Chief Pakan, also clad in his native dress, who also gave a short address regarding the change for good in the tribes since the missionaries came amongst them. The meeting was dismissed by Rev. Mr. Keefer pronouncing the benediction.

Painful Accident.

On Thursday night Dr. O'Sullivan, who came in on the evening express from Lakefield, got off the train at the head of George street. He immediately started homeward at a rapid walk. The glare of the headlight of the engine blinding him for an instant, he did not notice that he was on the edge of a culvert, and stepping ahead, fell to the bottom of the ditch, a distance of several feet. A young man named Brown was attracted to the spot by his groans and helped him home. Dr. Bingham was summoned and attended to the doctor's injuries. It was found that three or four ribs had been broken. It is hoped that he has received no serious internal injuries, and his speedy recovery is looked for.

To the Ladies.

Miss E. Delaney's grand fall millinery and mantle opening will take place on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 29th, 30th and Oct. 1st. The latest designs in bonnets, hats and mantles will be displayed, likewise a beautiful assortment of feather trimmings, plushes, mantle cloths, dress goods, etc. All are cordially invited. No circulars.

The "British Empire" Still in the Ascendant.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

SIR,—In reply to a communication marked "advertisement" in your paper of the 9th Sept., inst., signed by one, F. S. Grist, with the comprehensive heading of the "British Empire Overhauled," (a fancied prelude to its downfall) in which he attempts to explain an advertisement of the company I represent here, published in the ordinary way, giving the results of profits, etc., believed by us to be correct and fair.

This gentleman's "opening address" is prefaced by a sneering reference to this office as being a "small life company." However small the British Empire may be in comparison to the larger figures of its American competitor, its assets invested in Canadian securities are, and always will be, larger than those of the Mutual Life of New York. Its funds are invested in Canadian bonds and debentures, and on mortgages in the same way that any other Canadian company would invest in Canada, while the deposit and reserve placed in the hands of the Canadian Government by the Mutual Life can only consist of American securities. This, I think, is the main point to be taken into consideration by Canadian insurers. The British Empire invests the whole of its earnings for the Canadian branch in this country, as well as large sums from England, whilst the Mutual Life's object is to take every dollar that it can possibly get out of the country. With regard to the language used by Mr. Grist, it is not worthy of notice from such a source, as the reputation of the British Empire is too well known to be injured by such hasty and uncalled for remarks, as are in Mr. Grist's letter. Nothing in our advertisement was put in or omitted in order to mislead the public, but the attempt to mislead them may safely be laid to the charge of Mr. Grist and not to the figures of the British Empire. The Standard Life does not pay a larger cash dividend than the British Empire; I am glad to be able to give this information to a man who has evidently much to learn.

I would also draw his attention to the fact that our last bonus paid, equalled 22½ per cent. on premiums paid on the life plan, and 15 per cent. on the endowment plans, not 21 per cent. and 14 per cent., as stated by Mr. Grist. With regard to the Mutual Life policy, he evidently does not know what he is talking about, and has got entirely mixed in both that and the two he mentions of the British Empire. Policy No. 51,775 (in the British Empire) which he quotes, is on a life, age 34, not 45, the annual premium per $1,000 being $24.40, not $26.44 as he states, and on this policy no bonus has been given at all, as it was only issued in 1885, whereas he asserts that the cash dividend was $7.50 and bonus addition $17.25. This self-evidently false statement may be taken as a standard of the reliability of Mr. Grist's subsequent assertions. If, in quoting policy No. 51,775, he has made a mistake for 50,775, he is again wrong, as the age at issue of this policy is 31 and the premium per $1,000 $28.31, and the cash and reversionary bonuses, as stated in our advertisement, are quite correct. The writer's ignorance is once more shown by his statement, "The reader should understand that in all the life companies the older the insured is, and the more premiums paid, the larger the dividend should be." This is not the case, as there are numerous methods of distributing bonuses, which would take too much space to explain in a newspaper correspondence.

With regard to Mr. Grist's language, it would probably lead to very unpleasant results to himself and to the welfare of his business, were it not for a feeling that his mis-statements and language are due more to ignorance than malice. Probably the firm hold which the British Empire has in this locality may be distressing to Mr. Grist, but he will find in the pursuance of life-insurance business, that temperate language will always command more respect from the public, and from his competitors, than rash, newspaper statements for which there is not the slightest foundation.

Neither the British Empire nor its agent at Peterborough, has any quarrel with the Mutual Life, and their attack over the signature of their agent here, was quite uncalled for. Being a new comer to Peterborough, he is evidently desirous of attracting attention to himself and his company. We would direct attention to the PROGRESS in the profits of the Mutual Life. Here is one example of this retrograde "progress":—

Policy No. 189,324. Age 35. Ordinary Life —$5000. Issued March 8th, 1878. Premium $131.90.

1883, bonus $431.00; cash value,..$196.25.
1885, bonus $194.00; cash value,...$85.40.

We can submit figures showing the falling off in the dividends of the Mutual Life to be over 50 per cent. in the last eleven years.

In the six years, 1860 to 1885, the Mutual Life's dividend averaged 22.7 per cent.

We shall give another illustration. Take three periods of six years each:—

	Per cent. of profits earned to premiums received for insurance.	Amount to each $1,000 insured one year or more.
1st, 1868—1873	34.2	$20.67
2nd, 1874—1879	27.8	13 43
3rd, 1880—1885	22.7	9.27

The Mutual Life's dividends have fallen off annually since 1866, and are now (1886) lower than ever. Can the same be said of the British Empire with any figures to back it up? I think not.

We have plenty more illustrations to show the progress (backward) in the profits of the Old Mutual Life, but we are not desirous of prolonging any newspaper discussion as the demands of our business do not permit of our wasting time advertising every new agent who seeks to gain notice by disparaging the standing of a respectable rival Company, and so far as this office, is concerned, the matter which is only entered into on our part in self defense, must be considered as ended.

Yours &c.,
E. E. HENDERSON,
General Agent British Empire Mutual Life Insurance Company Peterborough.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 37 Granville Street, Halifax, N.S.

N. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.

DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians, Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself, nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak, wasted, night sweats very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Inhalometer and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 99 to 20 lbs. and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe and sprinkle of gratitude, and all praise us for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment.

I remain, yours truly,

TERRIBLE NEWS.

[illegible] all along believed that to be [illegible] of the voyage which [illegible] it was [illegible] Instantaneously [illegible] Daisy, shut up in the hall with a man who was [illegible] a desperate criminal or [illegible]

"Doctor," I said earnestly, "I have no wish to punish Mr. Mulevorer for the cruel trick he has played upon me. But while there was no other reason for leaving that ship, the fact that he is Daisy's uncle would be sufficient. Else I am terribly anxious about her. She has no friend with her at Great Lorton!" "It is not dangerous for her to remain alone with a man in Mauleverer's state of mind?"

"She is not alone," replied Brankcome. "I thought I had told you that her old friend and companion, Mrs Cawthorne, who accompanied her to England, had joined her at the hall. She was visiting in Derbyshire at the time when Mr. Mauleverer was at Scarborough."

I remembered to have heard Daisy speak of this lady in the warmest terms of affection, and I felt thankful that there was at least one person near her of her own sex, in whom she could confide.

"It is a sad business, I fear," pursued Brankcome. "I have not said you yet of all that happened after you left us so suddenly. Tell me, my friend; did Mr. Mauleverer show any symptoms of anger or even suspicion while he was with you in the smoking room that night when you stopped at the hall?"

"Certainly not. He was jocular as friendly and as courteous in his manner as usual."

"That is bad, I fear—very bad. Will you believe that he had already discovered at that time what had taken place in the garden between you and Daisy—"

"How could he discover that?" I cried.

"Don't you understand? Did you not see Hunter leave the garden at the same time that we did? No," he said, raising his hand to check by ingenuous cry on my part, "it would not do for me to say a word for what he did then. Remember, he is devoted body and soul to the service of his master. But what I feel is that Mauleverer's concealment of his anger while he sat with you in the smoking room is very bad, because it looks as much like the cunning of insanity. And that is what really mad—when you [illegible] I am prepared upon my oath to swear. He would never otherwise have [illegible] as he did."

"I shudder at it. Do you mean to say that there has been positive ill-usage?"

"Aye, more than enough of it. Of course, you understand that the poor child is neither starved nor beaten. But there are moral weapons which are still more cruel and terrible than these."

"Oh, how could you leave her to his mercy?" I cried in an agony of pain. "I cannot understand how any one could have deserted her in such circumstances. Let us go back to her at once."

"My good fellow, keep calm," replied the doctor, on whose face sympathy rather than indignation at my fiery language was expressed. "Do you suppose that if I could have been of any service to the dear child I would have left her as I did? I found, however, that my presence, for various reasons, actually aggravated her sufferings; so I did what I could. I summoned Mrs. Cawthorne to her, and in obedience to Mauleverer's orders I came up here to attend to his affairs."

"But you say we are in the Arctic regions; what can be the affairs of Mr. Mauleverer in this part of the world?"

"Have you not heard of the discovery of gold in Norway? Our friend has a very large interest in what may turn out, to the world, the most important properties of its kind in the world."

"Where are we at this moment?" I asked.

"Within half an hour of Bodo, the place where I am to see the captain of the [illegible]

"You will put me ashore there," I said, coolly, for I was cut to the heart by the thought of Daisy's situation. "I must return to England immediately."

"I understand your wish; but pray, Mr. Penfold, do not be rash. You will get back in a few days time quicker as soon by sticking to the yacht as by adopting any other mode of making the journey."

"Thanks," I said, ungraciously; "but you can hardly be surprised that I should have [illegible] the [illegible] of Mr. Mauleverer [illegible] to have the power of leaving his too hospitable ship."

He looked at me gravely.

"Well," he remarked, presently, "I shall not attempt to prevent the carrying out of what I feel is a natural impulse. But now, if you will excuse me, I would propose that you change your attire. I have ascertained that Hunter did not do things by halves. After you had been brought aboard the yacht he sent ashore for your baggage, and I have just had it placed in one of the state-rooms."

"Upon my word," I said, "I shall remember my obligations to Mr. Finter as long as I live, and some day I hope I shall be able to repay them."

Brankcome made no reply. I was conscious of the fact that, although very indignant at the treatment to which I had been subjected, he was not inclined to take any active part in my quarrel with Hunter. That being the case, I was resolved not to reveal to him those darker suspicions which I entertained against the villain. If I did so it was just possible that the doctor might lay [illegible] on board which would put Hunter on his guard. That the latter meditated murder—either my murder, or Daisy's, or perchance Mauleverer's—and that he had thought of using poison for the purpose, I was almost certain. I had not spent ten long days in studying that sinister character in the medical work without having formed a theory of my own regarding it.

It was only my true friend's counsel before me, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE ULSTER DELEGATES.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

Two Able and Eloquent Speeches—Arguments Against an Irish Parliament—The Meeting Unanimously Adopts a Modified Home Rule Resolution.

The Loyalist Delegates from the Ulster Repeal Union arrived last night on the 6.40 C. P. R., express, from Ottawa. The local Orange Lodges, the McWilliams True Blues, and the Nassau and Otonabee Orange Lodges, headed by the Fire Brigade Band, formed in procession at the Orange Hall, and proceeded in a body to the station, to receive the delegates. Hundreds of people were present. On the arrival of the train the band struck up "God Save the Queen." The delegate party consisting of Rev. Dr. Kane, of Belfast, Mr. Geo. Hill Smith, and Mrs. Smith, were met by a reception committee of the officers of the Orange Lodges mentioned, and were harried to carriage's in waiting. The party were then escorted to the Oriental Hotel, where they were given a hearty salute. Rev. Dr. Kane, in a short speech thanked the Orangemen and the citizens for their hearty reception, and promised to address them further at the Opera House.

At eight o'clock the Opera House was well filled, both floor and gallery, with an expectant audience. The gallery rails bore the mottoes "British Connection" and "Queen and Constitution," while the stage was decorated with British ensigns and the flag of the Dominion. There were upon the platform besides the speakers of the evening, Mrs. Smith, Rev. Messrs. Bell, Torrance, Tovell, Bennett and Wilson, (Ashburnham) Mayor James Stevenson, Mr. John Carnegie, M. P. P., Mr. Wm. Johnson, Orange Grand Master, Ontario east; Mr, Wm. King, District Master, Peterborough; Mr. J. B. McWilliams, County Master; Mr. W. A. Stratton, County Secretary; and Messrs. Thos. Menzies and J. J. Hartley, town councillors.

MR. MCWILLIAMS, on assuming the chair, expressed his regret that Mr. James Stevenson, the mayor of the town, and a gentleman who is in strong sympathy with the anti Home Rule movement, could not see his way clear to accept the unanimous invitation of the Orangemen to preside at this meeting and extend that courtesy to the distinguished delegates they should receive. As the representative of the Orangemen of this county he (the chairman) extended a hearty welcome to them. It was difficult for Canadians to understand why there could not be some reform in the government of Ireland that would bring peace and prosperity to that unhappy land, and when these gentleman were visiting the Dominion he hoped they would study our system of government and see if there is not something that can be applied with advantage to Ireland. Never in the history of the Empire had there been a more important question, and one which should receive more careful consideration by our public men, and as Canadians we were anxious to receive all the information possible upon it. A few weeks ago we had the pleasure of listening to Rev. Dr. Burns deliver a lecture on the subject of Home Rule, and those then present will admit that he made out a very strong case. This evening they would hear the other side of the question presented by Rev. Dr. Kane, of Belfast, and Mr. Smith, of Armagh, and judging from the reports of their addresses delivered elsewhere, they are capable of presenting their side of the question in a very clear light. He would call up Dr. Kane.

DR. KANE, who is an athletic specimen of an Irishman of fine, personal presence, on rising, was received with tumultuous applause; he said he had been revived since his visit to town, by some gentleman on the street saluting him with the words: "Erin Go Bragh." This had cheered him, for he had a decided regard for Ireland. He was proud to describe himself as an Irishman from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet, but he was not one of that type of Irishmen who are always "agin' the government." (Laughter. He would yield to no man in his devotion to Ireland. He belonged to the class who believed more in deeds than words, as the mills manufactures, bleaching greens, and well-cultivated fields of Ireland bore witness to—the results of true patriotism. The true patriot taught the people to be industrious, contented, and prosperous, and he was satisfied when he reached what he sought for—when his country was free and occupied a high position and was fairly prosperous. On these terms the speaker's patriotism was fully satisfied. As an Irishman he believed Ireland to be as free as any country under the shining sun of heaven. (Cheers.) It was as free as Canada. It enjoyed the blessings flowing from the imperial organization which did not curb freedom, but guaranteed protection. Let any point, if possible to a miracle on the banks of Rhine. What disability did Ireland labor under that an Englishman or a Scotchman was free from? Ireland contained as free a people as any country under heaven, and held a high position among the nations. The Nationalists aimed at the

and they would never be satisfied with anything short of that. This would reduce Ireland to the standing of a commercially and financially weak nation, which would be regarded by the world with contempt, with an impoverished people. She would sink to the level of only a seventh rate power. Now she was an integral part of the mightiest empire on the face of the earth, (cheers) and her sons had done their share in every walk of life to build up that vast empire. It was claimed that an Irish parliament at Dublin would develop the industries of Ireland. But if Rev. Dr. Burns, whose name had been referred to as speaking from that platform, was under the rule of an Irish parliament, he would mighty soon wish himself back under British rule. The speaker, to show how the Nationalist party would develop Irish industries, referred to the boycotting at the Cork steamship company, under the direction of the Irish National League, the attempt to boycott the Bank of Ireland, the crusade of Dwyer Gray and Redpath against Ulster linen—"Orange linen"—and the resolution of the Chicago convention to boycott all English goods. The speaker stood before his auditors clad in Irish woollen from head to foot, and it was good wear. (Cheers.) The true friends of Ireland, to insure her prosperity, wanted such as professional agitators did not promote. If these let Ireland alone, she would be fairly prosperous. The most prosperous period of Ireland had been for the 100 years of the Union. As a patriot, the speaker was satisfied that Ireland was free and occupied an honourable position—if she were not free, it was the fault of the agitators. If Dr. Burns were to hear the speakers of the evening, he would be convinced, cry "peccavi," and want to shake hands, as he had done on that platform with a Roman Catholic priest over the bridge of the Boyne. (Laughter.) Dr. Burns, as a protestant, must be true to the British Empire. The loyalists of Ireland embraced all the Protestants and a million and a half of Roman Catholics. He was in favor of a system of Home Rule, but he opposed the Parnellites, because they were traitors to the Queen. Their scheme would degrade and ruin the country, socially civilly and financially Another reason was because Parnellite rule, meant the religious domination, Protestants had so much reason to dread, and the rule of Archbishops Croke and Walsh. Protestants were asked if they would permit their Irish co-religionists to be under a domination as hateful to the latter as they were hateful to their oppressors? Irish Protestants would never be slaves to political adventurers and religious domination. (Cheers).

LAW AND SOCIAL ORDER ESTABLISHED,

ALL PROTESTANTS WERE REGARDED AS INTRUDERS

in Ireland. and if the Parnellites had the power every Protestant would be banished—to Canada—and the speaker felt that they would, in that case get a hearty welcome (Cheers) but they didn't mean to come (renewed Cheers). What Ireland wanted was justice and the British Parliament could be trusted to give that. In proof the speaker recited the beneficial legislation England had given Ireland, and for the past hundred years she had not only dealt justly but generously with Ireland. The idea that an Irish parliament could do better was monstrous, Gladstone distrusted the Irish parliament when he provided in his bill for the safety of the judges. He provided for the protection of landlords from the tender mercies of an Irish parliament by the scheme to buy them out for two millions of money; and he should have provided protection to all the Protestants who had not bowed the knee to King Parnell, from whom they would get but crude justice. Irish parliament meant confiscation of all Protestant property, sacrifice of all Protestant interests, —and they never would submit to it till the right hand had lost its cunning. (Cheers.) Don't think that we are at all afraid. (Cheers and laughter.) All they needed to bring the Parnellites to reason was to show a firm front. History showed in its tales of massacres, etc., that Protestants could not trust an Irish parliament. This was true of the parliament of 1641, 1688 and 1798. The Roman Catholics of to-day were not as bad as those of past days, but they could not be trusted. (Cheers.) Gladstone had read history backward and through Parnellite spectacles. (Laughter.) The speaker held no hard feelings against Roman Catholics, but when he was asked to trust them that was too much. He hadn't the slightest intention of submitting to Parnellite home rule. The speaker defended himself against the accusation that he had incited the Belfast riots and showed that he had done his best to restore and preserve peace and order. To put Protestants under Home Rule was to make them hewers of wood and drawers of water. But sooner than submit they would commit their cause to the God of battles, and should have not only the sympathy but the help of the sturdy right hand hand of their co-religionists in every part of the empire, who would never permit that they should be trampled in the dust by men whose only object is the humiliation of the British Empire. (Cheers.)

Mr. Smith's Speech.

Mr. SMITH, who was introduced by the chairman, on rising, was greeted with applause. He said it was desirable he should make himself and position known. He was a representative of the Ulster Anti-Repeal Union, which was a loyal and patriotic party. His object was to discuss the Irish question, or Home Rule question, which was being agitated in Canada as well as in England and Ireland. He wished to meet the question fairly and squarely, so that a man of judgment would be able to judge for himself of the merits of the contentions of both parties. He proposed to take the views of his opponents for the foundation of his remarks. Mr. Gladstone had said that he could not help recognising the demand of 84 Parnellites, who represented three-fourths of the people of Ireland, when they asked for Home Rule, and consequently prepared his bill, which was rejected by the people. If the Parnellites represented three-fourths of the people of Ireland, there would be some foundation for Mr. Gladstone's stand and action. He contended that the Parnellites did not represent three-fourths, one-half, or one-quarter of the people of Ireland, nor not even themselves, but only Charles Stewart Parnell. In political campaigns it was customary for candidates for election to office to address their constituents on the question at issue, and to state what they proposed to support, and the electors used their franchise subject to his stand. Only one Parnellite was known to have addressed his constituency, and the other 83 Parnellites were RETURNED ON NO ISSUE.

The Parnellites intimated that the object of the Land League was to secure for the tenantry the property of the landlords, on the principle that the occupiers should be the owners. This was readily accepted by the people, and it was not strange that the Land League had so general a hearing, and even the people of the north of Ireland dropped in the trap, in the hope of personal gain and benefit. The elections coming forward in this way the Parnellites had no right to say that they were the representatives of Ireland's will. The Irish people claimed that their object was to free the Irish people from the eleventh hour of the Empire. He held that men who were striving for liberty should be free themselves, which not one of them was. They before being selected for the House, agreeing that if elected, they would sit, not and vote with the Irish party, and to resign if they did not keep the pledge. According to their own declaration, they were dishonored with manacles worse than any that ever degraded a negro slave. Here the speaker related a case that came before his own observation, which showed the power Parnell had over his followers. Mr. Lynch, a Roman Catholic, was nominated for Galway, as member for the Parnellite party. Mr. Biggar and Mr. Healy, prominent in the party, came into the county and advocated the course of Mr. Lynch, landing him to the skies, and cursing Capt. O'Shea—not far away. Suddenly Parnell appeared upon the scene, and issued orders that Mr. Lynch should retire, and Capt. O'Shea was nominated Parnellite candidate. Healy, Biggar and Lynch, subservient to Parnell, dutifully retired and O'Shea was elected. Parnell said "You have heard my commandment and have obeyed; the question you have settled is that I am leader and that

I AM TO BE OBEYED.

Would any man with sense say that O'Shea represented Galway, in the face of such proceedings? He considered O'Shea the representative of Parnell, who had to do as he was told. Biggar himself characterized the Parnellites as machines to do Parnell's bidding. This he thought was sufficient proof that the Parnellites do not represent three-fourths of the people of Ireland, and not even themselves. Lord Brown, in a quotation given, characterized men so influenced as jobbers, who only did their patron's will, and not the representatives of the people.

Supposing that the Parnellites did represent three-fourths of the people of Ireland on the Home Rule question. In the first place it did not follow that the request of the majority be acceded to when they asked for what was wrong. The demand of the Parnellites was separation from England, to cut asunder the links that bind Ireland to England. The declaration of Davitt was, that the Parnellite agitation was identically the same as all Irish agitations since 1800. With regard to these agitations he would confine himself to his own time. He remembered the O'Connell agitation. O'Connell was an able orator and was honest. He had not the best of the agitators of to-day, and openly asked for the repeal of the union. Michael Davitt said Ireland would not be free until a separation of the kingdoms was effected. The Young Ireland scheme was as pronounced against the unity of the empire, while the Fenians also agitated for the separation of Ireland from the empire in a manner which the audience knew something of. The Fenians wanted to cast off everything English from the Irish soil, while the Invincibles went still further and wanted everything Protestant swept from the land. Mr. Gladstone could not see this because he looked at the question through Parnellite spectacles. John Biggar claimed that no man was Irish except a Catholic. Biggar himself only became a Catholic when twenty-four years of age. He was born in Ireland of Irish parents, and in the name of Heaven he would like to know to what nationality he belonged before he became a Catholic? Perhaps a mermaid. The speaker claimed to be an Irishman, but, according to Biggar, he was not. Parnell claimed that his agitation was practically the same as those of the O'Connell, the Invincibles, and the Fenians. In referring to the disadvantages of the minority in the event of a parliament in Ireland, he held that a description of such a parliament should be taken from the promoters of it. Mr. Finnerty, at the Chicago convention, declared that Peter Fitzgerald was his friend, and was the biggest Fenian in the country. The representative Parnellites sat at the convention and therefore by not opposing the matters endorsed what was said by the Fenians. Parnell had himself said that he would not be satisfied until the last link that bound Ireland to England was severed When he denied this statement he deconsidered the truth. (Cheers.) He would like to know how Dr. Burns accounted for this. Finnerty said if he had his way he would sacrifice every Englishmen who came upon Irish soil. Yet his party claimed to be loyal to the Crown. John Bright, in the House of Commons said to Parnell's face, in speaking of the Parnellites and Land Leaguers, that they were the agency of terror, murder and rapine in Ireland, while Mr. Chamberlain said their object was the

OVERTHROW OF THE EMPIRE.

Mr. Gladstone said the essence of the union was to make what was two before, one, but his Home Rule bill was exactly opposite. It was a bill of separation. The Parnellites asked for $5, and were offered $2. This they accepted with a good grace, but say they will go on till they get the other $3. The Fenians and Land Leaguers, who are one and the same, say that when Parnell gives up they will follow up the cause till the last tie that binds Ireland to England is severed. Supposing the demands of the Parnellites were just, the speaker contended that the character of the Parnellites made them totally unfit for leaders of a great cause. Mr. Gladstone had characterized them as steeped to the lips in treason, and even committed a number of them to prison and it was a pity he did not keep them there. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach characterised the Irish party as those who were able to put down the strife in Ireland, and the Parnellites said they gloried in the truth of the charge. Canadians were told that the Irish wanted local government similar to that enjoyed in Canada. Home Rule would not be local government, as it would commit the majority to the care of men who have their animosity. They were told that the Irish were a downtrodden people, but this was a downright lie, as they enjoyed every privilege open to an Englishman or Scotchman. There was no disadvantage, save, probably, in imperial taxation, towards which England and Scotland paid far more than Ireland. They labored under no disabilities he knew of, as the Irish had the whole run of the empire and equal rights with any.

He spoke in favor of coercion, which he held was what Ireland required, which might be abolished when the law-breakers gave up breaking the law. He hoped that God might grant that Ireland's wrongs might be swept away and that the day would come when all would work harmoniously for the common good. The Loyalists and they were called rebels. They were loyal to the Queen and constitution and claimed the rights of British subjects. They united to oppose Home Rule, Parnell legislation, and rebel against disorder, assassination and murder, and would die rather than fly when the unity of the Empire was at stake. They had helped against Fenians and Invincibles and were ready to enlist again. (Applause.) Here the speaker asked his hearers to consider whether they would assist in dragging the British flag to the dust, or by resolutions show that they are in favor of British connection and the unity of the Empire, and after an eloquent and impressive appeal for support in the loyal cause, asked his hearers to do their duty in the light of the King of Kings and God of God. He took his seat amid tumultuous applause.

WOULD NOW BE RULED BY PARNELL,

Rev. L. Tovell then moved, seconded by Rev. R. P. Torrance, the following RESOLUTION.

"This meeting assembled hereby places on record its uncompromising opposition to every thing which would tend to dismember the integrity and unity of the British Empire and hereby tenders its hearty support and loyal co-operation in all lawful measures taken to preserve the same.

"This meeting also expresses the earnest conviction that some remedial legislation is desirable in order to mitigate the condition of part at least of the Irish people and there by consolidate the affections and sympathies of all loyal and patriotic British Subjects throughout the Globe, and is confident that out of the wisdom, honor and justice of this great Empire will be found a true and peaceful solution of the "Irish Problem."

This meeting further desires to sincerely thank the Rev. Dr. Kane and Mr. George Hill Smith, delegates sent from the "Loyal Ulster Anti-Repeal Union" of Ireland, for their very able and instructive addresses and to express our hearty approval with every constitutional method adopted in striving to maintain the Empire in its entirety."

He said he had great pleasure in listening to the eloquent representatives of the Ulster Loyalists, and also in moving the resolution, but he would rather that Mayor Stevenson or Mr. John Carnegie, who were on the platform, and who were mixed up in politics, had made the motion. But when asked, he could not refuse, as his sympathies were entirely in accordance with the sentiments of the resolution.

Mr. MCWILLIAMS said as anonymous writer in the Review (a pronounced Anti-Home Rule organ) had stated that they were trying to throw cold water upon the meeting by introducing too much Orangeism, but he would take the liberty of introducing a little more Orangeism by introducing Bro. Johnson, Grand Master of Eastern Ontario.

Mr. JOHNSTON was greeted with cheers. He gave a description of a Home Rule demonstration he had seen in Ireland. In concluding he intimated to the audience that if any of his hearers had any spare cash to give away, to be devoted to the interest of the Loyalists, they might hand the money to Mayor Stevenson, Mr. J. B. McWilliams, or Mr. John Carnegie, who were authorized to receive subscriptions.

The motion was put and carried by a unanimous standing vote.

REV. DR. KANE, on behalf of himself and his colleague, thanked the audience for the kind expressions contained in the resolution, and for the encouraging remarks of the mover, but he thought that when they were advocating remedial legislation for Ireland, they might also include England and Scotland.

The CHAIRMAN said he was pleased to notice that one of the prominent politicians of the town, Mr. John Carnegie, M. P. P., had backbone enough to come on the platform.

The band played the National Anthem, and the meeting was brought to a close.

TORCHLIGHT ESCORT.

When the delegates left the hall they were again met by the Orangemen, who formed in procession, headed by the band and with lighted torches, conducted them to their hotel.

SATRUDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1886.

VOLUME OF TRADE

CONTINUED IMPROVEMENT NOTED AT MOST CENTRES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Special telegrams to Bradstreet's report a continued full volume of general business. At most cities the full volume of commercial transactions already noted exceeds the totals at like periods in immediately preceding years and in nearly all instances meet the more conservative of the hopeful anticipations reported within two months past. The principal dry goods centres report no unfavorable features, notwithstanding the slight check to distribution at some points. Stocks of cottons are light at the interior and woolens are expected to advance in price during the next season. Raw wool is remarkably strong and prices are again higher with movement to manufacturers heavy. The belief appears general that the American clip is short and Australian is certainly worth more abroad than here. There is less satisfaction found in the tone of the grain market than elsewhere. Receipts at the North West have been very heavy. Export demand has been checked and speculation is in favor of lower figures.

THE KNIGHT TEMPLARS.

Election and Installation of Officers—Meeting of the Eastern Stars.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 24. At the Knights Templar Grand Encampment this morning the Most Eminent Grand Master made the following appointments: Sir Knight the Rev. John G. Webster of New York, Very Eminent Grand Prelate; Sir Knight John R. Parson of Missouri, Very Eminent Grand Standard Bearer; Sir Knight Nicholas Van Slick of Rhode Island, Very Eminent Grand Sword Bearer; Sir Knight N. P. Ruckle of Indiana, Very Eminent Grand Warden; Sir Knight E. F. Warren of Nebraska, Very Eminent Grand Captain of the Guard. The installation of officers and report of the committee on time and place for holding the next Grand Encampment were postponed. The report of the Committee on Grievances and Appeals was discussed, but definite action was deferred.

The triennial communication of the Order of the Eastern Star has held three sessions, at which formal reports of the officers were made and committees appointed. This morning department reports were received and referred.

The afternoon session of the Grand Encampment brought the business of the body to a close. On reassembling after dinner the discussion of the ritual, which had consumed most of the morning's session, was resumed and occupied the attention of the Encampment a large share of the afternoon. The celebrated Michigan question was decided, the action of the State Commandery being almost unanimously sustained.

After the ritual had been disposed of the appointive officers were installed. Washington was fixed upon as the place and the second week in October, 1889, as the time for holding the next triennial conclave. This was the last business before the encampment, and ag its conclusion final adjournment was taken.

CHICAGO'S DISEASED CATTLE.

Some to be Slaughtered and Some to be Sold for Beef.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—Messrs. Pearsons and McChesney of the Live Stock Commission, which has been investigating pleuro-pneumonia in this city, had a consultation this forenoon with the officials of the Stock Yards Company. The conclusion reached was that all beef which passed the proper inspection and was pronounced not diseased might be sold. The Live Stock Commission expects that within a week quarantine against Chicago beef will be declared by the States of Iowa and Wisconsin. Mr. Pearsons said in answer to a question as to what would be done with the cattle: "We intend to have every one of them slaughtered, and we will make a separate inspection of the lungs of each of the animals. Those which show signs of pleuro will be burnt up, but the others will be sold for beef for whatever is bid for them."

LORD ROSEBERRY'S WHEN.

He Looks Forward to Gloomy Times for the World's Great Metropolis.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—Lord Rosebery, speaking at Linlithgow to-night, said he thought that no greater calamity could befall the country than the continual ruining of the provinces by the absorption of the best labor into the great cities, especially London. He feared that when the enormous mass of people in the Metropolis should become unmanageable the authorities would find it too late to deal with the problem.

UNFOUNDED STORIES

Of Disorder and Failures of the Fisheries in Newfoundland.

MONTREAL, Sept. 24. The Gazette this morning says: "Our Newfoundland correspondent, Rev. Mr. Harvey, telegraphed yesterday as follows:—Reports of failure of the fisheries and probable destitution are grossly exaggerated. The fishery has been poor in some places and in others good. The colony requisite able to provide for any cases of destitution. No alarm is felt about the future."

Cholera Among the Hogs.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Late information received at the Agricultural Department regarding the condition of hogs is that in Illinois and Indiana cholera prevails generally. In the former state heavy losses are reported in several counties. In Ohio and Michigan the condition of animals is fair. In some parts of Wisconsin farmers are afraid to keep hogs on account of cholera and reports from Iowa are of a similar character in some cases. Cholera, pinkeye and measles are reported from Missouri and Nebraska the condition is considerably below an average. Kansas and Kentucky hogs are generally in good condition.

Made Out of Whole Cloth.

OTTAWA, Sept. 24.—Silence is now no longer the ruling but the report telegraphed from here about the proposed new treaty with the States is a pure fabrication, the inventions likely of the many unscrupulous correspondents who chronicled the recent shooting affair at Labrador. The report "that all the terms of the treaty" it is known could be published from Ottawa treating the matter of whales has been highly discredited in such like correspondence as the present dispatch. It is currently reported that the Government contemplate proceedings to confiscate the guns and boats from sealers, as concerning which no action has been taken.

A NEAT CONCOCTION.

AN OTTAWA SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT FABRICATES A TREATY.

BOSTON, Sept. 24.—An Ottawa despatch to the Globe says: After repeated petitions to the Imperial Government a reciprocity treaty was drawn up at the office of the Foreign Secretary and by him transmitted to the Premier, Sir John A. Macdonald, at Ottawa. The document arrived about four days ago, and when Sir Charles Tupper returned from Nova Scotia, it was submitted as a cabinet meeting. The following is the first clause of the proposed treaty:

Her Majesty, Victoria, Queen of Great Britain, being especially desirous to avoid any further misunderstanding with the Government of the United States of America between their respective subjects and citizens, as to the rights of fishing along and on the coasts of British North America, guaranteed by article 1 of a convention between Great Britain and the United States of America, signed at London on the 20th day of October, 1818, which said article recites that there article 1, treaty of 1818); and being desirous as well to regulate the commerce and navigation between the respective countries of the two high contracting parties and their respective territories and peoples, and especially as regards Her Majesty's possessions in British North America and the United States, in such manner as to render the same reciprocally beneficial and advantageous, have respectively named plenipotentiaries to confer and agree; that is to say, Her Majesty Victoria, Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and Empress of India, and Lord Lansdowne, Governor-General in and over all Her Majesty's provinces on the continent of North America and in and over the Island of Prince Edward, and His Excellency the President of the United States of America, and Thomas F. Bayard, Secretary of State of the United States, who, having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found in good due form, have agreed upon the following articles with a view to so beneficial an object:

To remove, so far as may be possible at the present moment, the obstacles which impede the commercial relations between the two countries, it is agreed by the high contracting parties that in addition to the liberty enjoyed at present by the United States of America and the fishermen thereof by the above mentioned convention of October 20, 1818, of taking, drying and curing fish on certain coasts of the colonies of British North America, shall now, in common with the subjects of Her Britannic Majesty, have the liberty to take fish of every kind excepting shell fish on the coast and shores, as well as in the bays, harbors and creeks of Canada and of the several islands thereto adjacent, without restrictions as to distance from the main land, upon the shores or coasts of Canada and the islands thereof, for the purpose of drying their nets and curing their fish; provided, they arrange by special agreement for such purpose with the owners of private property along such coasts and harbors and do not interfere with the British fishermen in the peaceful use and possession of any part of such coast in their occupancy for the same purpose. It is also understood that the privileges above granted apply solely to the seafishing, and that shad and salmon fisheries, and all rivers and the mouths thereof are hereby reserved exclusively for English fishermen.

Then follows a further agreement, fixing a way in which all disputes as to places reserved shall be settled and defined, substantially the same as in the treaty of June 5, 1854.

Article 2. And it is further agreed by and between the high contracting parties that British subjects shall have the right, in common with the inhabitants of the United States, to take fish of every kind, excepting shell fish, on the eastern sea coasts and shores of the United States, north of the thirty-eighth parallel of north latitude and on the shores of the several islands thereto adjacent, and in the bays, creeks and harbors of the said sea coasts and shores of the United States and in the district above defined, without restriction as to distances, with permission to land, cure, and dry fish upon the said coasts and shores of the United States, under the same provisions as guaranteed to American fishermen on the shores and coasts of British North America as provided by article 1. It is also understood and agreed that the abovementioned liberty applies only to sea fishing, and that shad and salmon fisheries and all rivers and mouths of rivers are hereby reserved exclusively for fishermen of the United States.

Article 3. It is agreed that the articles enumerated in the schedule hereto annexed, being the growth and product of the aforesaid British colonies or of the United States, shall be admitted into each country free of duty.

Trade Reciprocity.

Schedule—Grain, flour and breadstuffs of all kinds; animals of all kinds; fresh, cured and smoked meats; fish of all kinds, fresh or salted; undried fruits; dried fruits, cotton, wool, seed, and vegetables; oil of all kinds; products of fish and poultry eggs; hides, tanned skins, fur skins or tails; undressed stone or marble in crude or finished state; slate; butter, cheese, tallow, lard, horns, manure, salt; ores, or metals of all kinds; coal, pitch turpentine, ashes; timber and lumber of every kind, round, hewed, or sawed, manufactured in whole or in part; boats and shoes; agricultural implements or farming tools; firewood, plants, shrubs, or trees; cotton or woolen goods of all kinds, when manufactured into clothing; poke, wool, fish oil, rice, broom corn, and bark; unmanufactured tobacco, rags, flax, hemp and tow, unmanufactured; dyestuffs of all kinds; gypsum, ground or unground, hewn or unwrought; lime or grindstones, wooden, china, and earthenware; books, musical compositions, prints and sculpture; rice, raw cotton

Article 4.—In all that regards exportations, without distinction as to place from whence arriving, or as to destination, and in all that regards the facilities and drawbacks which the legislation of the two countries has established or may establish, the two high contracting parties reciprocally, insure to each other rational treatment.

Article 5. Citizens of the United States shall have the right to navigate the River St. Lawrence and all canals in Canada with their vessels, boats and crafts, as freely and on the same terms as the subjects of, Her Britannic Majesty; British subjects having an equal right to freely navigate Lake Michigan with their vessels, boats and crafts.

Article 6. The provisions and stipulations of the foregoing articles apply to New Foundland, so far as applicable to that colony, if the Provincial Parliaments and Congress of the United States pass laws for carrying the treaty into effect. The treaty to take effect as soon as the laws respecting it shall have been passed by the Imperial Parliament of Great Britain and the Provincial Parliaments of the colonies thereof on the one hand, and the Congress of the United States on the other. Such power having been given, the treaty to remain in force for twenty years, after which it may be terminated by giving one years notice by either of the high contracting parties the present treaty to be duly ratified within one years the mutual exchange of ratifications to take place at London.

The treaty has not yet been signed by either country, and important modifications may be made therein.

THE CHARTER OAK.

President Bartholomew's Defalcation Two Millions.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 24.—The developments in connection with the defalcation of President G. M. Bartholomew of the Charter Oak Life Insurance Company have caused the most intense anxiety in this community. The reports that the sum of his criminality may reach $2,000,000, and the fact that they will certainly exceed half a million under the most favorable future management of the assets, has created a nervous feeling of distrust in all financial institutions and among the many heavy investors of capital in this state. Three large companies are reported to be involved in the defalcation: the Hartford Silk Company, the Mims Manufacturing Company, and the Schuyler Electric Light Company.

The report that the Holyoke Water Power Company is seriously involved is not credited, as that organization has been very prosperous. Every effort has been made to ascertain the whereabouts of the defaulter, and while many believe he is in this city or its immediate vicinity, the prevailing impression is that he has fled to Canada. The crime is of greater magnitude in the financial way than any heretofore committed in Hartford. As the defaulter always enjoyed the confidence of our citizens, the surprise and regret is the more pronounced.

The preliminary proceedings were taken yesterday in the Probate Court on motion of the Phœnix National Bank, which has a claim of $10,000, to put Bartholomew in insolvency.

George M. Bartholomew is in Montreal. He telegraphed to his family from there on Wednesday.

IN AFFRAY WITH MOONLIGHTERS.

One Probably Fatally Wounded and Six Others Arrested.

DUBLIN, Sept. 24. The police last night ran down and surprised a party of moonlighters at Feale Bridge, County Kerry. A fight ensued in which one of the moonlighters was shot dead and six taken prisoners. The affair has caused much excitement throughout Kerry.

Particulars show that three constables towards midnight had concealed themselves in ambush, a short distance from the Feale Bridge police hut. Not long after the constables were in hiding they noticed the moonlighters approaching. The constables ordered the moonlighters to halt in the Queen's name. The moonlighters replied with a volley from their rifles. The police then fired buckshot at the moonlighters, who were in plain view of the officers. One of the moonlighters fell. He was not instantly killed, as at first reported, but was badly wounded. The others turned and fled. The police pursued them, menacing them with threats of shooting, and succeeded in overtaking and manacling six, who, with the wounded man, were taken to jail. The police are scouring the county for the others.

The police were awaiting the coming of the moonlighters in expectation of an attack upon a farmer's house. Subsequently a man was shot dead while crossing Feale Bridge. The murderers escaped.

MURDER ON A R. R. CAR.

A Case That Resembles the Maller Murder of Twenty Years Ago.

LONDON, Sept. 24. A sensation has been produced by the discovery of a mysterious tragedy in the compartment of a car. When the Gracechurch train from the city on the Underground Railway arrived at Queensford Station last evening a newly-painted blood dripping from the compartment of a first-class carriage. He raised an alarm and a gentleman was found lying on the floor of the compartment. He was unconscious and blood was flowing freely from his head. On his forehead was a deep wound four inches in length. This had evidently been made with an instrument sharp and heavy. The scalp was not only cut clean through but the skull crushed in and the brains were protruding. On the man's person were found a gold watch and chain and some finger rings, none of which had been disturbed, but there was very little money. The man was at once conveyed to a hospital. He is still unconscious and his condition precarious. It has been learned that his name is Moritz A. Fischer, and that he is the head of the house of M. A. Fischer & Co., foreign agents of 35 Carter Lane, E. C. The police have as yet been unsuccessful in gaining a clue to the cause of the murderous attack or to the identity of his assailant or assailants.

R. W. MUNCASTER,

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1886.

THERE is a possibility of the price of farmers' produce—at least wheat—stiffening in price. That is if the advices from all parts of Russia indicating that the wheat harvest in that country is a total failure, are to be believed. As a large portion of the grain supply of Europe comes from this source, this should be good news for the wheat interests of Canada.

THAT balance of trade the restoring of which was, according to Sir Leonard Tilley, to be the keystone of Canadian prosperity under the National Policy, appears to be in a bad way. Canada's imports from Great Britain, according to the Ottawa Free Press, increased by $630,000 during the first eight months of the present calendar year, while our exports to the same country decreased by $835,000 in the same period. The decreases in our exports were mainly in horned cattle and cheese. Other exports show favorable symptoms, while the increases in imports are distributed generally.

THE Montreal Herald declares that the Dominion has been brought to "the brink of civil war." It says: "We have said that the crusade against Irishmen in Canada, against the French in Canada, and against the Roman Catholic Church in Quebec MEANS CIVIL WAR, and can mean nothing else. That position we are prepared to hold and to support. And if proof be wanting we have it in the Mail of Monday, where the great Conservative organ of the Dominion on which the Premier of Canada recently passed a glowing eulogy, throws down the gauntlet to nearly one-half the population of the Dominion, and reiterates its war-cry, not against the Roman Catholic Church in Quebec only, but against the Roman Catholic Church throughout the Dominion!"

AT Stayner, Hon. E. Blake, the honored leader of the Liberal party, said, in referring to Sir Richard Cartwright: "He is not a man to whom a seat in Parliament, however honorable, is essential. He has in the course of his public duty made many sacrifices of private, personal, and family interests. He has work to do in the world, whether he be in Parliament or not. He has more than once suggested to me a temporary retirement as convenient to him personally, but I have strongly opposed any such plan. I hope and trust that the Reformers of Ontario will consider it their duty and privilege to provide him with a seat, and a safe seat, not because he is one of our strongest combatants, but just because he is one whose services I want throughout the constituencies during the stress of the general election, so that instead of fighting the battle in some one riding, he may fight at large all along the line as I do myself on these occasions." This is just what the Tory party, which dreads Sir Richard Cartwright's great abilities, do not want.

THIS is the Advertiser's opinion of Sir John's London speech:—"Sir John Macdonald made a long speech in London on Thursday, and it is worth while for the public to consider what it contained. It was not the speech of a man who was looking forward hopefully to victory. It is characterized neither by vigor of thought nor vigor of expression. It was the speech of one whose resources had been exhausted, and whose prospects were discouraging, and who appealed to the public to pity him because he was an old man and would not trouble them very much longer. We are afraid that the public will not be moved by any feeling of sympathy in favor of the Prime Minister. No one has been less influenced in this way than Sir John Macdonald himself. His course has been one of cool calculation, and whatever promised success was undertaken with an utter disregard to the public interests. Sir John Macdonald has never paid any regard to the rules of honorable party warfare. His treatment of Mr. Mowat, his conduct towards the Opposition in the House of Commons, his legislation in his own behalf, all testify against him, and exclude him from the list of those who may fairly ask the public to pardon their offences. Sir John Macdonald is not a penitent political sinner; he is a hardened offender, who is at this moment as ready to avail himself of the most outrageous weapons of party warfare as at any former period of his political career."

Tree Planting Scheme.

The Metropolitan Public Garden Association of London wants every householder to plant a tree. As there are more than 250,000 houses in London, this plan would soon give the city plenty of shade.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

SIR,—In reply to a communication marked "advertisement" in your paper of the 9th Sept., inst., signed by one, F. S. Grist, with the comprehensive heading of the "British Empire Overhauled," (a fancied prelude to its downfall) in which he attempts to explain an advertisement of the company I represent here, published in the ordinary way, giving the results of profits, etc., believed by us to be correct and fair.

This gentleman's "opening address" is prefaced by a sneering reference to this office as being a "small life company." However small the British Empire may be in comparison to the larger figures of its American competitor, its assets invested in Canadian securities are, and always will be, larger than those of the Mutual Life of New York. Its funds are invested in Canadian bonds and debentures, and on mortgages in the same way that any other Canadian company would invest in Canada, while the deposit and reserve placed in the hands of the Canadian Government by the Mutual Life can only consist of American securities. This, I think, is the main point to be taken into consideration by Canadian insurers. The British Empire invests the whole of its earnings for the Canadian branch in this country, as well as large sums from England, whilst the Mutual Life's object is to take every dollar that it can possibly get out of the country. With regard to the language used by Mr. Grist, it is not worthy of notice from such a source, as the reputation of the British Empire is too well known to be injured by such hasty and uncalled for remarks, as are in Mr. Grist's letter. Nothing in our advertisement was put in or omitted in order to mislead the public, but the attempt to mislead them may safely be laid to the charge of Mr. Grist and not to the figures of the British Empire. The Standard Life does not pay a larger cash dividend than the British Empire; I am glad to be able to give this information to a man who has evidently much to learn.

I would also draw his attention to the fact that our last bonus paid, equalled 22½ per cent. on premiums paid on the life plan, and 15 per cent. on the endowment plans, not 21 per cent. and 14 per cent., as stated by Mr. Grist. With regard to the Mutual Life policy, he evidently does not know what he is talking about, and has got entirely mixed in both that and the two he mentions of the British Empire. Policy No. 51,775 (in the British Empire) which he quotes, is on a life, age 34, not 45, the annual premium per $1,000 being $26.40, not $35.44 as he states, and on this policy no bonus has been given at all, as it was only issued in 1885, whereas he asserts that the cash dividend was $7.50 and bonus addition $17.25. This self-evidently false statement may be taken as a standard of the reliability of Mr. Grist's subsequent assertions. If, in quoting policy No. 51,775, he has made a mistake for 50,775, he is again wrong, as the age at issue of this policy is 31 and the premium per $1,000 $28.31, and the cash and reversionary bonuses, as stated in our advertisement, are quite correct. The writer's ignorance is once more shown by his statement, "The reader should understand that in all the life companies the older the insured is, and the more premiums paid, the larger the dividend should be." This is not the case, as there are numerous methods of distributing bonuses, which would take too much space to explain in a newspaper correspondence.

With regard to Mr. Grist's language, it would probably lead to very unpleasant results to himself and to the welfare of his business, were it not for a feeling that his mis-statements and language are due more to ignorance than malice. Probably the firm hold which the British Empire has in this locality may be distressing to Mr. Grist, but he will find in the pursuance of life insurance business, that temperate language will always command more respect from the public, and from his competitors, than rash, newspaper statements for which there is not the slightest foundation.

Neither the British Empire nor its agent at Peterborough, has any quarrel with the Mutual Life, and their attack over the signature of their agent here, was quite uncalled for. Being a new comer to Peterborough, he is evidently desirous of attracting attention to himself and his company. We would direct attention to the PROGRESS in the profits of the Mutual Life. Here is one example of this retrograde "progress":—

Policy No. 189,324. Age 35. Ordinary Life —$5000. Issued March 8th, 1878. Premium $131.90.

1883, bonus $481.00; cash value,...$196.25.
1885, bonus $194.00; cash value,...$85.40.

We can submit figures shewing the falling off in the dividends of the Mutual Life to be over 50 per cent. in the last eleven years.

In the six years, 1880 to 1885, the Mutual Life's dividend averaged 22.7 per cent.

We shall give another illustration. Take three periods of six years each:—

	Per cent. of profits earned to premiums received for insurance.	Amount to each $1,000 insured one year or more.
1st, 1868—1873.	34.2	$90.67
2nd, 1874—1879	27.8	13.43
3rd, 1880—1885	22.7	9.27

The Mutual Life's dividends have fallen off annually since 1866, and are now (1886) lower than ever. Can the same be said of the British Empire with any figures to back it up? I think not.

We have plenty more illustrations to show the progress (backward) in the profits of the Old Mutual Life, but we are not desirous of prolonging any newspaper discussion as the demands of our business do not permit of our wasting time advertising every new agent who seeks to gain notice by disparaging the standing of a respectable rival Company, and so far as this office, is concerned, the matter which is only entered into on our part in self defense, must be considered as ended.

Yours &c.,
E. E. HENDERSON,

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 37 Granville Street, Halifax, N.S.

N. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.

DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians, Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself, nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak, wasted, night sweats very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spirometer and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 30 to 35 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a debt of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment.

I remain, yours truly,
CAPT. WM. SLATER.

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1886.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two spiroless trusses made in York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my Hernia. Have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds so perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

at was written in a tone of affection and confidence, and it revealed some of the events which had occurred at the half-pay Breakfast. As the letter had been written [illegible] through four days, his despatch [illegible] not much to do. But the surprise and relief that came to told, so far as it concerned herself, was good. Mr. [illegible] she said, had always considerably during the last two or three days. The passion and irritability which had marked his temper for many days had almost entirely [illegible] placed. The [illegible] more like his dear old self, and he no longer thinks me to the stranger, cruel way in which he did at first. O, I do pray so earnestly that this happy change may continue. God grant that he may yet give me back his love, and that the cloud which has arisen between us may pass away. You know, dear doctor, what I mean when I say that—or rather you know what I do not mean. I shall never grieve untrue to Mr. Preston. I have promised him to be faithful, and though I may never marry at all, I shall never marry any but him."

My eyes sparkled with delight as I read the dear words. I could tell that both Brankcome and Penlyne were watching me, but I could not restrain the smile of joy that broke upon my lips.

"Where can he be?" she continued. "I am surprised that I should not have heard from them again, and sometimes I fear that he is ill, or that some misfortune of another kind has befallen him. When you return to England do befriend me, dear doctor, and try to ascertain where he is. I am forced to trust everything to your hands now. You will not desert me, will you? There was a postscript to the letter which I confess I read with little interest compared with that with which I perused those passages that more immediately concerned myself. It ran as follows:

"I should have told you sooner that my uncle had not been very well of late. He has not had the doctor again, however. He is taking the medicine the doctor prescribed when he first saw him."

I hoped that Brankcome would allow me to keep this letter, in which there was so much that had the deepest interest for me. But I was disappointed. When he saw that I had read it through he held out his hand and received it from me.

"Well, Mr. Fenton," he said presently, "I am going to reason with you. Daisy's letter proves, I think, that Mr. Haulsverer is recovering his senses. You, who have seen him when in his ordinary state of mind, must know how gentle and amiable he is when free from mental excitement or disturbance. I want to plead with you for his forgiveness. Can you not see that when he is himself again there will be no man living who will be more horrified at the thought of the outrage of which he has made you the victim than he will be?"

I assented to what Brankcome said.

"Well, then, be generous to him. Remember his close connection with Daisy, and forgive him for his conduct, not merely by word of mouth, but in your inmost heart."

"I am quite ready to do that; indeed, I thought I had already done so."

"No, there is only one way in which you can show at this moment that you are not unforgiving. That is by remaining on the yacht. Yes, I see that you do not like the suggestion, but before you reject it consider one or two points. First, then, you will unquestionably show a magnanimous spirit which can hardly fail to impress Mr. Haulsverer in your favor when he recovers entirely from the excitement from which he has lately suffered; next, you will be complying with what I know under such circumstances would be Daisy's wish. Do you not see in her letter how she recommends you to my protection? Well, I am ready to protect you, so far as I can do so, if you will follow my advice. Lastly, I believe that you will be able to get to England sooner by remaining with us than by any other way."

I answered—and was lost. The truth is that I had no grievance against Brankcome or Penlyne. The former I had learned to like immensely and to trust entirely. The latter was one of the most interesting of Englishmen I had ever met. But he had carefully kept out of my way since my release, and the ship was large enough to permit him to avoid me entirely if he wished to do so. If I took [illegible] abandoned hand of Brankcome had declared that I would finish my voyage as I had begun it, on board the Golden Hawk.

Three days we lay in the harbor at Bodo. This is not a story of Arctic travel, and therefore I shall not dwell upon the novel and interesting sights which I witnessed during our stay in the little port. Neither the novelty nor the interest of the thing, however, prevented my rejoicing openly when at last we started on our return journey. Thirty-six hours after quitting Bodo we [illegible] another [illegible] Drontheim. We [illegible] was the [illegible] There was a branch of Messrs Isaac for Forsyth's and one or two for Brankcome. But there was no further news from Gosse Harbor.

"Let us go to the Hotel d'Angleterre," said Brankcome, when the first duties of disembarking at the Trondhjem wharf had been performed, and have a bath and the newspapers."

"By all manner of [illegible] with the prospect of Scandinavian [illegible] and [illegible] and before long we were seated in the comfortably furnished coffee-room of that well-known hotel. The friendly waiter brought the latest copy of the Times—[illegible] old—to us and Brankcome, after [illegible] offering it to me, began to peruse it with the hungry avidity of a man who has long been shut off from news of the outer world.

Hopkins and I turned our thoughts elsewhere, and [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] of the world, with the rapid and [illegible] so peculiar to the inhabitants of those [illegible] of Europe [illegible] in the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

A Low Water Complaint.

A Lakefield correspondent complains that the low water at that point sadly interferes with the traffic of the steamers, while "lots of water" is held, at Buckburn. Steamer owners have during the past suffered heavy financial losses, and the inquiry is made how shall the matter be remedied? "Turn the rascals out," is the shortest advice, and though it will be necessary to wait some time for the opportunity, it is the only certain way.

Central Exhibition.

There is every prospect of the Central Exhibition being a great success. The new buildings are completed, and everything is in readiness. Y. M. C. A. Anniversary.

Held in St. Andrew's Church on Friday Evening.

The anniversary of the local branch of the Young Men's Christian Association was held in St. Andrew's Church on Friday evening. The members of the Association and a large number of friends, many of whom were ladies, assembled in the church. Mr. J. W. Flavelle, president of the Association, presided, while on the platform with him were Rev. E. F. Torrance, Rev. F. H. Wallace, B.D., Rev. W. J. Wilson, Rev. A. E. de St. Dalmas, Mr. Geo. E. Williams, secretary of the local Association, and F. J. Wilkie, of Toronto, representative of the International Committee of New York. The meeting was opened with prayer and singing, the latter being led by a male choir of twenty-four voices.

Rev. E. F. Torrance read from sacred Scripture the 42nd Psalm, when the choir sang "Redeemed." The president then called on the secretary, who read his report of the working of the Association during the year, and also the statement of the Financial Committee, showing the indebtedness of the Association and the amount required to carry on the work during the ensuing year.

The choir then sang.

Mr. J. W. Flavelle, in a short and pointed address, showed that the Association had endeavoured to insure against deficit by soliciting subscriptions for three years, but some subscribers left town and others would not renew their subscription, and the Association had fallen into debt. He pointed out the good work being done by the Association, and concluded his remarks by an earnest appeal for aid.

Mr. T. J. Wilkie gave an address on the work of the Association the world over, giving interesting statistics with regard to the progress it was making, and alluded to the good work which had been done by Peterborough men. He pointed out that the community could not afford to let the local branch stop work, and he applied to business men, fathers, mothers and sisters to assist in aiding the Association. While a collection was taken up in aid of the Association, the male choir sang as an anthem "Christ Arose." Rev. Dr. McTavish, of Lindsay, not being able to be present, and the hour being well advanced, the meeting was dismissed, Rev. A. Bell pronouncing the benediction.

At the conclusion of the public meeting the members of the Association met, and with the aid of Mr. Wilkie, devised a plan of action to pursue with regard to securing funds to carry on the work.

District Conference

Of the Young Men's Christian Association, Held in the Local Association Rooms.

FRIDAY MORNING.

The morning services were opened with thanksgiving, when Mr. Craig, of Port Hope, was elected to preside. Mr. Martin Henrman, of Port Hope, read a paper entitled "What Can an Association do in Small Towns?" showing many of the advantages derived from the institution. Mr. T. J. Wilkie gave valuable information as to the manner of conducting the work in small towns, a general discussion following. "The Duty of the Association to the Provincial Committee, by D. A. Budge, of Montreal, was read by Mr. Geo. E. Williams, and afterwards discussed. The question of "How to promote purity among the young men" was discussed at some length, Mr. Wilkie leading and offering many valuable suggestions. An adjournment was then made till 2.30 p.m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The session was opened with devotional exercises, and Rev. Mr. St. Dalmas read a portion of sacred Scripture. Rev. Dr. McTavish followed in an able address on "How can We Strengthen the Ties of the Church Membership on the Part of Young Men?" He suggested making the services more interesting for young men. Mr. Wilkie read an essay on "Evangelistic Services in the Y. M. C. A.," showing how they could be conducted to the best advantage. A paper by General Secretary Brewster, of Owen Sound, entitled "What can our Association do for the Young Men in the Neighbouring Country Districts," was read by Mr. King, which brought the programme to a close. Mr. Geo. E. Williams thanked the delegates from the other associations for their attendance and assistance during the conference. The session and conference were brought to a close, Rev. Mr. Trotter, of Port Hope, pronouncing the benediction.

St. Luke's Harvest Festival.

A Successful Sale, Splendid Supper, and Excellent Entertainment.

St. Luke's Harvest Festival was held yesterday, and like most gatherings in connection with this church, was very successful. A celebration of Holy Communion was held, at 10 a.m., but the evening service, usually observed, was postponed until the opening of the new church.

The ladies of the Sewing Society held a sale of fancy and useful articles from three o'clock in the afternoon, and their efforts were most successful, as at each of the tables a thriving trade was done. Nearly every article was sold, and the moderate prices were constantly alluded to. The ladies in charge were Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. Orde, Mrs. Bradshaw, Mrs. Jackson, and Miss M. E. Peck. A fish pond in the library was under the supervision of Miss Juliet Orde and was most attractive to the young people.

From five o'clock until nearly nine tea was served by a bevy of young ladies, who were kept hard at work by recurring crowds filling the vacant places again and again. The usual fragrant coffee, delicious tea and cakes of every imaginable kind were served bountifully, and all were satisfied at the efforts made to refresh the inner man—unless, perhaps, the hard-worked waiters.

A short musical programme wound up the evening's proceedings. The social features of the entertainment were worthy of note, and those who attended expressed themselves highly satisfied. The net proceeds exceed $100, and the ladies desire to thank all who assisted them in their efforts to refurnish the chancel.

"Some Pumpkins."

Neither the Toronto Industrial nor the Peterborough Central exhibitions will be a patch on the grand exhibition which will be made at the clothing store of Gough, the Wonderful Cheap Man, at the Arcade Buildings. Within the next month the go-ahead Gough has offered a prize of a splendid $12 overcoat to the farmer who will leave at his shop the largest pumpkin between now and Nov. 1st. So, that among the huge stock at Gough's cheap clothing, we shall see a prodigious pyramid of phenomenal pumpkins. Open to the Midland district.

A Visit to Lake Simcoe and Georgian Bay.

Don't forget the excursion by the Grand Trunk railway from Peterborough on Tuesday, September 28th, to Orillia and Midland. Fare for the round trip only $1.25. Tickets good for two days, and until October 4th by paying 50c. extra—this latter privilege being to enable excursionists to avail themselves of the excursion by the palace steamer "F. B. Maxwell" on Thursday to Penetanguishene and Parry Sound, at the low fare of $1 for the round trip. The steamer will pass through the Thousand Isles in Georgian Bay, making the trip one of the most delightful of the season. The Grand Trunk railway will also run a cheap excursion to Kingston, Montreal and Quebec on October 1st and 2nd. Tickets good until the 11th of October. The fares will be low, and will afford a rare chance for business men and others to visit these cities. For full particulars see posters. Every information will be cheerfully given by the local agents, Messrs. Thos. Meanier and W. Brundrette.

A Correction.

The Review in its report of the recent accident to Dr. O'Sullivan in stating that a "slight grade" was the cause of the accident, strays for the fact. Dr. O'Sullivan was not crossing the railway track after the train, but was walking on the track leading back to Ashburnham in order to reach George street, and he did not make a "false step," but stepped on nothing, the plank that formerly crossed the culvert, which is about six or eight feet deep, being wanting. Hence the fall and the accident. Parties in the habit of leaving the train at this point should be careful, especially after dark, as there is danger of similar accidents occurring.

Runaway Accident.

On Thursday night about nine o'clock a horse owned by Mr. W. Ferguson, of Monaghan, ran away from Dr. Bingham's yard. Miss Eva Montgomery, who chanced to be on the street at the time, was not successful in getting out of the way, and was struck by the animal and knocked down, miraculously escaping death. As it was she was severely shaken and had her right foot badly bruised. Friends who were with her assisted her home. She is recovering.

IMPORTANT AUCTION SALE —OF— RIVERDALE PARK

BETTER KNOWN AS

Crawford's Grove, Monaghan.

I have received instructions from ALFRED CRAWFORD, ESQ., to sell by Public Auction

On Wednesday, Sept. the 29th,

that very eligible property known as "Riverdale Park," situated on the banks of the Otonabee River, formerly well known as Crawford's Grove, and situated in the Township of North Monaghan and containing 75 acres. This property will be offered en bloc, and if not thus sold, will be offered in parcels or park lots as laid out in a plan by Mr. Ranney, which can be seen at any time.

This property is only two miles from the business centre of the Town of Peterborough. It can be laid out either for a summer park, picnic grounds or summer residence resort, its situation being admirably adapted for these purposes. An excellent opportunity is here opened for building summer cottages. Business men in town could domicile their families at the park, attend to their business by the day, and spend the evenings with their families—thus enjoying the delights of country life without neglecting business. No more beautiful park lots could be obtained than those contained in this property. The soil is composed of a sharp rich loam top, with clay bottom, possessing excellent virtues for garden purposes. Its proximity to the Otonabee River affords ample opportunity for pleasure or boating, camping, fishing and other recreations.

THE HOMESTEAD

which adjoins the above property to the north, will also be offered at the same time. It is composed of about 13 acres of excellent land, on which there is a good Brick Dwelling House, out-buildings and water privileges. It has a road on two sides, and the river on its front. It may be sold en bloc, or in three parcels—extending from the road to the river.

TERMS.—Ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid down at the time of sale, and sufficient to make one-third in ten days thereafter, when title deeds will be prepared, and a further sum, together with the above, sufficient to make one-half and interest, to be paid in one year from day of sale; the balance in three equal annual instalments, with interest at six per cent per annum.

☞ Further particulars and conditions will be made known at time of sale, or may be had on application to Mr. A. P. Poussette or Mr. A. Crawford, Proprietor.

Sale to take place on the premises and to commence at two o'clock p.m., sharp.

A sketch of the property may be seen in the windows of Messrs. John McClelland, A. T. Davis, and Rush Bros.

PARLIMENT OVER.

IMPERIAL FEDERATION REFERRED TO IN THE SPEECH.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Parliament was prorogued to-day. The Queen's speech refers to the Bulgarian difficulty, stating that all signatories to the Treaty of Berlin are acting together; announces the withdrawal of the Afghan Commission owing to the approach of winter and the appointment of a Commission to inquire into the tenure and purchase of land in Ireland; and concludes with the following indirect reference to Imperial Federation:

I have observed with much satisfaction the interest which, in an increasing degree, is evinced by the people of this country in the welfare of their colonial and Indian fellow-subjects, and I am led to the conviction that there is on all sides a growing desire to draw closer in every practicable way the bonds which unite the various portions of my empire. I have authorised communications to be entered into with the view to fuller consideration of matters of common interest.

Palmists and Non-Palmists.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—With the prorogation of Parliament there is a general scattering of the Cabinet Ministers and prominent members generally. Mr. Gladstone went into the House of Commons but once after his late return from the continent, that being on Monday, when he spoke for Mr. Parnell's Tenant Relief Bill. There were evidences of personal feeling against him shown then that made that visit more or less embarrassing, not to say painful. The interruptions from the government side when he spoke were of the nagging, ill-natured kind that few men can endure with patience. The breach was also made wider between him and an old ally, the Marquis of Hartington, who not only spoke with some severity before the House in opposition to Mr. Gladstone, but had a private conversation with him in the library the same evening, during which there was some very caustic language used on both sides. At the opening of the session just ended Mr. Gladstone met in front of the Speaker's chair the Marquis of Hartington and greeted him with much cordiality, notwithstanding the position taken up against him by the latter in the home rule canvass. Mr. Chamberlain was the only one of the Liberal dissidents toward whom the ex-Premier exhibited a demeanor that indicated any degree of personal feeling. Subsequent events have but served to make personal relations between Mr. Gladstone and the Marquis of Hartington almost, if not quite, as disagreeable. This is but another evidence of the fact that there is no patching up of the quarrel between the Liberals and the Unionist Liberals, and that the gulf between them is for all purposes of practical politics as wide as that between the Liberals and the Tories.

Lord Churchill Bismark's Successor.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The two men who have profited most in the way of reputation by Parliament being prorogued to-day are Lord Randolph Churchill and Mr. Henry Labouchere. Lord Randolph is the hero of the hour among the Conservatives, having exceeded the expectations of the most sanguine of his friends as leader of the House, while Mr. Labouchere has secured most deservedly a prominence he never had before. He has taken the place of Mr. Chamberlain as the Radical leader. Lord Randolph Churchill has thrown young blood and new life into the Conservative party, and the advantage they hold to-day is more attributable to him than to any other single influence. They have not had such a man in the House of Commons since Disraeli.

RUSSIA'S MESSENGER.

Arrival of Gen. Kaulbars at Sofia—England's Scheme.

SOFIA, Sept. 25.—Gen. Kaulbars has arrived here. He was accompanied by a large number of the supporters of M. Saakoff, occupying a dozen carriages, who had gone some distance to meet him.

England's Intrigue.

VIENNA, Sept. 25.—There is good authority for the statement that Lord Iddesleigh, the British Foreign Secretary, is trying to effect a rapprochement between Servia, Bulgaria, Greece and Turkey, and hopes that Austria will favor such an alliance, the formation of which is considered possible owing to the necessity of uniting against a common invader. It's thought the only serious difficulty will be to get Greece to join the alliance.

Prince Alexander's Successor.

SOFIA, Sept. 25.—The assertion is made in political circles that the Grand Subranje will elect King Charles of Roumania Prince of Bulgaria in reward for Roumania's recent friendly attitude. The election of King Charles will, it is thought be agreeable to Europe because is will be calculated to realize the formation of a Balkan federation. It is further asserted that if the Powers do not accept King Charles, Alaska Pasha, or one of the Orlowna princes, or as a final resort the Russian General Ignatieff will be proposed. The state of seige will be raised on Oct. 2 so that the elections may be held.

PLEURO-PNEUMONIA IN ILLINOIS.

A Lack of Funds Interfering With the Work of Suppression.

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—It is stated that a delay will occur in the matter of stamping out the pleuro-pneumonia, caused, primarily, by the insufficiency of funds at the disposal of the Live Stock Commission to meet the cost of compensating the owners of the cattle which it has been decided should be slaughtered, unless the healthy beef is sold. An extra force of men has been detailed to guard the quarantined distilleries at the expense of the United States Government. Chairman Pearson, of the Illinois Board of Live Stock Commissioners, said that no decision would be made to-day, and perhaps not for several days, as to when the slaughter of distillery cattle will take place. He thought the Board would hardly begin the slaughter before they could see their way clear to compensating the owners and disposing of the carcasses in a satisfactory manner.

The Governor of Iowa has prohibited the importation of cattle from Illinois.

The Disease in Ohio.

AKRON, O., Sept. 25.—Pleuro-pneumonia has been discovered on a farm in Norton township, Summit county. Thirteen cattle have already died. The disease is believed to have been imported from Iowa. Precautions have been taken to prevent its spread.

Abundance in the Northwest.

OTTAWA, Sept. 25.—A private letter received in the city from Manitoba states that the crops along the line of the Manitoba & Northwestern Railway have been exceedingly good this year. At Binscarth wheat runs over forty bushels to the acre and oats over seventy bushels. The correspondent says there is a very good feeling among the farmers, and it is believed that next year they will all go in on a considerably larger scale than they have in the past for raising fresh cows and cattle.

THE IRISH LEAGUE.

GEN. SIR REDVERS BULLER URGES ITS SUPPRESSION.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Gen. Sir Redvers Buller has advised the Government that the disturbed state of the districts visited by him is entirely due to the influence of the League. The General advises the suppression of that organization as the only way of restoring tranquility. Should the Government follow the advice of Gen. Buller and proclaim the League it will at the same time prohibit the formation hereafter of any other society of a similar type.

Death of Daly.

DUBLIN, Sept. 25.—It is reported that Daly, the dynamiter, has just died in prison from an attack of inflammation of the bowels. Absolute cruelty is said to have hastened his end. On one recent occasion, while he was suffering acutely, he was compelled by the prison authorities to take a cold bath. He was also forced to wash his own clothes.

Attempt to Create a Scare.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The Eastern Morning News of Hull has received a letter bearing the London postmark and signed "One of Three," announcing that the Fenians intend to burn Hull, and will set fire to the town at twenty different points simultaneously. The writer says he is disgusted with his brother Fenians. He enjoins secrecy upon the editor of the News, saying that the writer will be murdered if the Fenians discover that he divulged the plot.

Were Sanguinary Shooting at Belfast.

BELFAST, Sept. 25.—Soon after midnight this morning a crowd assembled and stoned the police in the Shank Hill district. The police were reinforced and dispersed the mob. The attack upon the police was subsequently renewed and the police fired upon the Rioters. A young man named David Moore was shot through the lungs and was conveyed to the hospital in a dying condition. Twelve constables were severely wounded with stones. Many arrests were made.

More Moonlighters Captured.

DUBLIN, Sept. 25.—The police captured four more of the moonlighters with whom they had a conflict at Feale Bridge on Thursday night, making eleven prisoners captured from the party already. Every one of the four prisoners just captured is badly wounded with buckshot. All of the eleven have been identified as sons of very respectable Kerry county farmers.

BOOMING PRICES IN LONDON.

Operators on Change in London Cautious and Suspicious.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—During the past week discount ruled as 2 to 2½. There is no indication of permanent higher rates. The rise in the Bank of England rate has prevented an outflow of gold but has attracted no bullion. Gold continues to be bought in open market for America. The heavy August shipments of American grain threaten a further gold drain from here, against which there are heavy purchases here at American securities for New York account. The Economist thinks that money must rise, but that the advance will not be rapid or marked. American railroad securities were buoyant during the week under the influence of large New York purchases. Inquiries were made yesterday for large loans to carry stocks bought by investors. Operators here are cautious and look with suspicion upon the renewed boom. The contagion of a rising market, however, will be difficult to resist long. Traffic receipts continue to increase and it is believed there will not be much difficulty in sustaining prices.

ENTERTAINED BY THE SULTAN.

The Duke of Edinburgh and Prince George at Constantinople.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 25.—A brilliant fete was given to-night at the British Embassy here in honor of the Duke of Edinburgh and Prince George of Wales. All the foreign diplomats, including M. Neledoff, the Russian minister, were present. The Imperial band played "God Save the Queen." A banquet was afterwards given in honor of Yielder-Kiosk at which 80 covers were laid. M. Neledoff was one of the guests. The Sultan gave a private audience to the members of the British and Russian embassies together. He subsequently received in a most cordial manner the Duke of Edinburgh and Prince George.

The Duke and Prince subsequently left for Salonica on board the British despatch vessel Surprise.

CANADA FOR CANADIANS.

France Wishes to Secure a Share of Our Commerce.

PARIS, Sept. 25.—The National, commenting on the remarkable display of the products of Canadian industry at the Indian and Colonial Exhibition in London, asks why of the £20,000,000 worth of goods annually exported by Canada, £3,000,000 go to England and only an insignificant portion to France. The article concludes:

"Though the French feeling is still vigorous in Canada the business connection of that country with England is too close to be suddenly snapped. But when France is ready to welcome Canadian commerce to such an extent as will compensate Canada for the loss of her English custom, there will begin an evolution in that country, so dear to France, and whose motto is, Canada for the 'Canadiens.'"

King Luis of Portugal.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The King of Portugal concluded his visit to London Wednesday. He was pointedly neglected by the Royal family, the only member of it who showed him any attention being Prince Edward Victor, the eldest son of the Prince of Wales, who met him at the station. The only entertainment offered him was a luncheon given by the Lord Mayor on Tuesday, when the King responded in English, making a very happy speech, and much better than the one of the Lord Mayor. A fact of some interest mentioned by the Lord Mayor was that King Luis had translated four of the plays of Shakespeare, "Hamlet," "Richard III.," "Romeo and Juliet" and "Othello" into Portugese.

The Underground Railroad Mystery.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Morris A. Fisher, the gentleman who was found unconscious and bleeding in a compartment car on the underground railway Thursday evening, has remained unconscious ever since, and still lies at the hospital. The police have framed a theory that Mr. Fisher acquired the wound on his forehead by coming in contact with the brick work of the tunnel while leaning through curiosity, out of the compartment window to observe the occupants of the adjoining compartment while the train was at full speed.

A Boycotted Protestant Preacher Aided.

DUBLIN, Sept. 25.—At a meeting of Nationalists in Drumagh, Cork, to-day, £20 was subscribed for Mr. Anderson, a Protestant rector, who was recently boycotted by his flock, composed of Loyalists, for having joined the National League.

AN INTERESTING DISCOVERY.

Workmen Excavating at Kaukauna, Wis., come upon Traces of Bygone Days.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 25.—At Kaukauna, Wis., workmen engaged in excavating a sewer came upon the ruins of a stone building at a depth of eight feet. The stone first found bore traces of the workmanship, and was polished. Further digging developed a quantity of ashes, about 25 bushels of which were removed when another wall was struck. The stones were finely fitted, logs being blackened as if by fire and smoke. Others must have been erected to great artificial heat, as they had crumbled into lime. The work was found but four or two above bed rock and shows evidence of workmanship that could have been performed only by a highly civilized race. It must have been done centuries ago, as a large elm tree had grown over the ruins.

A DYNAMITER IN SARNIA.

Arrest of an Hotel-Keeper for Trying to Blow up a Magistrate's House.

SARNIA, Sept. 25.—Charles Hand, hotelkeeper here, was arrested this morning, charged with attempting to blow up J. G. McCrae's house with dynamite and attempting to blow up Magistrate Houston's house last spring. A detective boarding with Hand for the last two months caught him attempting a similar crime last night. Dynamite cartridges were found in his pocket. Great excitement exists and fears of lynching are entertained.

A G.T.R. Express Collides with a Freight.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Sept. 25.—There was great excitement in town yesterday morning when the news arrived of an accident on the Grand Trunk. The night was a foggy one. A special freight, which was running ahead of the Toronto express, was ordered at Mallorytown to switch off and let the express go by. Just as this was being done the passenger train came thundering along, and although efforts were made to slow up, the engine crashed into the rear end two cars of the freight, which, although on the side track, were not clear of the main line. The passengers, among whom were the Toronto lacrosse men, were tumbled out of their seats, and general confusion ensued, women and children screaming in fear. Nobody was hurt, but the escape was a narrow one. It took four hours and a half to clear the line and allow the express train to proceed east.

A Prominent Citizen Dead at Port Perry.

PORT PERRY, Sept. 25.—Mr. Charles R. Henderson, B.A., of Ourie & Henderson, of this place, died on Wednesday and was buried to-day. The funeral was a large one, the hearse being preceded by the Port Perry brass band and the Knights of Kaylead lodge, of which Mr. Henderson was President, and followed by a long line of carriages. The stores of the town were closed during the time of the funeral. Rev. Dr. Carry conducted the services at the Church of the Ascension and at the cemetery, following which the ritual of the Sons of England was solemnly observed. The deceased was 39 years of age, a member of the Toronto Board of Trade, and a director of the Ontario Central Agricultural and Live Stock Association, and was active, energetic, outspoken, and generally liked. He leaves a widow and one little son.

Hon. Mr. White's Cayuga Speech.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—I am a regular reader of the EXAMINER, and also of the Montreal Gazette, conducted by the White Bros., and in which Hon. Thomas White is more or less entrusted. I notice that you gave prominence to the portion of the latter gentleman's speech made at Cayuga in reference to the Riel portrait episode, but you have not yet given space to Mr White's explanation as made in his speech at Merrickville. I am sure I can trust to your fairness to give the following extract from the report in the Gazette, as far as it applies to the matter in question.

Yours, etc.,
CONSERVATIVE.

Peterborough, Sept. 27th.

The following is the extract alluded to:—

Will you permit me, however, before entering upon the discussion of this new issue, to refer for a moment to a personal matter which my opponents in the press have been making much of during the last few days. I was in the County of Haldimand during the recent election contest in the that constituency. I delivered four speeches. In the course of the speech I made at Cayuga I exhibited a portrait of Louis Riel, under circumstances which I will explain to you. This was on the last day that I was in the county, because I left Haldimand the following morning, the day of the nomination, the 1st of September, and came down to attend an Indian church picnic at which I had engaged to be present, on the Mohawk reserve at Deseronto, on the 2nd. It has been charged against me that at this meeting at Cayuga I was guilty of a brutal insult to my Roman Catholic fellow subjects. The precise charge—and it is of the utmost importance in matters of this kind to deal with the precise charge—as made in the Toronto Globe, and as since repeated in nearly all the newspapers in the country opposed to the Government, was in these words:—

"At a meeting at Cayuga last week Hon. Thomas White accentuated an incendiary speech by producing a portrait of Riel with a rope round his neck. As he unveiled the portrait, he sneeringly remarked, 'This is one of the new saints of the Roman Catholic Church.'"

Now, it is impossible to imagine a more malicious falsehood than is contained in that statement; it is impossible to imagine a more deliberate perversion of what I thought and said on that occasion. I was dealing with this new issue which our fellow-subjects in the province of Quebec have had presented to them, which our opponents have placed before the people of that province, and I was pointing out what had occurred at the nomination for the county of Chambly. I stated that Mr. Chapleau, the Secretary of State, while addressing the electors on that occasion, had presented to him on large boards, by preconcerted arrangement, portraits of Louis Riel with a rope round his neck and a bunch of immortelles on his breast, while at the same moment a rope was attempted to be thrown round his (Mr. Chapleau's) own neck. I exhibited a copy of the precise portrait held up before Mr Chaplean on that occasion, and I said:—

"These Liberals in the province of Quebec who are so anxious to excite the passions of the people there, to arouse their national and religious prejudices, are actually causing this portrait to be hung on the walls of the houses of the people, alongside of the portraits of the holy men of their church, whose lives are to them incentives of good living."

That was the statement which I made, and if anyone can find in that statement a suspicion of insult to the Roman Catholic Church, or a suggestion that Louis Riel was one of the saints of that church, all I can say is that his powers of vision are much greater than my own, and his powers of perversion much greater than is reasonable or proper for anyone to possess. (Hear, hear.) That, gentlemen, was the precise position I took on that occasion. As I have said, I delivered four speeches in the county of Haldimand, and in every one of those speeches, instead of insulting my French-Canadian fellow-subjects, I spoke of them in the highest terms.

We are always willing to do justice to a political opponent, and cheerfully comply with the request of our esteemed correspondent. At the same time, we must exercise the right, held by all journals, to disclaim responsibility for the opinions of correspondents, or those whose cause they champion. Hon. Mr. White's "explanation" may satisfy his admirers, but the general public will not be able to disassociate from it, the fact that Mr. White has laid down the doctrine that "political exigencies" justify a politician, in order to score a political point, to—well—not exactly adhere to the truth. It will be seen, therefore, that Mr. White's "explanation" requires to be taken with not only a pinch, but a whole handful of salt.

The British Empire Still Ahead—in Misrepresentation.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—In your issue of Sept. 9th I inserted a letter, defending the company I represent (the Mutual Life, New York) against an attack made upon it by an advertisement of the British Empire. Expecting that so plain an exposure of the misleading statements made therein, as my letter contained, would call forth some sort of defence, I waited with impatience for a reply. After waiting a fortnight for the said answer, I was astonished to find in the EXAMINER of Sept. 22nd a long rambling, sarcastic letter from the general agent of the British Empire, in which I find nothing whatever touching the real point at issue.

Concerning government securities, reserve investments, etc., these have nothing to do whatever with the point in question. The Canadian government has secured ample protection for the policy-holders in both home and foreign companies. Why the British Empire love their Canadian policy-holders so much, and invest more in this country than the Government require, is simply because of the exceeding low rate of interest in England. Referring to policy No. 50,775 of the British Empire, Mr. Henderson tells the public that I made false statements in my letter of the 9th inst. I can prove the assertions I made. I have in my possession a circular of the British Empire, stating that they pay 21 per cent. of premium on life policies. As per circular—"A person paying $100 a year, in three years would have paid $300; he then would receive a cash bonus of $63 or one premium in every five years."

Further, I have by me a number of examples of British Empire policies and profits for 1884-5. None of these exceed 21 per cent. of premiums paid. I will give some of these examples and make a fair comparison with Mutual Life policies in my advertising space in a few days.

Now, sir, here I find the figures given by the office of the British Empire and their agent do not correspond. This is not the first time I find that Mr. Henderson has given extravagant figures. Though he says I have been here but a short time, I have found in my canvass the agent of the British Empire has given extraordinary and extravagant estimates of profits—more than 50 per cent. greater than the British Empire office authorizes him to give. I can prove these statements if Mr. Henderson wishes, on both life and endowment policies. No wonder policy-holders of the British Empire are being dissatisfied and lapsing their policies

Again Mr. Henderson tells you that the insured under policy 50,775 was of the age of 31 at issue, not 45, annual premium $28.31, not $35.54, as stated by me. Suppose this to be the case, and the profits for 1885 to be 22½ per cent. (of $28.31) the cash dividends would be $6.36, not $7.50, as stated by Mr. Henderson. Is not this a false and unreliable statement?

Again, take Mr. Henderson's own statement to be correct, was it honest and fair to make such a comparison—to advertise in a local paper (and issue circulars also) as Mr. Henderson has done, when the premium of the insured in Mutual Life was in 1885 $16.91, and in the British Empire $28.31, or $11.40 more. Why did not Mr. Henderson give age and premium in his advertisement? The question is plainly answered by the difference of the figures in favor of the Mutual Life just quoted. But looking over the rate table of the British Empire, I find the insured in policy 50,775, age 31, was insured upon the 20 payment life, and NOT on the straight life, as stated by Mr. Henderson in his advertisement. As the premium paid on the life plan at age 31 is $22.32, but on 20-payment life is, as he says, $28.31, here Mr. Henderson tells the public that he is taking a 20-payment life in his company to compare with a straight life policy in the Mutual Life. Not only so, but the advertisement of the British Empire reads, "Five Straight Life Policies."

Now, sir, I find the British Empire's cash profits for 1885 to be about 15 per cent. of premium on term policies. Now, Mr. Henderson tells the facts concerning policy 50,775. According to his explanations, on the 20-payment plan, age 31, premium $28.31, at 15 per cent., the cash bonus would be $4.24, not $7.50 as in advertisement of British Empire. To take further notice of the productions of such a brilliant, actuarial mind, who will resort to such deceitful subterfuges, would be idleness and folly. Again the advertisement of the British Empire reads five straight life policies and their results.

The reader will understand that most companies pay considerably larger cash dividends on term policies than on straight life policies.

The Mutual Life pays 17 per cent. cash profits more on 20-payment life, than on straight life policies at the age of 31.

Is not this misrepresentation, and would it not be properly described as a deliberate attempt to mislead the public? Will Mr. Henderson explain which of the statements he makes is correct? He has so mystified the thing that the application of the ordinary rules of arithmetic cannot make his statements correspond. Being an expert in life insurance and next door to an actuary, perhaps he will explain. Mr. Henderson says he sees nothing in his advertisement that was put in or omitted in order to mislead the public—that he put his advertisement in in the ordinary way, believed by him to be correct, and true. This will tell you at once the "ordinary way" in which Mr. Henderson does his extraordinary business.

Mr. Henderson closes his extra-"ordinary" letter by saying he wrote in self-defence. This I deny. Was not this controversy begun by himself? As to Mr. Henderson's personal compliments, since they have nothing to do with the controversy, I simply thank him for his kind expressions of regard and beg to remain

Yours truly,
F. S. GRIST.

P. S.—The statements made by Mr. Henderson as to the "progress (backward)" of the Mutual Life, are on a par with his other assertions, and for their refutation the reader will please refer to my advertisement elsewhere in this issue.

"Backward, turn backward, O Time in your flight,
Make me a child again, just for to-night;"

is the exclamation, in thought, of many a man who has suffered through a long life, from some distressing disease, that he might have cured with a few bottles of medicine like Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," which cures all blood and skin diseases, as well as consumption or scrofula of the lungs. If he were "a child again," he would know enough to have a bottle of the Discovery "to-night," and in old age would not implore Father Time to "fly backward" for his special benefit. Hence, "Be wise to-day, 'tis madness to defer." Get a bottle of the nearest druggist. d&w30

Whole World Excited.

The People of Charleston Want to Know if it Will Materialize.

CHARLESTON, S.C., Sept. 26.—No shocks occurred here last night. The weather is fine to-day and most of the city congregations attended service in their own churches. The signal officer here has applied to the Weather Bureau at Washington for indications covering the period of Wiggins' predicted earthquake. To-night the following despatch was received from Gen. Hazen:

There are at present no indications of any severe atmospheric disturbances between now and the 30th. Timely notice will be given you should any change appear.

A Tribute to Wiggins.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 26.—Richard Proctor, the English astronomer, will publish an article here to-morrow denouncing Wiggins' prophecy of an earthquake on Sept. 29.

The End of the World at Hand.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 26.—Citizens here claim to have seen for the past three nights bloody lines on the face of the moon, and the matter has become the subject of general comment. The negroes accept it as the fulfilment of the prophecy that there shall be signs in the heavens before the end of the world, which event they now claim will take place on Sept. 29.

A Reporter's Fatal Aim.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 26.—Frank Waters, a reporter, to-day fatally shot Joseph Baker, a local political leader. Baker denounced Waters for publishing an article reflecting on the conduct of politics in his (Baker's) district, and Waters struck him in the face. Baker shot at the reporter three times without effect, when the latter shot Baker through the abdomen.

Carried Off From a Dance.

LAREDO, Tex., Sept. 26.—Yesterday morning five armed men entered the residence of a Mexican during the progress of a dance and forcibly carried away the wife of the proprietor. The desperadoes were followed down the river and two of them were arrested. From them it was learned that the gang is part of El Coyote's band under the leadership of Marciel Benaidez, who succeeded in eluding pursuit. The woman is supposed to be with Benaidez against her will. No special cause for the kidnapping is known.

An Influx of Actors.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—An influx of actors and actresses from Europe occurred to-day. The Aurania brought over Augustin Daly's company, Violet Cameron and her troupe, also T. H. French, Miss Cameron's manager, and Lord Lonsdale, her treasurer. Miss Cameron's husband arrived 10 minutes ahead of her in the Alaska. Mrs. Langtry and Charles Coghlan, her leading support, came over with their company on the Alaska, as did Dion Boucicault.

Repudiated by Washington.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—The "Treaty with Canada," which comes in an Ottawa despatch, has no foundation in fact, so far as the alleged details are stated to have been submitted to President Cleveland and Secretary Bayard and agreed upon. No negotiations for any treaty with Great Britain on the part of the United States have been entered upon since the convention, which was laid before the Senate at its last session and left unacted on. It is within the limits of possibility, Assistant-Secretary of State Porter says, that a project for a suggested convention amendatory of the treaty of 1818 may have been forwarded by the British Colonial office to the Canadian ministry for suggestions, but no credence is attached to the statement purporting to give the text of its provisions. The further statement that modifications of detail have been telegraphed in cipher by Sir John A. Macdonald to the British minister here is purely imaginary and untrue. The British ambassador does not receive instructions or suggestions from colonial authorities.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 37 Granville Street, Halifax, N.S.

N. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.

DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians, Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself, nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak, wasted, night sweats very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spirometer and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 20 to 25 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe and ever owe a debt of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment.

I remain, yours truly,
CAPT. WM. SLATER.

Later.—Fully recovered and at work.

FIVE MILLION POUNDS.

By T. WEMYSS REID.

We were utterly paralyzed by the sudden blow which had fallen upon us. Even I, selfish though my great reason to feel drawn me, was overwhelmed by the awful tidings. Fordyke was manifestly agitated and incredulous, unable to realize what it was that had happened. As for Branksome, his face was ghastly. All the brightness had faded out of it, and he sat with drawn features, pallid lips and eyes wide open, staring into space. After that muffled cry of horror he had seemed to be literally incapable of speech.

"I don't believe it!" cried Fordyke at last. "It is some d——d infernal lie of the newspapers. Eh, Branksome, don't you think so, too? For God's sake, man, don't let this upset you! I'll telegraph at once." He started up as though about to leave the room for that purpose.

Branksome feebly raised his hand to stay him.

"Don't go," he said almost in a whisper, "for the love of heaven do not leave me yet."

There was something in his tone that made me feel that I was de trop. I had no right, I saw, to intrude upon such grief and horror as his. I got up quietly and stole out of the room. I went out into the street, where the snow was lying, and walked up and down thoroughfares, regardless of the cold, trying to collect my thoughts and realize what it was that had happened.

And my first clear idea was one of which at the time I felt ashamed, of which I am even more ashamed now after the lapse of years. I forgot all about Manlevorer himself and only grasped the idea that at last the obstacle which stood between Daisy and myself had been removed. There was nothing now to prevent our marriage.

Nothing? Yes, I remembered myself. There was the ghost of Manleverer's gold. Even now-for such is human nature-I felt well assured that with his dead hand he would strive to keep us asunder.

The thought of Daisy had quickened my intellect, and I saw that there was at least one step which I ought to take. I went back to the little room where I had left Branksome and Fordyke. I found them engaged in conversation of the most earnest description, carried on in those low tones which, when the shadow of bereavement lies heavy on a man, lie naturally at his lips. They looked up when I entered as though they scarcely relished my intrusion. Fordyke at all events could scarcely conceal his impatience. I made a hasty apology, and seizing my coat and hat left the room. Five minutes later I was in the telegraph office writing a message to my darling, in which I expressed my sorrow at hearing the news of her bereavement, and my hope that within a few days we might meet again.

As I waited while the clerk checked the message, my thoughts were naturally busy with that solemn event, which had in a moment robbed Manleverer of all his wealth and reduced him to the common level of our poor mortality. He had been dead now just a week. Probably this was the day of his funeral. My imagination took wings across the storm-tossed Northern sea, and I saw in fancy the funeral procession starting from that gloomy old hall among the Yorkshire wolds, with one slight girlish figure, draped in black, following the coffin of the man at whose riches all the world had wondered. "O my darling," I cried in my heart, "why am I not with you to help you to bear your sorrow, and to drive away that sense of loneliness which is never felt so keenly as by the side of an open grave?"

And then like a flash of lightning, there darted through my brain the remembrance of the words spoken to me by Gr gson in the railway carriage, and all of the sinister rumours that had attended my visit to the hall. Up to that moment I had regarded the rich man's death as any other person would have done who had read the paragraph in The Times. But now, in an instant, I saw it all. Feel that I was, not to have seen it sooner! Manleverer had been murdered!

Murdered! but how and by whom? One man there was whom I suspected above all others. But he was here, more than a thousand leagues from the spot where the evil deed had been done. Even if I believed, which I was told by a revelation from heaven that Flinter had slain Manleverer, I should have had to acknowledge that the thing was impossible. The arm of the assassin may be long; but it cannot reach across hundreds of leagues of stormy sea in order to strike its coward's blow. Yet while I reflected on all the perplexing contradictory facts, my conviction that Flinter was guilty grew and grew, until it took possession of my whole frame, and quite suddenly the explanation of the difficulty which had troubled me became clear to my mind. He had an accomplice—some one whom he had left behind him at Great Lorton and through whom he had slain the man he professed to love with so dog-like a fidelity.

"Ah! Mr. Flinter," I said to myself, with a bitter smile on my lips, "you little thought when a pitfall you were digging for yourself when you lured me on board the Golden Hawk. If I had never been your prisoner, I should never have been able to confound you as I am about to do."

I took up one of the blank telegraph forms on the table of the little office, and wrote hurriedly as follows:

Chief Constable, Barton, Yorkshire:

If Manleverer's symptoms apparently those of epilepsy, I strongly urge post-mortem examination. Have grave reasons to suspect foul play. Return to England immediately.

FENTON, yacht Golden Hawk.

When in the dark after days I recalled the moment when I penned the lines which were destined to influence in so terrible a manner not only my own life, but the lives of so many other persons, and when in my agony I cried aloud to God for forgiveness for the evil I had wrought unwittingly, I never failed to remember one fact. That was, that I seemed to have written that fatal message under the inspiration of some will outside my own. It was done in an instant, before I had even attempted to weigh the step itself or its possible consequences; and I was once more under the roof of the Hotel d'Angleterre before I fully realized the step which I had taken.

There is no need to dwell upon our hurried departure from Trondhjem. Branksome had recovered his calmness and self-possession before we sailed that evening, but it was evident that the terrible event of which we had heard so unexpectedly filled him both with sorrow and anger. He was very friendly in his manner to me, but neither he nor Fordyke was now disposed to lighten the passing hours with the gay sallies of talk and story which had been so frequent before. They spent the greater part of every day deep in consultation with each other in Branksome's private state room, and I soon found that Flinter was not unfrequently admitted to their conclaves.

We had been three days at sea. In consequence of the baffling winds we ought to be off Hull, and in a few hours more I would see Daisy. I was counting those hours as I paced the deck after dinner under the frosty starlit sky, when I was told by one of the stewards that Mr. Branksome wished to speak to me at once.

I found him in the habitable cabin which was seemingly set apart for the private use of the owner of the ship. To my surprise Flinter was with him as well as Fordyke. I was further surprised by the extraordinary change in Flinter's appearance. For the first time I saw him in full dress, and noticed that he had taken pains to array himself with unusual elegance. While for Flinter, he received me with a sneer of hatred that he made not the slightest attempt to conceal.

From its wonderful power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all

Half Holiday.

The Collegiate Institute pupils were given a half holiday this afternoon to give them an opportunity to attend the fall sports of the P. A. A. A.

Turnbull's Millinery and Mantle Show Rooms, crowded with Novelties, will be opened on Wednesday and Thursday, 29th and 30th September.

Social and Musical Evening.

The Mission Band, of St. Paul's Church, purpose holding a social, to be conducted by a musical evening, under the direction of Mr. Parker, on the evening of Thanksgiving Day.

Ladies' Meeting.

A meeting of the lady friends of the Young Men's Christian Association will take place in the Y. M. C. A. rooms on Tuesday afternoon, at half-past three o'clock. The mothers, wives and sisters of young men should have an interest in this work, and consequently there should be a large attendance.

Society Funeral.

McWilliams' Lodge of True Blues on Saturday attended in a body the funeral of the late William Dobbin, sixth son of Mr. John Dobbin, of North Monaghan, who was a member of the lodge. The funeral took place from the residence of Mr. James Byrne, brother-in-law of the deceased, to the Little Lake Cemetery, and was largely attended.

The Highland Fling.

Messrs. D. W. Smith, D. S. Johnston, Herbert Morrison and Norman Mitchell, Highland dancers of the Thistle Club, Toronto, have arranged to exhibit their agility in the Highland fling, etc., in Highland costume, at the Central Exhibition here next week. Chas. Morrison, the Queen's prize piper, will provide music for the dance.

A Holiday Wanted.

The clerks of the numerous shops in town, many of whom have not been able to attend an exhibition for years, are anxious that Wednesday, October 6th, should be observed as a public holiday, so that they will have an opportunity of attending the Central. It is understood that the desire of the clerks will be gratified, and that a public holiday will be proclaimed. The Council will probably deal with the question to-night.

A Dog's Daring Leap.

On Saturday afternoon a medium sized black dog trotted through the millinery show room of Hall Innes & Co., and after looking around with apparent astonishment, jumped out of an open window, (to the second storey) alighting on the awning below. After slipping around on the canvass for a few seconds, he leaped to the road and made off up street, wearing a mystified look. The beautiful things he saw up there were evidently too too for his uncultured taste, or probably an Astrachan jacket on view gave him serious doubts as to the safety of his hide.

Will be open, by Miss Mahoney, for inspection at Turnbull's Commodious Show Rooms, about 150 copies of English, French and American Pattern Hats and Bonnets on the 29th and 30th of September. Every Lady should see them.

Explanatory.

In the EXAMINER'S brief biographical sketch of the life of Rev. P. J. Rudkins in its report of his ordination, it was incorrectly stated that he attended a "night school," taught by Mr. F. J. Lynch. The fact is that Mr. Lynch teaches an excellent select school. So thorough was Mr. Rudkins' training here that when he left it to enter St. Michael's College, Toronto, he carried off the first year general proficiency scholarship, and all through his course he took a high standing and graduated with honors, thanks to the care and thoroughness with which his elementary knowledge was instilled by Mr. Lynch.

Good Advice Without Charge.

The fact that orders for new furs are pouring in thus early in the season so rapidly that our staff is kept busy, is a sign that should not be overlooked.

We therefore take the opportunity of reminding our many customers who may want furs repaired or altered, to lose no time. Later in the season we shall be so crowded with orders as to make repairing an impossibility, as orders for new goods are of first consideration.

N. B.—All parties indebted to the late firm are requested to call at once, as all outstanding accounts must be paid in order to balance books through the change in business.

Directors Meet and Make Final Arrangements Regarding the Exhibition—The Lieutenant-Governor to Open the Exhibition, and to be Tendered a Fitting Reception.

At a meeting of the directors of the Peterborough Central Exhibition held on Saturday afternoon, to make final arrangements with regard to the exhibition to be held on October 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th, a committee composed of the President of the Association and Messrs. John Carnegie, M.P.P., J. R. Stratton, J. B. McWilliams and John McClelland were appointed a reception committee to meet the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario on his arrival in town to open the Central. Mr. Carnegie was nominated to deliver an address of welcome to his Excellency in the name of the Society. Mr. Thos. McNaughton, of town, champion club swinger, and Mr. D. M. Smith, of Toronto, having expressed their willingness to engage in a club-swinging contest during the exhibition, it was decided to offer a special and liberal prize for the competition. The secretary was authorized to communicate with the Council and School Board, asking that Wednesday afternoon be proclaimed a half holiday. A letter having been received from the Thistle Club, Toronto, informing the Association that the club purposed sending four Highland dancers to perform at the exhibition, it was decided to accept a dancing stand, grand stand, and make other necessary improvements on the grounds. The price of admission tickets for children under 15 was fixed at 10c. Complimentary tickets and press badges were ordered to be issued to those deserving such favors, and after appointing a ticket-taker and special constables, the meeting adjourned.

Police Court.

Daniel Costello, of Young's Point, was summoned before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning, charged by Inspector Cochrane with unlawfully keeping liquor for sale, contrary to the terms of the Scott Act, and also with having been previously convicted on a similar charge.

He admitted the charge of having kept liquor for sale, but did not answer to the charge of having been previously convicted. The prosecution produced evidence that he had been convicted on a similar charge, and no further evidence was taken.

The magistrate imposed a fine of $50 and costs.

Mr. R. E. Wood appeared for the Crown, and Mr. Jas. Leary for the defendant.

Turnbull has made it extra effort this season to secure for his Patrons Choice Millinery and Mantle Goods. Ask to see and to look in Stylish Goods and Low Prices.

What to Read.

In the Charlotte Street Methodist Church on Sunday evening Rev. F. H. Wallace, B.D., pastor, delivered a valuable address on the subject of "Reading." The address was replete with excellent advice, and we regret that our space will not admit of an extended report of it. A chief point insisted on, of course, was the duty of reading the Holy Scriptures and practicing the holy lessons found therein. The speaker did not disapprove of the reading by young persons of writers of standard, classical poetry and fiction like Shakespeare, Scott, Dickens, etc., but he was particularly severe upon the prurient, sensational, light literature of the day. Parents were urged to supervise the selection of reading for the young, and to see that nothing reached their hands but what would give noble impetuses to life and lead to their moral and mental betterment. It was, perhaps, singular that no allusion was made to the important reading matter afforded by the foremost educating medium of the day, the newspaper. The address was eminently practical and abounding in common sense advice, and the hearers, if they lay its lessons to heart, cannot but receive a permanently beneficial effect.

Attention!

We would call attention to the offer made by Joseph Griffin that during the next thirty days he will sell the whole of his summer stock of boots and shoes at cost. A few lines will actually be sold below cost. Look at the following quotations:—

Women's Pebble Oxford Shoes,	70c.
" buff do do	80
" pebble—tie or buttoned	90
" India kid shoe	$1.00
" patent Oxford	1.20
" polished calf tie shoe	1 25
" do do Oxford	1.25
" do do buttoned	1.35

All the above goods are solid leather. All other goods will be sold equally cheap. Now is the time to secure bargains.

The C. P. R. Exhibit.

The Toronto World contained the following reference to the exhibit of the C. P. R. at the Toronto Industrial Exhibition:—

"The exhibit of grains, grasses, fruits, roots, timber, minerals and live stock, gathered from the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, between Winnipeg and the Columbia Valley, in British Columbia, is attracting universal attention and admiration. Every one who visits Agricultural Hall (in the north-west corner of the grounds) where the exhibit is housed, expresses astonishment at the wonderful progress that is being made in agricultural pursuits in the country traversed by that great highway. Wheat, barley, peas and oats are shown in perfection. There are also no less than fifty different varieties of succulent native grasses. The exhibit of roots and fruits are almost as fine as can be seen in any part of Ontario. Rich specimens of gold, cooper, silver and iron ore are on view. But probably the most wonderful articles in the collection are the specimens of cedar and Douglas fir trees from British Columbia. These specimens are seven and eight feet in diameter, and are admired of all admirers. There are a large varieties of articles that would take a column of the World to explain fully. People who are interested in the natural resources of the great North-West should not fail to see this exhibit. Mr. W. A. Ducker and Mr. L. O. Armstrong are in charge, and they will be happy to give any information they can to visitors. Specimens of live stock, native and crossed, from the great ranches west of Calgary, are also to be seen.

Close to the C. P. R. exhibit is one from the Free Grant district in the County of Haliburton, Ont. The specimens of grains, roots and fruit are very creditable, indeed. They were collected together by the natives and sent down to the fair in charge of Mr. Wm. Fielding, the Government immigration agent at Minden, and Mr. Fielding will always be found near the exhibit."

The Jews Increasing.

The Jewish population of Jerusalem is constantly increasing, and now numbers 18,000. This is the largest number that has lived in the sacred city at one time since the destruction by Titus in 70 A. D.

A reward of £100 has been offered in England for the proof of a case of drunkness that has been cured without total abstinence.

TUESDAY SEPTEMBER 28, 1886.

LOYALIST DELEGATES

THEIR MEETING AT KINGSTON DISTURBED BY PARNELLITES.

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 27.—A lively meeting was held to-night in connection with the appearance of Rev. Dr. Kane and G. H. Smith, delegates of the Irish Loyal Union. The hall was crowded and each of the delegates made speeches of one hour duration. Both speakers were emphatic in language. A resolution was presented sympathizing with the minority in Ireland in the struggles against the mischievous violence of the Parnellites and other disloyal factions.

W. Robinson, Ex-M.P.P., presented a resolution recommending that the British Parliament grant to Ireland the same extent of self-government as Canada enjoyed. Cheers, hisses and loud talking followed and then the lie regarding the business of the delegates was hurled across the platforms. Kane and Smith were called firebrands, and cheers for Parnell were heard in the hall. Robinson told Dr. Kane that he was mistaken if he thought he could change the views of Canadian members of Parliament by his speeches, and the Dr. said that was what he wanted to do.

After much disputation the chairman put both resolutions, and the one of sympathy passed and Robinson's was rejected. For half an hour the meeting was particularly noisy. Men cried for Robinson to apologise for slandering the delegates, while others hissed and cheered as their inclinations directed.

BEER IN GERMANY.

Enough Drunk in One Year to Make a Lake One Mile Square.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Consul Tanner, Chemnitz, reports that the beer production of Germany in 1885 was one billion one hundred million gallons, "enough to form a lake more than one mile square and six and a half feet deep, or is would make a running stream as large as some of our rivers." He says the consumption of intoxicants in Germany per head is four times as great as in the United States, yet there are a thousand hopeless drunkards in the United States to ten in Germany. The difference arises largely, he says, if not entirely, from the manner of drinking in vogue in the two countries. "It is science of drinking," he writes, "consists simply in the tardiness of drinking. All drinks are taken sip by sip, a half or three quarters of an hour being consumed for a glass of beer. This is so simple that one is liable to ridicule for laying stress upon it and yet on this one point hinges in my opinion a question of vast importance to Americans. By this manner of drinking the blood is aroused to greater activity in so gradual a manner that there is no violent derangement of the animal economy. By slow drinking the German accomplishes the object of drinking and gives his animal economy a chance to say, 'Hold, enough,' which only slow drinking will do." Mr. Tanner says that since his arrival in Germany he has yet his "first glass of water to see drunk."

THEY HAD BEEN IMBIBING.

Three French Canadians Quarrel and One is Fatally Stabbed.

DOVER, N. H., Sept. 27.—A mysterious affray in a buggy last night near Barrington has been solved. On reaching Isinglass Bridge the officers learned that the body of a French Canadian woodchopper had been found in a field near Lee. It was then ascertained that three French Canadian residents of Stafford started yesterday to Barrington. They had been imbibing and on the way home all three were in one buggy. Two quarreled and one stabbed the other seven times with a clasp knife. The victim died in the buggy soon after and his companions took the corpse into a field. Becoming terrified they deserted the team and started for Lee. Both were arrested.

A Scare at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Sept. 27.—Some excitement has been caused here by a report that a dynamiter from one of the Fenian organizations in Chicago has come to the city with the intention of blowing up the houses of Parliament and the Governor-General's residence. The man's name is said to be Christian Sudbury, and it is rumored he is confined in one of the hotels under arrest. The authorities refuse particulars.

A Russian Agent at Cairo.

CAIRO, Sept. 27.—To-day M. Lavison, a Russian subject, acting as agent of Ismael Pasha, the ex-Khedive of Egypt, and with the aid of a number of armed Albanians, seized the Ismael Palace, which the ex-Khedive claims as his property. Mr. Lavison subsequently withdrew from the palace at the instance of the Russian consul. Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, the British commissioner, has hastily returned to Cairo to investigate the matter. It is understood that Mr. Larison's motive was to force the tribunal to take cognizance of the ex-Khedive's claim.

Opening of the Great Central Fair.

HAMILTON, Sept. 27.—The Great Central Fair opened at the Crystal Palace Grounds today and promises to be a magnificent success. The Directors have completed every arrangement necessary to encourage a large attendance, and in the number and character of the exhibits, the exhibition will eclipse its predecessors. Improvements have been made in the grounds and buildings, the horse ring has been enlarged and on every side are seen signs of enterprise and attractiveness. Everything will be in shape for to-morrow. The association's executive officers are: William Hendrie, President; Jonathan Davis, Secretary-Robert Evans, Treasurer; John Dickenson, C. R. Smith, Superintendents.

The C. P. R. at Brantford.

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—A deputation of the board of directors of the Brantford, Waterloo and Lake Erie Railway Company waited on Mr. Van Horne, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, to-day to urge the advisability of extending their line to connect with the Canadian Pacific main line at Galt. The interview was private, but it was learned that the deputation were pleased with the reception they received. Mr. Van Horne stated that the connection could not be made this year, but he was in favor of connecting with Brantford, as the company wished to tap the trade of that important town.

Burglaries at Cobourg.

COBOURG, Sept. 27.—Burglars visited the residences of Mr. W. G. Collings and Mr. W. S. Ellis on George-street during Friday night or early Saturday morning. At the former gentleman's they were successful in their efforts and secured a gold watch and chain, some money and several other articles, but at the latter residence Mr. Ellis was awakened and notified the midnight intruders that their presence was not required at that unseasonable hour. They took leave without any booty.

LASHED BY A LADY

SENSATIONAL SCENE AT A JERSEY CITY CIVIC MEETING.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Sept. 27.—An Evening Journal reporter named Lenhart was horsewhipped to-night in the meeting rooms of the Board of Public Works by Mamie Gannon, the 24-year-old daughter of a wealthy coppersmith. On Tuesday the Journal published a sensational story entitled "Society Girl Forgers." It stated that two young ladies moving in the highest circles of society had raised checks given them by their fathers from $6 and $10 to $60 and $100 respectively. The article caused a sensation, and was generally believed to refer to Miss Gannon and her sister Annie, who is three years her junior. Reporter Lenhart made no secret of the fact that he had written the story, and last Friday night he was decoyed into a saloon by a male friend of the Misses Gannon, who struck him in the face. This evening Lenhart was assigned to report the proceedings of the Board of Public Works for his newspaper. There was a large lobby on hand and Lenhart was mercilessly ridiculed when he put in an appearance. He took his seat at a desk with his back close to a low iron railing which separates the lobby from the space occupied by the members of the board. The business of the board was proceeding when the elder Miss Gannon walked up to the railway and drawing a cattle whip from beneath her ulster belabored Lenhart over the face and neck, amid cheers and encouraging cries of "Give it to him" from the spectators. The lady was led downstairs by the messenger but reappeared within a few moments and again attacked Lenhart with the whip. This time her victim succeeded in grasping the lash and held on to it. In the struggle which followed Miss Gannon was partially drawn over the railing. About a dozen young men, who were in the room, rushed toward them and the railing was knocked down. The utmost confusion prevailed and the friends of the young woman yelled with excitement. Lenhart made a motion as if about to draw his revolver and the crowd threatened to throw him out of a window. The reporter finally appealed to President Reynolds for protection. Several men responded to the President's call and formed a guard between the reporter and Miss Gannon and her friends. The young woman was led to the door where her father met her. "Did you give it to him?" asked her father. "Yes, I did," she replied, "and I gave it to him good." Father and daughter walked home with a number of friends. Mr. Lenhart remained at his desk until the board adjourned, when he was escorted home by the police.

MR. PARNELL'S MOTHER.

The Old Lady Urges Patience and Prudence on the People.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 27.—Mrs. Parnell in an interview to-day said she had fully recovered from fatigue of her journey, so much so, in fact that she had arranged to attend meeting to-night in favor of Father Fahey. The lady added "I will go to Dublin to-morrow. I am not certain that I shall ever return to the United States in view of my advanced years and state of health. I prefer remaining in Ireland. I feel assured of the success of my son's movement if the people of Ireland are prudent and patient. If they commit outrages they will only play into their enemy's hands."

Ireland's Opportunity.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Mrs. Parnell, addressing a meeting in Liverpool this evening, said Americans looked to the Irish to uphold democratic principles in their demand for Home Rule. In their past victories Irishmen had achieved no greater victory than that of controlling their tempers. England was in arms against Ireland, which Americans were rejoiced to see.

The Alleged Threat Against Hull.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—At a meeting of the National League at Hull to-day it was decided not to pass a resolution denying the accuracy of the letter recently published, in which the writer stated that the Town of Hull was to be burned by Fenians.

MURDERS AND SUICIDES.

An Unusual Crop of Both in the City of Paris.

PARIS, Sept. 27.—The city continues to furnish a singularly large number of murders and suicides. At one of the hotels yesterday a cook shot and wounded his mistress and then attempted suicide because the woman had made him jealous. A hair-dresser shot and mortally hurt his mistress because she had tired of their relationship and resolved to reform. A workman having his week's pay in his pocket and feeling hilarious met a pretty female organ grinder and asked her to play him a waltz so that he might dance for her amusement while she played for his. The woman's male companion instantly became incensed at the request of the workman and shot him dead.

AN APPEAL TO THE IRISH.

Mr. Parnell Thinks That All Things Can be Constitutionally Accomplished.

DUBLIN, Sept. 27.—The Freeman's Journal says: "Parnell's cablegram to President Fitzgerald, of the Irish National League in America, is virtually an appeal to the Irish at home and abroad. From the British Government nothing can be expected by the Irish people who may, however, have everything by their own endurance backed by the help of their exiled countrymen. There must be no disorder though, no wild insanity, no acts estranging the world's sympathy. Where the landlords have given proofs that they are fair-minded let them be met by fair dealing.

CHICAGO'S CATTLE COMPLAINT.

The Disease in the Sheds for two Years and Its Nature Unknown.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—Cattlemen and distillers declare that the disease now prevailing among cattle in this vicinity has existed in their sheds for at least two years, but as they had imagined pleuro-pneumonia acted more rapidly and severely they never dreamed of the character of the disease.

The president of the International Range Association has issued a circular to the officers of the various state, territorial and local cattle growers' associations, urging them to take measures to prevent the introduction of pleuro-pneumonia into the range country. He demands a rigid enforcement of all existing sanitary regulations for the protection of Western cattle.

The Governor of Wisconsin has prohibited the importation of cattle from Illinois.

A Dr. Charged With Perjury.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 27.—Dr. McLay of Aylmer has been summoned to appear before Squire McCausland to answer to the charge of perjury. The complainant is the Rev. Mr. Tapscott, Baptist clergyman, of Aylmer, and the charge is based on the testimony given by the doctor at a recent Scott Act trial in Aylmer, in which he swore that he had not drank intoxicating liquor in any bar in Aylmer since May 1 last.

DEPRESSION DISAPPEARING.

Big Boom in Business—A Bright and Prosperous Outlook.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The World this morning publishes a lengthy article on the prospects of trade. It says: "The long period of depression in business seems now to be giving way to one of prosperity. Merchants and general tradesmen agree that the prospects of the fall trade are very bright. There is no boom, but a steady, healthy growth. Everyone sees indications of better times. It is the universal opinion in commercial and financial circles that not only is the present condition of business better than it has been for a number of years past, but that the future is of greater promise than for a long time.

The bustle and activity in the dry goods district is apparent to all who visit that part of the city. That trade is generally the first to feel the good times. Big jobbing and commission houses are lighted up at night and the sidewalks are littered with bales and boxes. Far into the night men pack goods for shipment. The streets in the dry goods district are lined at night with trucks piled high with merchandise and covered with tarpaulins, ready to be started at daybreak for the steamboat wharves and railway shipping offices.

Confidence is also restored among investors, and new enterprises are being promoted in Wall street. The banking institutions are encouraged, and holders of railroad securities are delighted by the increased earnings of the lines, from freight, which clearly shows that goods are being transported everywhere in large quantities.

Iron has advanced in price in the face of the largest production ever known. Clearing and complaints are mainly confined to the "swamp," and the leather trade has felt the effect of the business growth only in the extent of its sales. Traders lament that they are doing business at a loss.

In Philadelphia the revival of business seems to be genuine and solid. Merchants of all classes, commission men, jobbers and retailers are beginning to look forward to an uncommonly heavy trade. The great dry goods houses, the wholesale grocers, and the dealers in staple merchandise are working night and day. The great manufacturing districts of Kensington, Richmond and Southwark cannot turn out goods fast enough to fill their orders. The general opinion of business men is that this is not merely a boom but a healthy revival after a season of unnatural depression. In the iron trade business has increased 50 per cent. since this time last year, and the demand for coal is enormous. Capitalists and manufacturers are still very cautious about making large contracts, on account of the uncertainty still existing as to the stability of engagements with operatives and the existence of strikes in some quarters; but on the whole the relations between employers and employes are harmonious.

The marked improvement in business in Boston and throughout New England is very encouraging. There has been a great deal of activity in the wool trade. The dry goods trade is better than it was during summer. The agents for the manufacturing concerns are easily disposing of the full production of the mills. The season's business among the boot and shoe concerns has held on remarkably well. Some of the leading manufacturers are demanding higher prices on new contracts. The furniture manufacturers report a steadier business in progress, and the shops are very busy. The lumber business is very steady.

In Atlanta, Ga., there is a marked revival of business.

In New Orleans there is always a revival of business just after the opening of the commercial year, Sept. 1, but this season it has been more marked than for several years.

At St. Louis there was a genuine old-fashioned trade boom in the spring, which was stopped by the strike on the Southwestern roads. St. Louis is just about reviving from this, and the outlook is cheerful. At San Francisco business is very dull, and there is little appearance of revival. Very heavy failures have occurred within the past few months.

DENOUNCING THE FRANCHISE ACT.

It must be rather a set-back to the Review and other Tory organs, who have been lauding the Dominion Franchise Act, as the wisest, most beneficial, and most statesmanlike measure ever passed in Canada, to have the Mail come out in denunciation of the Act and demand its repeal, as it does in its issue of September 27th. Bound to make the best of a bad thing, the Mail says:—

"The only objection that can be fairly alleged against the Act is the cost of working it. Aside altogether from the printing bills and the allowances made to the revising officers, the expense involved in holding the court and in conducting a fight over every name to which exception is taken, is necessarily very great. Moreover, there is reason to fear that perjury abounds at these courts, and that in the effort to beat the other side, tricks and subterfuges are resorted to of which the honest men of both parties would be heartily ashamed."

That the Mail does not honestly think that the enormous expense is the only bad feature the Act and that it also thinks it is an altogether unnecessary prodigy of legislation, is shown by the readiness with which it is willing to dispense with a party engine from which such great work was expected. The organ says:—

"There is an easy mode of removing every objection to the Franchise Act, viz., by repealing it and proclaiming manhood suffrage. Quebec would, no doubt, resist such a step. * * * But, the time is past for permitting the genius of resection which dominates the affairs of Lower Canada to hold back the whole country. The next general election will be conducted on the lists prepared under the Act of 1885; but we trust the new Parliament will at once be asked to cancel the measure and institute manhood suffrage, which, not to deal with any loftier considerations, would cost less, would be more equitable, would do away with all the petifogging and hard swearing that mark the preparation of the lists under the present Act, and would leave neither party open to the taunt of "capturing the umpire." With regard to the Indian population, manhood suffrage would not, of course, apply to it. The qualification at present demanded of the Indians would have to be enforced, otherwise we would have the "untutored savage" coming to the polls."

THE TOWN COUNCIL.

RECEPTION OF THE LIEUT.-GOVERNOR CONSIDERED.

General Business Taken Up — George Street to Be Scraped—Several Pieces of Sidewalk to be Built.

A meeting of the Town Council was held on Monday to consider the reception of the Lieutenant-Governor on his visit to Peterborough to open the Central Exhibition.

There was a full representation of the Council, the mayor in the chair.

His Worship, in opening the meeting, intimated that having heard that it was probable that the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario would visit the lakes north of Peterborough during the next week, and that he had expressed a desire to visit Peterborough, as the town had been settled by and received its name from Hon. Peter Robinson, an uncle of the Lieutenant-Governor, he thought it would be a good opportunity to give his Excellency a suitable reception. The West Riding Agricultural Society had invited him to open the exhibition, which it was probable he would do, and the Society proposed giving him a reception, and he called the Council together to decide upon what action it was thought advisable to take in the matter. He thought that as there was a full representation of the Council, that what general business was on hand might also be taken up.

On motion general business was taken up, the reading of the minutes being dispensed with.

The Town Clerk being absent owing to illness, Jas. McDonald acted as clerk.

A COMMUNICATION from D. D. Dowe, asking to have his statute labour tax annulled, he having paid a property tax, was read and referred to the Court of Revision.

ACCOUNTS.

The following accounts were presented for payment:

Kirgan & Co	$ 29 36
County, re Otonabee bridge	550 80
R. Winch	1 00
W. Longford, grading	25 00

The last account was ordered to be paid when certified to, and the others were referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. MCNAUGHTON asked how he should deal with a charity case in his ward, and was told to use his own discretion. He complained that Mr. McClelland had charged him with spending $300 in charity, when he only spent $120. He demanded a report of the amounts spent by Mr. McClelland on charity, and expressed a belief that Mr. McClelland and the Mayor spent the greater part of $2,000 just as they liked.

Mr. MCCLELLAND informed the Council that Mr. McNaughton came into his shop and demanded a report, and he told him as he had resigned his position as chairman of the Charity Committee he was not prepared to report, and he informed Mr. McNaughton how the matter stood.

A REPORT WANTED.

Moved by Mr. McNaughton, seconded by Mr. Davidson, that the clerk report to this Council at the next meeting, the amount spent by each member of the Charity Committee.—Carried.

Mr. McNeil moved, seconded by Mr. Kelly, that the Street Inspector have George street, between London and King streets, and at the intersections of Charlotte and George, Simcoe and George, Hunter and George streets, scraped, and have the broken stone at the Central Park placed on George street.

Mr. MOORE suggested that the Council should consider the advisability of block paving or cementing George street, which he thought would be much more satisfactory than continuing to gravel it.

Mr. KENDRY pointed out that the cost of block paving would be greater than the town could afford.

Mr. Kelly, Mr. McClelland, Mr. Rutherford and Mr. Hartley spoke in favour of the motion, urging that a good roadbed could be made by properly placing the broken stone.

Mr. MCNAUGHTON suggested water-tabling as a good remedy against mud.

Mr. MENZIES objected to the motion, on the ground that it would involve an expenditure of $400 or $500, for which no appropriation had been made.

Mr. MCNEIL expressed astonishment at Mr. Menzies' opposition, and spoke strongly in favour of the motion.

Mr. CAHILL thought it would be a mistake to put the broken stone on the street this fall. Block paving, he thought, was out of the question for some time yet. Mr. Davidson had estimated that block paving George street from Brock street to Charlotte street would cost $8,000.

On the motion being put it was lost on the following division:—

YEAS—Messrs. Kelly, McNeil, McClelland and Rutherford.

NAYS—Messrs. Cahill, Davidson, McNaughton, Yelland, Moore, Menzies, Kendry and Hartley.

TO BE SCRAPED.

Mr. Cahill moved, seconded by Mr. Davidson, that the Inspector be authorized to have George street scraped immediately.—Carried.

MORE LIGHT.

Moved by Mr. Rutherford, seconded by Mr. Menzies, that on account of the large number of new buildings that have been erected this year in our town, it is desirable to have more gas lights erected in certain points of the town, be it therefore resolved that one gas lamp be erected on north George street, one north on Water street, one at the corner of Harvey and Dublin streets, one on the corner of McDonald and Harvey streets, one on the corner of Stewart and Townsend streets, one on the corner of Wolfe and Stewart streets, one on the corner of Charlotte and Park streets, and one on Gilmour street.—Referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

The question of placing an electric light at the west end of the Otonabee bridge was also referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

Mr. Hartley moved, seconded by Mr. Kendry, that the Street Inspector be instructed to lay down an eight-foot sidewalk in front of Mr. Delaney's store on Water street north, also to repair the sidewalk from Smith street to Hilliard's mill.—Carried.

A motion to have a new sidewalk built on Simcoe street from Mr. Snowden's to Dr. Crevier's office, and a motion to grant Mr. Gamble $5 to raise the bridge on Antrim street at the railroad, were lost.

Moved by Mr DAVIDSON, seconded by Mr. CAHILL, that a sidewalk be put down in front of Geo. Schneider's new store on George Street.—Carried.

SMALL POX HOSPITAL.

Moved by Mr. MENZIES, seconded by Mr. KENDRY,—that the Property Committee be asked to look into the state of the building known as the Small Pox Hospital as the windows and doors are broken and open, and it is in danger of being burnt down from its exposed position, and that said committee have said windows and doors nailed up and made so that the public may not gain admittance to it at all hours.—Carried.

APPOINTMENT OF THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

Moved by Mr. MOORE, seconded by Mr. Rutherford,—That the Mayor and Messrs. Cahill, Rutherford, Kendry, Davidson and the mover be a committee to make arrangements for meeting the Lieutenant-Governor on his coming to Peterborough to open the Agricultural Association Exhibition, in such a manner as they may think advisable, and that this Council attend in a body and present an address on behalf of the town; also, that the Mayor declare the afternoon of the 6th October a half holiday.—Carried.

On motion Mr. G. R. Sproule was heard. He informed the Council that the societies of the town were desirous of assisting in the reception to be given the Governor-General, and they were waiting for an invitation from the Council.

SOCIETIES INVITED TO PARTICIPATE.

Mr. MOORE moved, seconded by Mr. Kendry,—That the societies of the town and the citizens generally be invited to take part in the reception to be given the Governor-General upon the occasion of the opening of the West Riding Agricultural Society Exhibition.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned.

Dumbfounded.

Sometimes it costs hundreds of dollars to convince a man; very often less is required, but in the case of Polson's Nervoline, that sovereign remedy for pain, 50 cents heals the bill, and supplies enough Nervoline to convince every purchaser that it is the best, most prompt and certain pain remedy in the world. Nervoline is good for all kinds of pain, pleasant to take, and sure to cure cramps and all internal pains. It is also nice to rub outside, for it is an agreeable smell, quite unlike so many other preparations, which are positively disagreeable to use. Try it now. Go to a drug store and buy a 10 cent or 25 cent bottle. Polson's Nervoline. Take no other. 6dw39

CAPTAIN WILLIAM SLATER, No. 37 Granville Street, Halifax, N.S.
H. WASHINGTON, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto.
DEAR SIR,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians, Drs. Reid and Oliver, prominent physicians of Halifax, who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself, nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with a doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak, wasted, night sweat very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter—in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spirometer and medicine I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 20 to 25 lbs., and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strength is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a deep sense of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment.
I remain, yours truly,
CAPT. WM. SLATER.
Later.—Fully recovered and at work.

FIVE MILLION POUNDS.

By T. W. [illegible]

[Copyright.]

"Mr. Fenton," said Branksome, who was standing and whose stately figure seemed to fill the whole cabin, "it has just come to my knowledge, within the last hour, and by the merest accident, that you disembarked a message in Queenstown from Tarpeian, after leaving Liverpool, in the name of Mr. Mallevorer's clerk. I am very sorry to tell you that you may possibly regard as a liberty; but I have to ask you if you will kindly inform me concerning the nature of that message and the person to whom it was addressed."

I glanced up and looked around in some surprise at the speaker. Fenton's eyes were bent upon me in a gaze which, to my thin head, was singularly grave and almost stern, while Fordyke, impatiently biting his finger nails, seemed bursting with anxiety to hear my answer. I did not look at Fenton; but I knew well enough the spirit of which he was possessed.

For a moment I hesitated, and thought of declining to reply to the question. But I felt that I had no right, after the way in which I had been treated by Branksome, to deal with him otherwise than frankly.

"I telegraphed, Dr. Branksome, to Miss Stancliffe. It was a simple message of sympathy and one of intimation that I hoped to see her before long."

Fordyke continued to gnaw his finger nails restlessly. Dr. Branksome's face did not change by a single hair's breadth.

"And that was the only message you sent?" he said, gravely.

"Sir, sir, it was not the only message," I answered, annoyed and embarrassed, yet feeling that my best plan was to tell everything. "I sent another message to the chief man-table at Bruton to tell him that I suspected that Mr. Mallevorer had been poisoned."

CHAPTER XI.

I MEET DARBY ONCE MORE.

There was a hoarse cry of anger—a growl such as might have been from the throat of a wild beast—and almost instantaneously I found myself borne down to the floor, where I lay with Fenton's hands gripping my throat and his knees firmly planted on my body. I had hardly realized my position, however, when I saw Branksome throw himself upon the ruffian. Fordyke also came to my assistance, and after a short, sharp struggle I was released from a grasp which, if it had been continued much longer, might have put a premature end to my adventures.

Branksome's indignation against Fenton was great; but it was not to be compared with that which Fenton evidently entertained against me. For the moment he seemed altogether to have lost his self-control, and I verily believe that if Branksome and Fordyke had not been on the alert, he would there and then have murdered me before their eyes.

"Curse you! curse you!" he cried, shaking "Curse you! Curse you!" he cried.

his clenched fist at me, while passion of the most frightful character blazed from his evil eyes. "May I be hung-drawn-if I don't pay you for this!"

There is no need to indicate upon my readers the horrible imprecations he launched against me, or the foul epithets he applied to me. For some minutes Branksome and Fordyke continued to remonstrate with him unavailingly. At last, however, he lapsed into a state of sullen calm, though his bloodshot eyes, his swollen veins, and the spumy froth that gathered at the angles of his mouth showed that he was still under the influence of the frenzied excitement which had led him to attack me.

So soon as Branksome was able to leave Fordyke in sole charge of the ruffian he turned upon me, and in language, the sternness of which astonished me, he said:

"You see the effect your statement has had upon this man. Probably you see in it some confirmation of the extraordinary suspicions you appear to entertain regarding him. I know not, and I care not whether it is so; but this I must tell you, Mr. Fenton, that to your dying day you will regard with horror and remorse the act to which you have just confessed."

"What do you mean by such a statement? Surely I had a right——"

"Enough, enough, sir!" he cried in a voice which I hardly recognized as his. "Excuse my inability up to this to you in conventional terms of form. But I cannot kindly words with you at present. God in His mercy grant that nothing may yet happen to avert the evil which I, by just the certain that you have done by your inadmissible conduct."

He ceased hastily and, but in vain. Feeling more like a culprit than I had ever done in my life before, I left the cabin and went to my own state room. I am not a coward, but I confess that I passed an uneasy night, knowing that Fletcher was on board the yacht. At every moment I expected to hear his footsteps in the inside of my earth, and to feel his hand upon my throat.

Neither Branksome nor Fordyke had much to say to me next day. Fordyke's nervousness was unfortunate, and when I spoke to him he answered in monosyllables. Branksome was grave and preoccupied. His manner to me was courteous, but decidedly cold. When afternoon fell we were running up the Humber, over which a dark November fog hung, adding to one's depression of spirits. In another hour I knew that I should be free from the yacht. I could not bear the thought of parting on embroidly terms from Branksome, of best taken completely under the sway of the stern character, and had recognized that fascination to which Darby and all others who knew him well had succumbed before me. It was almost humbly that I approached him now, and asked him to pardon me if I had been guilty of any indiscretion in sending the telegrams from Trondheim.

He looked at me for a moment with that searching, fearless gaze which was characteristic of the man. Then he spoke:

"It is I who ought to ask you to pardon me, Mr. Fenton. I undoubtedly was guilty of a breach of good manners in speaking to you as I did last night. But I was agitated to an extent of which you can know nothing. You ask me whether you were guilty [illegible]

Wiggins' Earthquake and the World's End.

According to the southern negro doctress, now deceased, the world will come to an end to-morrow, while Prof. Wiggins prophesies an earthquake that will disturb the earth's crust from ocean to ocean and from Central America to Canada. Greater trouble is threatened nearer home. The millinery fall openings commence to-morrow.

The Brown Monument.

The beautiful drinking fountain standing in Central Park, erected as a memorial to Capt. Edward T. Brown, who was killed in the Northwest rebellion, is nearly completed, only a few details remaining to receive attention. It is proposed that Sir Frederick Middleton perform the unveiling ceremonies, but it is not definitely known what the date will be. Sir Frederick will probably be in town within the month to inspect the 57th Battalion, and it is proposed that advantage should be taken of his presence on that occasion to hold the unveiling ceremonies.

A Millinery Festival.

Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 29th and 30th and Friday Oct. 1st will be days of high festival at the Golden Lion. These are the days of the Grand Fall Millinery Opening, when the millinery rooms will be thrown open to the public to view the magnificent stock of fall millinery, as beautiful in design and material as perfuse in variety. At the same time a splendid lot of imported mantles, dolmans, dolmanettes, etc., will be on display. This will, in all probability, be the last match of the season, and those who wish to see a lively game should accompany the club to Madoc.

P. A. A. A. Fall Sports.

An Afternoon on the Pad—Keen Competition, Windy Breeze, and Fine Sport.

The fall meet of the Peterborough Athletic Association, which has been agitating local sports for some time past, was held on the Association grounds, Ashburnham, on Monday afternoon. The meet was most successful in point of sport, the only drawback being that the public did not patronize it liberally, giving the Association that encouragement which it should receive.

About three o'clock the Fire Brigade band marched to the grounds, where about two hundred spectators had assembled, amongst whom were a number of ladies. The Collegiate Institute having a half holiday, it was well represented.

The local Amateur Athletes, the majority of whom are members of the Association, appeared on the grounds in force, while J. C. Whyte of Ottawa, and A. Strickland, of Lakefield, represented the foreign talent.

THE PROGRAMME OF EVENTS, was carried out in a most satisfactory manner, the Association members distinguishing themselves in several of the open as well as Association events.

The following is the list of sports with the names of the successful competitors.

HIGH JUMP—1st A. Rose, 4 feet 7 inches. 5 entries. Prize a Smokers Set.

100 YARDS DASH, (OPEN),—In this event there were 8 entries. A good start was made and a splendid race ran. J. C. Whyte of Ottawa taking 1st, with Archie Moore, a good second. Prize a handsome Silver Medal.

MILE BICYCLE RACE—H. A. Dean of Belleville, won with ease in 3, minutes and 35 seconds. Five entries. Prize Silver Medal

ASSOCIATION QUARTER MILE (to be won twice)—In this race there were six entries, three starting. J. Morris won after an exciting race, Archie Moore being a strong second. Time, 60¾ seconds.

MILE RACE, open—1st A. Rose, with A. Strickland 2nd; 5 entries. Time, 5 minutes, 8 seconds.

ASSOCIATION 100 YARDS—In this race there were 5 entries, with three starters. After several attempts at a start, the pistol was fired, Gus Moore leaving the scratch slightly in advance of the report, and securing a lead of 5 yards over his opponents, won the race. After some discussion as to the start, it was decided to re-run the race.

HURDLE RACE, open—1st J. C. Whyte, Ottawa, closely followed by G. Squair; 8 entries. Time, 17 seconds. Prize, a silver medal.

QUARTER MILE, open—Won by A. Rose in the quick time of 58½ seconds; 7 entries. Prize, silver medal.

BOYS RACE, 120 YARDS, HANDICAP—This was one of the most exciting races of the day, and was won by A. Miller, from the scratch. W. Kingsmill, a much smaller boy, who had 12 yards start ran a game race and led till within a few yards of the finish. Four entries.

ASSOCIATION 100 YARDS, (re-run)—A good start was made, all getting away in a bunch. Gus Moore went to the front and led till within 15yards of the finish, where he was overhauled by his namesake Archie, Moore, who won the race and medal. Time 11 sec.

ASSOCIATION MILE RACE (to be won twice, and won once by W. Orde)—W. Orde, C. A. Lawford, and A. Moore started. The race was practically between the first two mentioned, who passed and repassed each other a dozen times. On the last lap Orde led. Lawford sprinted on the home stretch, but Orde was equal to the occasion and responded in good form, winning the race in 5 min., 33¼ sec.

FIVE MILE BICYCLE RACE, open—H. A. Deane also won this race as he pleased, in the good time of 18 minutes and 58 seconds; 7 entries. Prize, a handsome gold medal.

At the conclusion of the sports the successful athletes were called to the grand stand, where Mrs. Dr. Burnham, in a few appropriate words, presented them with their prizes. The Fire Brigade band, which provided excellent music throughout the afternoon, played the National Anthem, and the meet was over.

The officers of the Association are to be congratulated on the manner in which they conducted the sports, and it is greatly to be regretted that the public do not take more interest in the Association, which has for its object the elevation and sustaining of all manly sports, and in a way that financial success would be insured. The officers were: Referee, Judge Weller; Judges, Hon. R. Hamilton, Dr. Tassie, and Dr. Boucher, President of the Association; Starter, J. H. Long; Time-keeper, R. W. Muncaster; Clerk of the course, Mr. T. E. Bell.

Challenge Cup.

In the window of Mr. H. LeBrun's shop a handsome silver cup is exhibited, given by Mr. J. Trebell for competition between the Ætna Lacrosse Club and the Millbrook juniors. It is probable the match will take place at Millbrook next Saturday.

Miss Mahoney, Turnbull's new Milliner will be pleased to have a visit of inspection from everybody interested in Millinery on September 29th and 30th.

The Newest and Best.

For the best tea Morrow & Tierney cannot be beaten. They have just received a largestock of new season teas, in which they are offering special inducements. Camping parties' supplies and fancy groceries a specialty.

Choice Business Cards.

Business men who wish to advertise their business at the fall exhibitions will find it to their interest to call at the EXAMINER office, where a large and varied stock of attractive business cards, specially adapted to such advertising, will be found, to select from.

To the Ladies.

Miss K. Delaney's grand fall millinery and mantle opening will take place on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 29th, 30th and Oct. 1st. The latest designs in bonnets, hats and mantles will be displayed, likewise a beautiful assortment of feather trimmings, plushes, mantle cloths, dress goods, etc. All are cordially invited. No circulars. 7d72-1w

A mite meeting in connection with the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, (St. Paul's Church) will be held on Thursday evening next, the 30th inst., at the residence of Mrs. Alex. Smith, Aylmer street, at 7.30 o'clock. Those wishing to help fill the box for India will have an opportunity of buying from a selection of small articles to be disposed of suitable for the purpose.

Police Court.

Two Scott Act Cases Before the Court.

John Kerr, charged with a violation of the Scott Act, was arraigned before Police Magistrate Dumble at the police court this morning.

Mr. O'Meara appeared for the defendant and pleaded guilty.

A case of liquor, found on the premises by Chief Cooper, P. C. Adams and Inspector Cochrane, and confiscated, was shown in the court room.

A fine of $50 and costs was imposed.

William Powers, charged with a similar offence, was also brought before the court. He pleaded not guilty.

Chief Cooper and P. C. Adams testified that on Monday they, in company with Inspector Cochrane, searched the premises of the defendant, where they found a jug of whiskey.

Mr. Powers was called in rebuttal and stated that he purchased the liquor for his own use. He refused to state whether he sold any liquor or not.

The magistrate found him guilty and imposed the usual fine of $50 and costs.

Personal.

Mr. Barr, recently foreman of the Lindsay Warder, passed through town to-day on his way to Smith's Falls, where he has a half interest in a newspaper at that place.

Mr. H. H. Burnham, of Port Hope, is in town to-day.

Attention!

We would call attention to the offer made by Joseph Griffin that during the next thirty days he will sell the whole of his summer stock of boots and shoes at cost. A few lines will actually be sold below cost. Look at the following quotations:—

Women's Pebble Oxford Shoes	70c.
" buff do do	80
" pebble—tie or buttoned	90
" India kid shoe	$1.00
" patent Oxford	1.20
" polished calf tie shoe	1.25
" do do Oxford	1.25
" do do buttoned	1.35

All the above goods are solid leather. All other goods will be sold equally cheap. Now is the time to secure bargains.

Turnbull actually startles the Customers at his Dress Goods Counters with the extensive variety of Goods, Styles, and Low Prices; while Dress Making under the management of Miss Morgan has become an Art which few can copy, but none excel. Inspection Invited.

"Backward, turn backward, O Time in your flight,
Make me a child again, just for to-night;"

is the exclamation, in thought, of many a man who has suffered through a long life, from some distressing disease, that he might have cured with a few bottles of medicine like Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," which cures all blood and skin diseases, as well as consumption or scrofula of the lungs. If he were "a child again," he would know enough to have a bottle of the Discovery "to-night," and in old age would not implore Father Time to "fly backward" for his special benefit. Hence, "Be wise to-day, 'tis madness to defer." Get a bottle of the nearest druggist. d&w39

The Daily Examiner.
WEDNESDAY SEPTEMBER 29, 1886.

SPREADING RAPIDLY,

THE DISEASE WITH WHICH CHICAGO CATTLE ARE INFLICTED.

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—The State Veterinarian yesterday killed two glandered horses in this city. The opinion among veterinarians and distillers becomes stronger daily that the disease now affecting some of the quarantined cattle has been prevailing to a greater or less degree for two years. The distillers say that the cattlemen have attributed the diseased condition of the lungs to the hot slops on which the cattle are fed.

Dr. Salmon said it was doubtful whether the disease would be prevented from spreading even if all the cattle in quarantine were killed, as the evidence so far obtained tended to show that a number of the animals examined by the state veterinarian had caught the disease before being taken to the cattle sheds. One reason that it has not been discovered before was that the State Veterinarian was not paid for ferreting out disease, and is merely allowed so much per diem for doing his work when a contagion has broken out.

The members of the commission and the State Veterinarian have been summoned to Pekin, to appear as witnesses in a civil suit brought against the state. Several weeks ago the officials killed a number of horses afflicted with glanders, and the owner brought suit to recover damages.

Pleuro-pneumonia has broken out on a herd of cattle belonging to W. J. Etherington, 25 miles north of Mandan, Dak. Ten have died and forty are affected. It is said a car-load of cattle was received there from this city two weeks ago.

The Contagion in Pennsylvania.

READING, Pa., Sept. 28.—Pleuro-pneumonia is raging with unprecedented violence among cattle in Limerick Township, Montgomery County, as well as in some neighboring districts. Many have died. Farmers find that the only remedy is to kill the cattle.

POOR VIRGINIA A VICTIM.

These Horrid Correspondents Fabricated the Earthquake Prediction.

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.—Wiggins to-day issued an address to the people of the United States, in which he says: The prediction published in the New York press, and asserted to be mine, that a great earthquake will devastate New Orleans, Galveston, and other southern cities along and south of the 30th parallel on Wednesday, the 29th inst., is a falsehood. It was originated here by their correspondents. Two years ago I foresaw that a great storm would occur in the north and south Atlantic from September 29 to October 1, 1886, and that an earthquake period would occur in America from Aug. 25 to Oct. 15, the greatest strain being on Sept. 29, south of the 30th parallel of north latitude, and so made my report to the Canadian Government. This is the sum and substance of my prediction.

Charleston Terror-Stricken.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 28.—Slight earthquake shocks were felt here at 2 and 4 o'clock this morning, and at 2 minutes past 1 o'clock this afternoon there was a sharp shock accompanied by the usual rumbling noise. The shock was violent enough to shake buildings and caused many people to rush out into the streets. The continuation of shocks on the eve of Wiggins' predicted earthquake has a demoralizing effect upon the people here, and many will sleep in the open air to-night. The shock this afternoon lasted 6 or 8 seconds, but it seems to have been felt only in Charleston.

Denounced From the Pulpit.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Sept. 28—All around Augusta the negroes are making great preparations for Wiggins' earthquake on the 29th. The slight shocks yesterday caused them to redouble their efforts to prepare for the last day. One lady here, of high social standing, has been nervously prostrated and is raving incessantly about the end of the world. Wiggins was denounced from the pulpit here on Sunday.

The Scare in New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 28.—The newspapers have ridiculed Wiggins so thoroughly that they have removed nearly all the scare caused here by his prediction of an earthquake on the 29th. Despite this, however, there are a number of persons looking forward with dread to Wednesday. Two ladies, principals of a private school here, closed their establishment last week, and left for Tennessee in anticipation of an earthquake. An aeronaut will have a balloon ascension from this city on the 29th, and offers places in this balloon to those who fear the earthquake at $10 a head

The Attitude of the Powers.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 28.—It is semi-officially announced that no international complications over the Bulgarian question are imminent, that the Cabinets controlling the question are decidedly in favor of preserving peace, that Russia recognizes the difficulty the Bulgarians must encounter in effecting a successful Prince Alexander, and that, pending this election, Russia will occupy her time in carefully watching England's action in Constantinople.

Royal Arch Masons at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—The business of the present session of the Royal Arch will be of a routine character. An overture will be made to have Royal Arch Masons of the Province of Quebec, Canada, represented in the General Grand Chapter. John P. Noyes of Waterloo, Quebec, the Grand Z of the Province of Quebec, is here to make the overture. A reception will be given the members of the General Grand Chapter by the president tomorrow afternoon.

The Canadian Mail.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 28.—The Government has called for tenders for the transport of mails weekly from Canada to England by first-class steamers for a term of five years from April 1, 1887. It is understood that the Allan and Dominion lines are the leading tenderers. Andrew Allan, the head of the former line, was in town yesterday on business connected with the contract. Tenders close on the 6th prox.

Hamilton's Great Central Fair.

HAMILTON, Sept. 28.—The great Central Fair is now in full swing. In numbers of entries and attendance it is fully equal to former years. Where the show excels, however, is in live stock. To-morrow will be Citizens' Day, when a big crowd is expected to be present, especially as the horse races will commence.

Bloods on the War Path.

CROW CREEK AGENCY, Sept. 28.—There are 500 Blood Indians now on the war path raiding everything on this side of the line in revenge for the killing of six of their number by the Gros Ventres. They have been in the Judith Basin recently; in fact, they are all over the country. Stealing horses seems to be their principal pastime.

DECLARATION OF WAR

MR. PARNELL WRITES A SENSATIONAL LETTER.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—Following is a copy of a letter addressed by Mr. Parnell to Mr. Fitzgerald, President of the Irish National Land League in America, which was made public to-day, and created quite a sensation:

The rejection of the Tenants' Relief bill, the scarcely veiled threats of the Irish Secretary and the alarming increase in the number of evictions, clearly indicate the commencement of a combined movement of extermination against the tenant farmers of Ireland by the English Government and the Irish landlords. I lose no time in advising you of the imminence of a crisis and of a peril which have seldom been equalled even in the troubled history of Ireland. I know that it will be the highest duty and the most honorable task which can engage the attention of my countrymen in free America to do what in them lies to frustrate the attempt of those who would assassinate our nation, and to alleviate the sufferings of those who unhappily must be the numerous victims of the social war which has been preached by the rich and powerful Government of England against our people.

In sending us that moral and material assistance which has never been wanting, has never been stinted from your side of the Atlantic, you will perform two most important and valuable functions; you will encourage the weak to resist and bear oppression, and you will also lessen and alleviate those feelings of despair in the minds of the evicted which have so often and so unhappily stimulated those victims to recourse to the wild spirit of revenge. In doing so you will assist in preserving for our movement that peaceable character which has enabled it to win its most recent and almost crowning triumph, while you will strengthen it to bear oppression and encourage our people until the final goal of legislative independence has been won.

'Tis a Declaration of War.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The Standard says Mr. Parnell has declared war in a characteristic style. The most charitable view that can be taken of the Fitzgerald letter is that it is not a Parnell composition. How he was betrayed into putting his name to such an outburst is a mystery. The appetite of his American paymasters must be coarse indeed if it needs seasoning of this fiery kind. It is so ludicrous in its extravagance and mendacity that nobody endowed with ordinary reason will give it a second thought. Though it may answer its purpose, Mr. Parnell will pay dearly for it in English opinion. "We foresee the time," the Standard says, "when it may be convenient to ignore the document altogether."

Anything but Eviction.

DUBLIN, Sept. 20.—At the fortnightly meeting of the Irish National League to-day John Dillon said peace in Ireland now depended on the action of the landlords. Two thousand families were now under notice of eviction. The winter was coming and it was already imperative that the Irish people should combine and help one another to resist within the law the attempted tyranny of the landlords. Final victory was certain if this resistance was maintained. Mr. Dillon said the tenants would accept the Ashbourne Act as a sop, but would resist coercion. Joseph E. Kenny, M. P. for Cork, said the tenants would fight with their backs to the wall against threatened evictions.

A PARSON ON TRIAL.

Grave Charges Against a Presbyterian Minister.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The Brooklyn Presbytery met in the Franklin-avenue Presbyterian Church yesterday afternoon and proceeded with the trial of the Rev. Benj. Staunton, pastor of the Fort Greene Presbyterian Church, who is charged with conduct unbecoming a minister of the gospel, inasmuch that he had one occasion assaulted his wife, causing her to cry out "Murder!" and had kept a woman in his house against the wishes and in spite of the protest of his wife, who was made jealous on account of such action, and led to believe that he was not faithful to her as a husband. These charges were presented in two specifications. There was a large attendance outside the pastors who represented the presbytery. The Rev. Dr. T. Dewitt Talmage presided as moderator. Rev. Mr. Staunton occupied a front seat beside his counsel. After some discussion touching the method of procedure, the defendant stood up and in a voice choked with emotion, pleaded "Not guilty!" Evidence was taken tending to substantiate the charges.

The Greatest in Canada.

What is probably the greatest water well in Western Ontario was struck last Friday evening on the farm of John McIlwain, third concession of Plympton. R. Bullock & Son were there boring for water, and when a depth of eighty feet was reached a loud rumbling noise was heard in the hole. In an instant the whole top of the earth seemed to be upheaved, and auger, stones, sand and water were flying in the air thirty feet high. The force of the flow of water was so great that in a few minutes the hole was enlarged at the top to about twelve feet in diameter, but how far down the enlargement continued cannot be ascertained. The well is still flowing over at an enormous rate, and a small river has been formed by its overflow. All efforts to plug the hole have failed, logs etc., which were put into it being thrown to the top like chips.

A patent for a contrivance to prevent injury to the hands of catchers who play the national game will be introduced to the ball playing public next season. It can be dropped instantly when there is a prospect that the catcher will have to touch a man trying to run home. Experienced ball players who have tried the device like it so well that they say it must receive general use, even if the present rules of the game have to be amended to permit [illegible].

A Reply to Mr. Burnham.

We have been requested to publish the following letter, a copy of which was also sent to the Review for insertion :—

To the Editor of The Review :

DEAR SIR,—I observe in your issue of yesterday a letter over the signature of John Burnham, Esq., M.P., commenting on the meeting of the Loyalist Delegates and my actions as presiding officer. As there appears to be a slight misapprehension in the minds of the public as to what parties were most prominent in bringing the delegates to this province, I might say that they came to Canada under the auspices of the Loyal Orange Association, that they were met at Quebec by the Grand Master of this Association, that all appointments and arrangements were made by a committee of grand officers of the Association, and I, as County Master, was requested by the committee to make arrangements for their reception at Peterborough. In pursuance of, my duty I called together a meeting of the Orangemen of the county, who undertook to receive the Loyalist Delegates under the patronage of the County Loyal Orange Lodges. The latter party instructed me, among other things, to invite Mr. James Stevenson, Mayor of the town, to act as chairman, as it was thought that his presiding would be a civic act of courtesy to the distinguished visitors ; they also instructed me to invite the members of Parliament, all clergymen, town councillors, and members of the press to take seats upon the platform, and among these Mr. Burnham was invited. The fact that any meeting happens to be under the auspices of the Orangemen, is no reason why their Catholic friends should not attend, and it is no reason why they should necessarily be insulted, as Mr. Burnham would insinuate. The fact that a Canadian is an Orangeman is no reason, that he is more illiberal or more bigoted than any other Protestant, and is no reason why he should not view Irish affairs with as charitable, humane and intelligent a mind as any other man. Because a man is an Orangeman he is not necessarily an anti-Home Ruler, as all persons are denominated who are opposed to any legislation looking towards the advancement and amelioration of the condition of the Irish people. I venture to say to-day that there is not an Orangeman in this county, who would not hail with pleasure any legislation which would tend to elevate and improve the great mass of Irish tenants. When Mr. Burnham asserts that I so packed the meeting as to exclude Catholics, he is writing what is false and entirely uncalled for, for many Roman Catholics were present. It was never intended that the meeting should be a religious party one, from which all parties, whose religious views were opposed to those of the original promoters of the meeting, should be excluded, but, on the contrary, it was the especial desire of the committee here that all parties, irrespective of creed or politics, should have the most free option of attending. Mr. Burnham need not feel that his acceptance of the invitation to take a seat on the platform would have bound or nailed him to all the opinions of the speakers, but, on the other hand, would rather furnish evidence that he has liberality enough to listen to both sides of any question, and courage and stamina enough not to be frightened at the mere possibility of a misconstruction of his actions. It seems very strange that Mr. Burnham should have experienced so sudden a conversion on the Home Rule movement. Only last winter in the House of Commons he voted for the emasculation of Mr. Blake's resolution on Home Rule. As an acrobatic attempt to ride both the Protestants and Catholic horse, he must claim all the honors that are going. He might even give the Chieftain a few points in that line.

As an Orangeman, I have always been consistent and no man can point to any action on my part, which would show even an inclination to diverge from the principles of this Order. If Mr. Burnham's principles wheth er political or otherwise, were as solid and mature as my Orange principles he would not be vacillating and shuffling on the question of attending a meeting, which, by chance has received the patronage of this order. No man can accuse me of making party capital by referring to Mr. Carnegie's manliness in taking a seat on the platform, although his views may not be in sympathy with the Delegates. It is well known that Mr. Carnegie and myself have not been on friendly terms for years, but that would not prevent me from doing my duty and giving him credit for his courage, especially when I had such an opportunity of contrasting it with Mr. Burnham's cowardice. After a little liniment in the shape of advice from his friends during the past four days, Mr. Burnham's backbone shows some signs of stiffening and I hope they will continue the treatment until he is able to sit alone and then he can amuse himself by pointing out what was wrong in the resolution to which he now objects, but for which he voted.

Yours, truly,
J. B. McWILLIAMS.

Much Ado About Nothing.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The English gentlemen cricketers followed up their unbroken record of victories by winning another game to-day in the match against All New York. The Americans in their second effort were only able to make 11 runs. This left the Englishmen 119 to make to win. This was easily accomplished with the loss of only one wicket.

Why Did He Abdicate?

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—The North German Gazette, in an article to-day decrying that the great powers ousted Prince Alexander, maintains that even Russia placed no difficulty in the way of Alexander's remaining at Sofia. It says the Czar's personal aversion for Alexander is no new thing. For the past five or six years the Prince believed himself able to bear Russia's wrath without prejudice to the interests of Bulgaria. Therefore it behooves the newspapers which are favorable to Alexander to explain the real motives of his abdication. If the newspapers fail to offer an explanation, the German and Austrian parliaments must do so."
